Retention of Whisky Tax Disappoints Redmondites.

London, July 2.—Chancellor Lloyd-George, in submitting the budget to Parliament, said that he felt justified in estimating the stated revenues on the assumption that the volume of trade this year and next would be greater than the country had ever experienced before. He proposed to retain the duty on spirits unchanged, and while admitting that there had been a loss of $7,000,000 in these duties, said that the consumption of spirits had been decreased by 10,000,000 gallons from the figures of the preceding year and that the moral gain to the state far outweighed the loss in revenue.

Mr. Aasquith, the Premier, refused to make a statement in the House of Commons regarding the prospects of the conference between the Government and the Opposition over the legislation involving the veto power of the House of Lords.

The Chancellor having retained all the features of the previous budget in the current budget, the Unionists will oppose every stage of its progress. The Redmondites are disappointed at the retention of the whisky tax, but it is not likely that they will seriously object to the budget while the fate of the veto power of the House of Lords still is in the balance.

The remainder of the Parliamentary session will probably be quite uneventful. It will be devoted to routine matters, all the serious and contentious stages of the budget and other important measures being postponed until the autumn session. In the improbable event that the conference of the representatives of the Government and the Opposition on the veto question will arrive at an agreement, the proposals will be submitted to Parliament in November. Should the conference fail to agree, the struggle between the rival Houses will be revived in the autumn to an intensified degree.

Told to Disregard Tax.

Washington, July 2.—The question as to whether Hudson Bay is a mere clausean or closed sea completely controlled by Canada as is contended by the Dominion Government, according to Ottawa despatches, may be vitally affected by the decision of The Hague tribunal upon the large issues which are now being argued before it by eminent British and American counsel.

While the question came up in a rather incidental way, through the assertion by the Canadians of their right to impose a small tax upon American vessels entering Hudson Bay, the payment of that tax might constitute a recognition of the Canadian title. In view of the possible construction of a new Canadian road to Hudson Bay, giving a much shorter route to European wheat shipments from the far west, the matter, it is said, is one which cannot be overlooked by far-sighted American statesmen.

Last year, for the first time, the [illegible] of the State Department was [illegible] the subject, and Ameri[illegible]ins were advised [illegible] the tax and [illegible]e is no re[illegible]ction this [illegible] the Massa[illegible]ply acting [illegible]iginal de-

THE STAND

The victim of the assault, Mrs. Lena Kassina, 55 years old, on returning to her home in West 155th street from a shopping trip, noticed that her door had been jimmied. Inside she found two men ransacking her apartment. One of them jumped for her and struck her with a blackjack. She was found with one of her earrings torn from her ear and with a serious cut on the head. The man arrested gave him name as Barney Parker, and he was charged with attempted burglary. No one saw which way the second man fled.

Margaret Anglin as "Antigone."

San Francisco, July 2.—Before an audience of 8,000 persons gathered in the Hearst Greek Theatre, on the campus of the University of California, Margaret Anglin and her company appeared last night in a magnificent production of Sophocles' "Antigone." In artistry and in interest, beauty and illusion, the performance surpassed all expectations on the part of the public, while Miss Anglin's wonderful playing of the part of Antigone is declared by those who have followed her to be the finest work of her career.

Blow With Fist Kills.

Fight in a Port Credit Factory Ends Fatally.

Michael Maw is Dead and George Baker, a Young Immigrant, is Charged With Killing Him—Men Worked in Starch Works and as a Result of an Insult From Baker Maw Threw a Hammer at Him.

Port Credit, July 2.—Another killing was yesterday added to the alarmingly large number which have taken place in Ontario within the last year or so. As a result Michael Maw of this village lies dead here and George Barker, accused of doing the deed, is locked up in Brampton jail, where he was lodged by Chief Constable Rutledge.

The fatality is said to have been the termination of a row which occurred at the works of the St. Lawrence Starch Co., in which both the participants were employed. Stained relations had evidently existed between the men previously to the outbreak of an open appeal to force. Barker, it is said, while passing Maw used an expression which caused the latter to lose his temper and throw a hammer at him. Barker promptly retaliated by knocking Maw down.

The man then started in to fight in deadly earnest. A second blow from Barker's fist again felled Maw to the floor. This time he did not rise to resume the contest. He was dead.

Barker was promptly arrested and taken to the county jail at Brampton. He is a young English immigrant, having only been eight or ten weeks in Canada. He is 21 years of age and of a stout and muscular build.

Coroner Dr. Sutton decided to hold an inquest on Maw, and this will take place at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. Crown Attorney McFadden of Brampton will attend to watch developments.

Scots Will Revisit Auld Land.

Detroit, July 2.—There will be an international meeting of prominent Scotchmen at the Hotel Cadillac on Tuesday evening, July 5, to arrange for a trip to Bonnie Scotland, to include Scots from all parts of the United States and Canada. The international committee having the matter in charge expects to book 2,000 on a specially chartered steamer to go from New York or Montreal.

The trip is regarded as the greatest event in the annals of Scottish doings in America. A reception committee is already appointed by the lord provosts of Glasgow and Inverness to give the home-goers a royal Highland welcome. The tour will include Edinburgh, and all points of interest in Scotland. A feature of the trip will be a visit to Skibo Castle, by special invitation from Andrew Carnegie.

Among those coming to the meeting here next week are: Col. B. M. Robertson, Toronto; E. L. Sutherland, Zorra, Ont.; Dr. W. C. Gilchrist, Orilla; R. D. McDonald, London, Ont.; Judge D. F. MacWatt, Sarnia; Hon. A. G. McKay, Owen Sound; J. A. Ross, St. Thomas; Donald Guthrie, Ingersoll; James Fourbes, Woodstock; Senator ~~Sir~~ George W. Ross, Toronto.

Chauffeur Still Unconscious.

Hamilton, July 2.—The condition of Keith McCrae, the chauffeur of the Hobson car, which toppled over the side of the Strongman road Thursday evening, precludes the possibility of a correct solution of the accident being obtained from him. It is thought, however, that the steering gear of the car was faulty. McCrae suffered a slight concussion of the brain and up to last night had no idea of the fatality which attended the accident. He does not even remember who he had in the car with him. Miss Hobson's condition still give her physicians cause for the gravest alarm, though it is thought that she will get better. The remains of the nurse, Miss Perkins, who was killed, were taken to Lindsay yesterday evening for interment there this afternoon, after a service conducted by Rev. Canon Abbott and Rev. E. J. Etherington, at the residence of W. A. Wood, 265 South James street.

Came Down With Plunge.

Montreal, July 2.—Many thousands went out to Lakeside yesterday, and the public greatly appreciated the several features of the meet. There were nine different flights, and the interest was kept up till dark. Walter Brooken, who has become a prime favorite, went up 3,130 feet and established a record for the time being, 45 minutes and 21 seconds in the air. Count de Lesseps made a few flights, but his Bleriot machine did not work well.

Ralph Johnston's engine failed him after he had gone up a few hundred feet, and the biplane came down with a plunge, the tail being badly smashed.

Head Crushed by Brick.

Port Dover, July 2.—In endeavering to protect a weak man from a cruel beating, one of the cruiser Vigilant sailors was set on here yesterday by the former's assailants and his skull caved in by a brick thrown by a man alleged to be Roy Becker of Simcoe, who has just been captured by parties who drove out into Simcoe. The injured sailor was carried to the hospital by shipmates: Dr. E. S. Hicks will perform the operation of trephining in an endeavor to save his life. Chances are favorable, as the victim has not lost consciousness.

Sympathized With Her.

London, July 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Mrs. Woolmear, the wife of a Toronto laborer, whom the immigration regulations did not permit to join her husband in consequence of his being an [illegible] sailed on the Empress of Ireland by public subscription. Sympathizers decorated her cabin in flowers.

Aviator Curtiss Drops Bombs.

Hammondsport, N.Y., July 2.—Glenn H. Curtiss, in the mimic war tests of the aeroplane which he is making over the waters of Lake Keuka, in the presence of officers representing the navy and army, hit the battleship target beneath him in 15 of his 22 efforts, the remaining seven shots missing the target by distances ranging from 30 to 50 feet, with one exception. The aviator achieved these results while flying at a fast rate of speed at altitudes ranging from 139 feet to 900 feet, the greater number of shots being attempted from heights of about [illegible] feet.

The weather conditions left nothing to be desired. The chief problem which this second day's test was intended to solve was whether an aeroplane in its rapid flight through the air is capable of hurling a projectile at a battleship with sufficient acuracy to hit a target within a given number of rounds. Curtiss was first allowed four trial shots at a target, which represents the deck of a battleship lying on the waters of Lake Keuka and measuring 500 feet in length by 90 feet in width. Two of the trial shots hit the target and two fell within 30 feet of it. Then, in 14 flights at various elevations in the morning, 14 missiles were dropped at the simulated Dreadnought. Of these ten hit the target, the other four falling within 50 feet of it. In the evening Curtiss made four more attempts to hit the target. Three were successful, one from a height of 900 feet.

Students Use Revolvers.

Lemberg, Austria-Hungary, July 1.—The two groups of Ruthenian and Polish students of the University of Lemberg got at each other yesterday, and, before the police had separated the combatants, many of the students had been seriously injured.

The feud, borne of racial jealousy, is as old as the university itself, and periodical clashes have occurred. For some time the bitter feeling has been held in bounds by the university authorities, but it broke with pronounced fury and led to a fierce battle for the possession of the campus.

Hundreds of students were involved. Many of them had revolvers and these were used. When the firing began, a strong force of policemen was summoned, and the fight became a three cornered affair. The officers finally succeeded in driving the students to cover. Broken heads were the rule, but in numerous instances injuries of a grave nature were found to have been inflicted.

PEOPLE AND CAPITAL

They Are Canada's Great Needs Says Hon. Mr. Fielding.

In Speech at Dominion Day Banquet In London He Defends the Immigration Laws and Says That Annexation Is the Last Thing In the Minds of Canadian Politicians—Finance a Domestic Affair.

London, July 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Dominion Day dinner held at the Hotel Cecil maintained the high standard of previous years, namely that of being the most successful dinner in London. Lord Strathcona presided for the fifteenth time. Among those present were Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. William Fisher, Hon. William Paterson, Sir William Mulock, Earl Crewe, Lords Balfour of Burleigh, Blyth-Shaw of Dunfermline, and Wenlock, G. H. Reid of Australia, W. Hall Jones of New Zealand, Richard Solomon of South Africa, the Bishops of Ripon and St. Albans, Judge Channell and A. W. Smithers.

Lord Strathcona and Justice Mulock proposed the royal toasts. The president who received an ovation, in giving the toast "Canada," welcomed the distinguished visitors and regretted the unavoidable absence of Earl Grey. The Dominion's progress, prosperity and wealth were his inspiring theme. In an eloquent speech, he made reference to the reported gold discovery in British Columbia, and counselled caution till more reliable information could be obtained. In response the Hon. Mr. Fielding, in a fluent and vigorous address, referred to the growing importance of this annual gathering and proceeded to emphasize Canada's two needs, which were capital and population.

Canadians, he said, rejoiced to see the tide of British investment in the Dominion greater than ever. It would bring satisfactory returns. As regards population the Finance Minister entered a strong defence of the purpose of the immigration laws. The interview of Sir A. Douglas was his next subject of reference. Mr. Fielding emphatically controverted each of the three points alleged to have been made by Douglas. The statement that annexation was at the bottom of the hearts of Ministers of the Dominion he characterized as amazing. There never was a moment in the history of Canada when there were less thoughts of annexation to the United States than at present. (Cheers.) Canada, north, south, east and west was and meant to be thoroughly British. Mr. Fielding next endeavored to remove some of the misconception which he found existed here regarding Canada's commercial arrangements. The impression was widespread here that in making these arrangements Canada had some way interfered with her liberty to deal with the Motherland as she might desire in the future.

He wished to correct that view, Canada had fought for freedom in this direction and won. She was not going to interfere in any degree with the principle she had maintained in everyone of the treaties. There was a desire to improve Canadian trade, but in no one of them was there a single word to prevent the Mother Country making a preferential arrangement if they desired. Imperial fiscal arrangements, he declared, were domestic affairs, wherewith no foreign nation had a right to meddle. (Cheers.)

A loyal telegram having been sent to the King in the name of the 400 guests present, the president at this point read a gracious message of thanks and good wishes.

Hon. Sidney Fisher proposing the toast to the guests, added his testimony of Mr. Fielding's respecting the absence of any desire for annexation, pointing out that according to the last census of American settlers qualified for naturalization, 80 per cent. had taken out papers.

Lord Crewe, responding, said that self-government now also applied to international relations. He most heartily welcomed them. To state things that he knew the Canadian Government in framing its tariff took every care to avoid, if it could be done, including even the slightest injury upon British industry. Transactions of that kind were better carried out by men like Fielding than by home officials, however much their good will. (Hear, hear.)

It had been their desire that Canada should settle her own affairs in her own way. To a superficial observer that might sound something like an advance towards independence, but what was aimed at was combined concerted action. (Cheers.)

In two excellent after dinner speeches the Bishop of Ripon and Sir G. H. Reid also responded. The toasts were concluded with one to the chairman, proposed eulogistically by Hon. Wm. Paterson, and enthusiastically honored.

Subsequently Lord and Lady Strathcona held a big reception in Queen's Hall.

Sir A. Douglas, in response to a question by wireless regarding the interview referred to by Hon. Mr. Fielding, replied from the Megantic, "Had no interview with any newspaper in Canada."

Waterloo Box Factory Burned.

Waterloo, July 2.—The Dominion Box Factory was completely destroyed by fire early yesterday. The building was entirely of frame, and is a complete loss. The office and most of the stock in the yard was saved. The loss will probably reach $25,000 or $30,000, partly covered by insurance.

Hungarian Met Sad Death at Point Ann.

FELL INTO THE HOLD OF A SCHOONER AND BROKE HIS NECK — NO INQUEST NECESSARY.

A fatal accident occurred on Thursday afternoon at the dock of the Lehigh Cement Works at Point Ann. A Hungarian named Wasal Marino was assisting in loading a vessel with cement when he accidentally fell into the hold of the schooner. He struck upon his head with such force as to break his neck. Death was instantaneous. Dr. Yeomans, coroner, of this city, was called to the scene of the accident, but after hearing the circumstances of the unfortunate affair he deemed it unneccessary to hold an inquest.

Marino was 28 years of age and unmarried. He had been working at the cement works for some time, and was an industrious young man, who had many friends. The remains were, as soon as possible after the accident, prepared for burial.

The Band Concert--New Instruments.

The Fifteenth Band gave a pleasing band concert on Queen Victoria park on Thursday evening, and the music was much enjoyed by a good sized crowd. The programme was varied ranging from grand opera to rag time.

An officer who is on the Band committee of the Fifteenth Regiment told the Intelligencer that the Regiment is getting one thousand dollars worth of new instruments for its band They are coming direct from Besson the world-famous maker of band instruments, and it is hoped they will be here before the Old Boys' Reunion.

Guests from this city and Prince Edward County were in attendance at St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, on June 30th, to witness the marriage of Miss Mabel Ashton, daughter of Mr. O. Ashton, Rednersville, to Mr. Ralph Pulver, druggist, of Detroit.

The bride looked charming in a rose grey gown of Dresden silk and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Mrs. Ashton, mother of the bride, wore poplin with touches of black and toque of violets. After a dainty lunch had been served at the "Edward" the happy couple left for their future home in Detroit and will carry with them the kind wishes of a host of Canadian friends.

A TRAGEDY OF 1814

EPISODE OF BLOODY ISLAND IS WELL NIGH FORGOTTEN.

The Rocks That Appear Above the Surface of the Richelieu River Are the Scene of a Murder Where a British Deserter Slew His Companion In Crime and Then Fled Across the Border.

Leaving the beaten path of written history, one comes across the story of an episode which was told by the people living in the Lake Champlain district during those stirring times, and which is preserved to this day by the name of a reef of boulders that in the season of low water appear above the surface of the Richelieu. The reef is known as Bloody Island, and it takes its name from a tragedy enacted there by a deserter from Sir George Prevost's army during its retreat from Plattsburg in 1814.

The first night-encampment of the army after recrossing the International Boundary into Canada was made about three miles north of the frontier on the Odelltown road, not far from where the chapel now stands, and around which was fought the memorable battle of the uprising of 1837-38.

That night two of the guard placed over the treasure wagons deserted, but they did not leave the service empty-handed, for in some manner, possibly with the connivance of other men on duty at the place, but without the courage to share in the deed, they secured a chest filled with coin—gold, it was always said—and loading it on a stone-boat, found in an adjacent farmyard, hauled it across the fields down to the river, whose western bank is here not more than a mile from the highway running parallel to it.

The journey to the river had consumed considerable time and been attended with much labor, but it was only the first step in the adventure.

The river must be crossed, or captur would await them in the morning, and in time of war the capture of a deserter, who was also a robber, meant certain death.

There was no moon, the sky was overcast, and the night densely dark.

A storm was fast coming up from the south, and the sullen roar that always announces its advance down Lake Champlain, could already be heard.

Groping in the darkness up and down the shore, the deserters had the good luck to come upon a scow pulled up at a farm-house landing.

Shoving off the scow, it was brought around to where the chest had been deposited, and after much toil the chest was loaded into the boat and the deserters pushed off on their voyage across the river.

The Richelieu is here somewhat less than a mile in width, but in the darkness the eastern shore, then for the most part a stretch of deep woods, could not be seen. However, the deserters knew the direction in which it lay, for it could be clearly seen from the road along which, during the preceding day, they had been marching. They knew that if they crossed the river straight over they must reach the east bank; and so they put out in their heavily-laden and awkward scow.

To the south for many miles was an unbroken stretch of water, and down its course the white-capped waves were driven by the rising wind.

The deserters made slow headway.

The waves splashed into the scow, which often was in danger of being swamped; but they labored on at the oars, and after a time the west shore from which they had set out, was lost in the darkness.

Progress was made, but it was slow, and they felt themselves carried down stream by the wind and current.

Suddenly the scow grated on the rocks.

The next wave lifted it from the bottom, hurled it ahead and drove it fast upon the boulders. The deserters were on the reef which here rises close to the east side of the channel. It was September, the season of low water, and the gravel-covered top of the reef was dry. Jumping out, for they were now in shallow water, the deserters dragged the scow ahead until the little island was reached. Marks of their work were still visible the next day when the searching party visited the spot.

The men decided not to venture again upon the river in the darkness, but to wait for the grey light of morning to show them where they were.

One never saw the morning dawn, for while he slept his companion stabbed him to death and threw his body into the water, hoping no doubt that the waves would carry it down the river or wash it among the rushes which in the shallow water along the eastern shore grow tall and rank.

As soon as the darkness began to lift in the early morning the surviving deserter set out for the east shore. He landed where a small wooded point projected from the shore-line for a short distance. Brown's Point it was then called, and so it continued to be known for half-a-century, so long as the farm, of which it was a part, remained in the hands of the Brown family.

The scow was found late the next day floating among the rushes in the small bay north of the point. It was empty, the oars having evidently been thrown overboard and washed away. The deserter was never seen again. The country then was heavily wooded, and it was possible for a man to journey through it for miles and run little danger of being seen. The point at which the deserter landed is only two miles north of the Vermont boundary. The man no doubt made his way across the line, and once on American territory, he would be safe from arrest as a British deserter. He might be held as a prisoner of war, but one more or less made no difference, and the war was now practically at an end along the northern frontier. The man was never found or traced, but the body of his victim was discovered. The river had not borne it far from the scene of the tragedy.

The reef was named Bloody Island, and so it is known to this day.

DICKEY'S ATONEMENT

The Romance That Was Played After the Tragedy.

By SARAH B. KENNEDY.

Miss Delaney, who had been to Washington and seen several theatrical "stars," might tilt her nose as she pleased, but the fact remained that the entertainment given by the "Smithville Thespians" was a success. Miss Delaney said the performance was lacking in "artistic finish," but Smithville went and paid its money without regret and laughed as it had not laughed in years. True, the intention of the Thespians was not to make people laugh, for in their self adulation they had essayed a tragedy. But from tragedy to comedy was an easy step with Dickey Holt in the cast. Something was always sure to happen to Dickey.

That which befell him this particular night seemed trivial in its nature, but was farreaching in its consequences. He quite forgot that afternoon to purchase a pair of long hose to wear with the knee breeches of the colonial costume in which he was to enact the heavy villain and at the last moment bribed the maid from the girls' dressing room to surreptitiously borrow a pair for him. These he donned so hurriedly that he failed to notice the owner's name worked in bright silk just below the knee. But there were opera glasses in the house, and soon the audience knew what he did not. The applause accorded him was as unexpected as it was gratifying, and he looked compassionately at John Moore, the "leading man," who thought to reap all the honors. But in the most thrilling scene of the second act, where his villainy was denounced, there came an awful moment.

"You are a penniless impostor!" stormed John, giving the lines as they were. "Why, the very shoes in which you stand are not your own!"

And then before Dickey could make his grandiloquently scornful reply a small boy in the front row rose and cried excitedly:

"And neither is the stockings his, for they've got my sister Belle's name on 'em!"

After that a permanent return to pompous tragedy was impossible. Even John Moore's imposing voice and Jessie Lane's well simulated tears failed to keep the spectators in awe. Dickey's stockings were the "stars of the goodlie companie," and every time he appeared he was greeted with shouts and applause. Though the delighted audience went out into the night regretting no penny spent for tickets, behind the scenes Dickey had the whole troupe about his ears. But the only criticism that hurt him was Jessie Lane's. With Jessie he had long believed himself in love, and it hurt him when she said:

"You quite spoiled most of my part, and you made my poor little sister Belle more miserable than I can tell you."

The next night he called upon her to make his peace and found John Moore in the parlor ahead of him.

"Oh, I have quite forgiven you," laughed Jessie, "but Belle has vowed vengeance against you, and if you are wise you will go out yonder on the porch and pacify her. You used to be quite a hero in her eyes."

So Dickey left John with Jessie and went miserably out to where Belle, aged sixteen, swung in a hammock and pouted. He had known and petted her in days gone by, and he thought soon to smooth her ruffled plumage. Instead he found her obdurate and full of reproaches. However, he must pacify Jessie's sister. So Dickey spent the evening by the hammock. The next time he came it was the same. John sat with Jessie, and he was banished to the porch and Belle. That young lady had framed an elaborate program of reparation for the humiliation to which she had been subjected. He must bring her bonbons and flowers and sing to her in the summer moonlight to his mandolin. Dickey undertook these things in a spirit of penitence and martyrdom. Night after night he sat on the porch and strove to be amiable while mentally he was fuming against John. He sometimes wondered why nice girls like Jessie had to have small sisters.

During the second week of his enforced reparation he made a discovery. Belle had lengthened her dresses and twisted her braids into a knot on top of her small head, and with these personal changes there had come also a touch of coquetry to her manner that made her the most delightful companion. He found he was fretting less over John's advantage, but now and then the old jealous thoughts would come.

"Are you not almost placated?" he asked laughingly one night.

Belle answered with spirit: "Do you think six boxes of chocolate and three bouquets would atone for all that laughter in the dress circle and those catcalls from the gallery. No, indeed!"

Dickey acknowledged that she was right and went on playing the agreeable, and as he was as much philosopher as martyr he set himself to get all the pleasure possible out of his new role. It was really surprising how quickly time passed in Belle's presence. As she swung in the hammock with her lengthened skirts froufrouing about her she made him tell her all about his hopes in his profession and never doubted but that he would achieve his ambitions. Sometimes she talked of Jessie and wished, with a languishing glance into Dickey's eyes, that she were like her sister, "it would be so lovely to have a man like Dickey in love with her." He, looking close to find the coveted likeness, discovered she was very much more beautiful than Jessie and wondered that he had never known it before.

After six weeks of this sort of thing Belle sighed prettily and said she supposed he had spent quite enough time and money on her to salve her hurt and that he had better resume his attentions to Jessie. Of course she would miss him, she added, with drooping lids, but she trusted she was no usurer to claim more than her debt. Dickey went away with an odd sense of something lost tugging at his heart. The next evening he came, intending to go into the parlor and begin his rivalry with John, but somehow the lonely little figure in the hammock drew him aside, and he spent the evening as he had spent the preceding ones—in the moonlight.

"Goodby," he said at parting. "Tomorrow I really must break into John's game and recover my lost ground."

She sighed and then laughed so quickly that Dickey could scarcely separate the two. He stood confused for a moment, and when he recovered himself he found that he was still holding her hand and that she was watching him shyly. He went away with his brain in a whirl. In his efforts to soothe her feelings had he made the child love him? Far into the night he sat smoking and thinking, and in the morning the queer feeling was still in his breast, and Blackstone lay open but unread before him all day. In the afternoon as he left his office there was a commotion at the nearest street corner, and a runaway horse dashed into view, dragging a dogcart in which sat two girls, Jessie and Belle. The quick turn about the corner sent the cart careening on one wheel, and almost as Dickey recognized the occupants they were spilled in the dust. With a cry Dickey rushed forward and, passing one prostrate form, caught the other in his arms with words of solicitous endearment. But the figure drew resolutely away.

"This is not Jessie. This is"—

But Dickey only held her the closer. "Not Jessie, but the girl I love, the only girl I ever really loved! Let John take care of Jessie. Are you hurt, dear?"

There was a contented sigh against his shoulder. "I haven't any pain now, not even in my heart, which has often ached at your indifference."

"John and Jessie are to be married in the winter," she told him later.

"I'm glad of it. We'll dance at their wedding," he laughed. "But, dear, I'm only a poor young lawyer, and"—

"And I'm ages too young to marry, so I'll wait a whole year for you, and if you give up smoking and send me only one box of chocolates a week you can save no end of money."

And so it was arranged, and when Miss Delaney next spoke of the lack of artistic finish to that theatrical performance Dickey stoutly declared the "finish was the finest on earth" and held to his point.

A Japanese Romance.

Prince Ito, the Japanese statesman, married a geisha girl who saved his life. He was pursued during the struggle forty years ago between the followers of the mikado and the shogun. He took refuge in a tea house, where he implored a geisha to save him. Every Japanese house has a dust hole. As the ground floor is raised about two feet above the earth, a square hole is cut in the floor to serve as a receptacle for the sweepings of the rooms. With great presence of mind the geisha put Ito down this hole, which she covered with a board, placing a brazier on top. When the pursuers arrived they found a languid girl sitting by the fire, who expressed her surprise at their visit and assured them they were at liberty to look through the house. After a search they departed, disappointed, not one of them having thought of the dust hole.—Washington Herald.

The Queen of an Ant Colony.

The queen of an ant colony is at first winged. Just as soon as she has strength enough she picks a mate, and they have a marriage flight. When she comes back again she rubs off her wings and prepares to raise a brood. Although the queen lives to be thirteen years old, on an average, the only flying she does is on her nuptial flight, which might be compared to the honeymoon of a pair of newly weds. As soon as she gets back to earth she takes her abode in a piece of bark or other suitable place and remains there for nine months. There she raises a brood of workers; these workers go out and bring in food to the queen, and through the workers the ant colony is kept up. After the queen loses her wings the muscles undergo a physiological change. The substance of the muscles goes into the blood. The queen becomes so light that she would float on water.

The Rod Not Spared.

John Wesley's mother believed in birching children at the earliest possible age. Each one of her family was compelled to celebrate his fifth birthday by learning the alphabet by heart. In order that this task might be accomplished Mrs. Wesley, after issuing strict orders that no one should disturb her, shut herself up for six hours with the child and drove the letters into his brain with the aid of a rod. Mme. Quinet, a French contemporary of Mrs. Wesley, was an equally firm believer in the virtues of corporal punishment, but was not sufficiently strong to administer what she considered a satisfactory flogging. She therefore engaged a constable to call twice a week and flog her three children. If by chance they had not been naughty then the punishment was referred to the account of future transgressions.—London Chronicle.

Good Advice.

"And now, son," said the old rabbit, "here's a bit of advice. Always keep on the good side of a dog."

"But, pop," queried the youngster, who was about to go forth into the big world, "which is the good side of a dog?"

"The outside, son," answered the old rabbit as he bit off another hunk of cabbage.—Pittsburg Press.

One Time When It Was Good.

The ballot box stuffer had pleaded guilty, and the court had given him five years.

"That's flattering," said the prisoner with a smile.

"Flattering!" exclaimed his lawyer.

"Sure. The court took me at my word."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Choice.

"Well," said the head of the family, "it's come to a choice between two things."

"And what is that?" asked his wife.

"Whether we'll continue to eat meat or continue to maintain an automobile."—Detroit Free Press.

Where Cost Tells.

"He says it is costing him four times as much to live as it did two years ago."

"But the price of necessities has only doubled."

"Yes, but he is leading a double life."—Life.

No Hope For Him.

"Your senator has come home to explain how he lost his head in Washington."

"Yes, but he lost his voice, too, and he can't explain."—Atlanta Constitution.

Madam, You Never Made Such Picnic Sandwiches

Can you think of a Picnic without Sandwiches?

Ridiculous, of course.

It isn't every kind of bread that will cut without crumbling—that will butter evenly without lumping.

But when you have FIVE ROSES in your flour bin, what a difference in the Picnic Basket.

It's a real pleasure to bake the bread. The dough goes together so easily—you see it whiten as you knead it—it rises above your hopes—and when you open the oven doors the result is a joy and a pride.

And it cuts thin and even—there is no waste of crumbs.

The strength that is in FIVE ROSES flour holds crust and crumb together—there are no unsightly holes to spoil the looks of your sandwiches and for the filling to come through and reach the fingers of the eager eaters — and no sogginess.

Crisp crust, nutlike flavor, even texture, yielding toothsome crumb, easy digestion —everything you want in a sandwich.

Opening the Picnic Basket becomes the great event of the day. And the summer appetites, whipped by the country air and the cool breezes of the picnic places, fight over the last crust and yell lustily for more of the same. Haven't YOU ever tried FIVE ROSES, Madam?

Ontarios Beat the Flats.

Yesterday morning on the Coleman Flats diamond the Ontarios and Coleman Flats baseball teams played a league game before a large number of spectators. The Ontarios who are certainly clever players in the fore part of the game secured a decided lead, the score at the conclusion of the fifth innings being 7 to 1 in their favor. The Coleman Flats in the latter part of the game made a determined effort to win and although they did not do so, they came near it, the score at the conclusion of the game being 7 to 6 in favor of the Ontarios. The game was played without a mishap and without any dispute. Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire. The lineup of the teams was as follows:

Intelligencer Cup Goes To Trenton

FIVE MILE RACE FOR HANDSOME SILVER TROPHY WAS WON YESTERDAY BY P. SCHUMAN, OF TRENTON, — FAIR CROWD AND GOOD LIST OF SPORTS AT Y. M. C. A. GAMES.

There was, considering other attractions, a fairly good attendance at the Y. M. C. A. games on the Driving Park yesterday. The I.O.O.F. band headed the procession to the park, and played tunefully during the afternoon. It was after 2 o'clock when the sports began. Mr. W. C. Mikel was announcer, and was right on the job. Armed with a large smile and a medium-sized megaphone, the genial City Clerk had the centre of the stage all the afternoon, and attracted nearly as much attention as did Halley's comet a few weeks ago. The sports were well contested, and the time made was good considering the sultry weather.

The Intelligencer's handsome silver cup, put up as a trophy for the five mile race, goes to Trenton, Mr. P. Schuman, a sturdy young athlete of that town, capturing it with comparative ease.

Following is a summary of the various events:

THE TRACK EVENTS.

Two Mile Bicycle Race—W. P. Smith, A. Betts and R. Stapley. Stapley came in first, but was disqualified for passing Smith on the inside.

100 yard Dash—W. L. Smith, M. E. Pritchard and G. E. Ketcheson. Time 10 4-5 sec.

Half mile race, boys 16 years and under—G. E. Ketcheson, J. Alexander and H. Ingram. Time 2.17 3-5.

440 yard Dash, boys 16 years of age and under—G. E. Ketcheson, G. Steele, and J. Alexander. Time, 1.01 4-5.

Throwing 12 lb. Hammer—M. E. Pritchard, 79 ft.; G. Reid, 78 ft. 3 in. G. Smith, 77 ft. 4 in.

THE BASEBALL MATCH.

There was a baseball match between the Grand Trunks and T. A. S., two teams in the local City League. The T. A. S. had a Peterboro battery, and at first looked like sure winners. But the railroaders came strong in the third, while the water-wagoners went away up in the air. When the round was over the steam horse boys had tucked away 8 runs. Errors on both sides cut a lot of figure in the score. There was some good play, but at times both pitchers got heart-breaking support. Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire, and these were the teams:

CITY CLERK MIKEL GIVES SOME INTERESTING INFORMATION.

"Well, what are the chances of getting the C.N.R. into Belleville?" our reporter to-day asked W. C. Mikel, K. C., City Solicitor, who this week was in Toronto supporting the application of the Railway for a route through the city, along with Ald. Robinson and Ackerman.

"Good, providing the Railway can get the route they have now laid out. If they don't get this route then the main line will likely go outside the city to the north and a spur or siding will be run down into the city."

"What about an elevated railroad through the city?"

"The Company have made it clear that they would not build this, and, in fact, I do not believe they would operate an elevated road through the city if the city built it for them. The Chief Engineer frankly states that the principal object in coming to Belleville is to get business. If they cannot get the road so situated as to accomplish this, the incentive for coming is gone."

"What position does the D. & D. Institute take?"

"Dr. Coughlin has told me on several occasions that he prefers to have the railway along the Bay shore, south of the Trent road."

"What does the Township of Sidney say as to the water front route?"

"Reeve White, of Sidney, representing the township and the county before the Commission, stated that they preferred the road to run along the water front, south of the Trent road, all the way from Trenton to Belleville."

"How will this affect the cemeteries?"

"I understand both cemeteries are willing to have the road run through that part near the Trent road."

"What is the opposition to the Company?"

"Col. Ponton objects to the interference with the scenery in Sidney, and residents of Foster ward object to level crossings. Personally, I believe the danger from level crossings is greatly over-estimated. The G. T. R. have 7 level crossings to the north of the city on the main line, and 18 formed by the old G. T. R. track, and that track also running along Pinnacle and Great St. James streets, and there have not been six people injured on all these in the last six years. They don't occasion as many injuries as the sidewalks."

"What is likely to be the result?"

"I don't know, but Judge Mabee, the chairman of the Commisson, said he noticed that every one wanted the railway, but wanted it on the other person's land. The Chief Engineer of the Commission will be here Monday to look over the situation, and a great deal will depend on his decision. If we can get the main line through Belleville there are other matters, such as suburban service to Point Ann, etc., to be considered, and their favorable consideration will be helped by as little antagonism to the Company as possible."

ANAEMIA'S VICTIMS.

Anaemia is simply a lack of blood, It therefore follows that the correct treatment for anaemia is one that increases the blood supply. That is really the only treatment that can possibly be successful. The symptoms of anaemia are easily recognized. Paleness, listlessness, the failure of food to nourish, headaches and often in women and girls backaches, faintness and palpitation of the heart to restore the blood to its normal quantity and quality Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be recommended with confidence. First because they are known to have cured thousands of anaemic people—the highest possible recommendation. Secondly they actually contain the ingredients that combine with the food and oxygen to make rich red blood, without which no man, woman, or growing boy or girl can be healthy.

Mrs. E. M. Bell, Red Deer, Alberta, says:—"When I came to Alberta some years ago, a young girl, I had been suffering for a couple of years with anaemic blood. Doctors had done everything for me that could be done, but to no purpose. The doctors said I could not live, but that a change of climate might prolong my life, so my father brought me to Alberta. For a short time I did seem to improve, but soon became as bad if not worse, than before I left Ontario. I could not walk upstairs, walk on the street, or stand in a room or more than a few minutes without fainting. Life was a burden and I did not care whether I lived or not, and had given up hope of getting better. It was at this time Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were brought to my attention, and a supply was got for me. After I had used the second box I thought I felt some better and I continued taking the Pills until I had used nine or ten boxes, when I felt like a new person. I could walk, ride a bicycle and skate without the dreadful pains in my limbs I had before experienced, and in every way I was enjoying better health than ever before in my life. Now whenever I feel the need of a tonic I turn at once to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I am constantly recommending them to my friends."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Results of The Entrance Exams.

Following is the list of successful candidates at the recent Entrance Examination to the High School. It will be noticed that there were only 31 successful candidates, though the total number who wrote was 114. To be successful a candidate has to make 40% of the marks on each subject, and an average of 60%, and as the Minister of Education has issued special instructions to Entrance Boards to exact the full number of marks required, no exceptions can be made by the Entrance Board. The arithmetic paper was found to be especially severe, only 42% being successful in arithmetic. The winner of the Governor-General's medal is Harold Weese. He made also the highest total of all candidates. The names are in order of merit.

Unsuccessful candidates will receive a statement of their marks through the mail.

Fire in Sidney.

At about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon fire destroyed a large frame barn situated on Mr. David Wilson's farm, 3rd concession of Sidney. When discovered the flames had gained such headway that but little was taken out of the building. Three calves were burned to death, two binders a seeder and other farm implements were burned, in addition to harness and some grain and hay. Had it not been for valuable assistance rendered by neighbors the residence near the burned building would have fallen a prey. As it was considerable damage was done to the house How the fire originated is not known. Mr. Wilson had an insurance of $800 on the barn and contents. This will by no means cover the loss sustained.

IS OFF AT RENO— RACE RIOTS FEARED.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Reno, July 2.—As the hour of the big fight draws near, the situation in this place is unbeatable. Already every conceivable nook and corner is being held at fabolous prices for lodgers.

Thousands of tents are erected all over the district and are crowded.

Every gambling joint is crowded to suffocation, and an army of special police are sworn in.

Arrangements are made for a corps of doctors at the ringside to attend to the casualities among spectators during the excitement.

Jeffries continues a strong favorite although unprejudiced judges cannot make a choice.

Both men are in the pink of condition.

The racial cry has entered strongly into the fight, and from the Southern states comes word that the white population is trembling, fearing the consequences of colored celebrations should Johnson triumph over Jeffries.

The promoters paid $100,000 to stake holder Sullivan to-day.

All Canadians, except Flanagan, are betting heavily on Jeffries.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS CURE SUMMER COMPLAINTS.

Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are infants and young children and at first sign of illness during the hot summer months they should be given to the little one At no time of the year is baby in such danger as in summer. Summer complaints come on so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand the little one may be beyond help in a few hours. The Tablets never fail to relieve the sick child, and if occasionally given to the well child they will keep them well. Mrs. P. Laroche, Les Fonds, Quebec, says:—"Last summer my baby suffered severely from stomach and bowel troubles but the prompt use of Baby's Own Tablets saved his life." The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

For Stout People to Read.

In reproducing the recipe in full of an extraordinary successful remedy for overstoutness it was thought that many readers would like to make up the prescription themselves. The ingredients can be obtained at any druggist's and and are as follows: ½ oz. Marmola, 4¾ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 4¾ oz. Peppermint Water.

Shake the ingredients together in a largish clean bottle. The dose is one teaspoonful, to be taken after each meal and at bedtime.

Obesity has always been an obstinate complaint to deal with, and it is pleasing to record that the above remedy is becoming better known every day as the most efficacious of treatments, which does not involve any fasting or exercising of other weakening auxiliaries.

The person so treated gets rapidly stronger as fast as the superfluous fat is being expelled. In severe cases of corpulency the reduction amounts to many pounds a week.

Radiant Hair.

NEW YORK SOCIETY WOMEN'S HAIR MATCHED ONLY BY PARISIANS.

While much attention is given to choicest gowns by New York society women, the turbulent fad just now is the care of the hair.

For many years the clever women of Paris have been famed for the magnificent beauty of their hair.

"Glorious hair," a Virginian calls it; "so radiant and luxuriant that it not only attracts but fascinates and compels unstinted admiration."

But now that the elite of New York ever anxious to improve their beauty, have learned that Parisian Sage, a remarkable and almost marvellous hair nourisher and beautifier, is almost entirely responsible for the charming hair of the ladies of France, the demand for it has become enormous.

Parisian Sage is now sold all over Canada and in Belleville by J. S. McKeown, who is glad to guarantee it to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back. Large bottle 50 cents.

QUEEN SAAV'S READY WIT.

A Story Appropriated From the Annals of Irish Royalty.

The anger of King Colm was terrible. 'Twas a fortnight before he could address himself to his queen or look her in the face and speak to her—and what he come to say to her then was that she was a shame and a disgrace to him, but sure what could he expect anyhow when he was such a notorious fool as ever to marry a beggar of a race of beggars. "Get up," says he, "and dress yourself, and leave my sight and my castle for evermore."

"Very well and good, me lord," says Saav, says she. "I'm ready. I was prepared for this, as you'll remember, before ever I married you; but," says she, "you remember your agreement—three back burdens of the greatest valuables I choose to carry out of your castle at my lavin'?"

"Thirty-three," says he, "if you like. 'Twill be a cheap price to get rid of you."

"Thanky, me lord," says she. "I'll only ask three. And before I've got them out maybe you'll think it's enough."

"What is the first back burden you choose?" says he.

"A back burden," says she, "of gold, silver, diamonds and jewelry."

In a short time the king had a burden of them piled on her that near almost broke her back, and with it she went out over the drawbridge.

When she laid it down and come back in again says the king, says he, "What will your second back burden be?"

"For my second back burden," says she, "hoist up on me our baby boy."

The king gave a groan that'd rent rocks. But he wasn't the man to be daunted before any woman. He lifted with his own hands the boy in whom his heart was wrapped up and, settin' his teeth hard, put him on Saav's shoulders. She carried him out over the drawbridge.

When she come back again says Colm, says he, "Now then, name your third and last burden, and we're done with you forever, thank God!"

Says Saav, says she, "Get on me back yourself."

King Colm and his good Queen Saav lived ever after the happiest and most contented couple that Ireland ever knew, a parable for all kings and queens and married couples in the nation. Saav lived and died the wittiest, as her husband lived ever after and died the justest and most generous, most reasonable, sensible, affable and amiable king that Ireland ever knew.—Everybody's Magazine.

Whistler Let Them Wait.

Whistler's laxity in the matter of engagements was notorious. No one ever knew if he were coming or not to affairs. But his point of view is explained in his answer to a friend of his who knew that he had an engagement to dine with some swells in a distant part of London and who felt that it was most impolitic for Whistler to offend them. It was growing late, and yet Whistler was painting away madly, intently.

"My dear fellow," he said to him at last, "it is frightfully late, and you have to dine with Lady Such-a-one. Don't you think you'd better stop?"

"Stop?" fairly shrieked Whistler. "Stop, when everything is going beautifully? Go and stuff myself with disgusting food when I can paint like this? Never! Never! Besides, they can't do anything until I get there! They never do!"

If Jupiter Were Inhabited.

Calculations as to the size required for human beings on the other planets vary widely, according to the basis of reckoning. According to those based upon the attraction of gravity, Jupiter should be peopled by pygmies of twenty-eight inches. Wolfius, on the other hand, argued that Goliath himself would be accounted decidedly undersized upon that planet. He worked from the feebleness of the sun's light there, which would demand that the pupil of the eye should be much more dilatable. Since the pupil stands in a constant proportion to the ball of the eye and that to the entire body, said Wolfius, a little calculation shows that an average Jovian must be nearly thirteen feet seven inches tall—not quite four inches shorter than Og, king of Bashan, according to the measure of his bedstead given in Deuteronomy.

A Bright Blacksmith.

The greatest improvement in vehicle construction was when some bright blacksmith thought of heating the tires and shrinking them on the wheel. While many claim the honor, it is not known to whom it rightly belongs. Previous to this event tires were made in short sections and held on the felloes with nails. When starting on a long haul the driver always laid in a good supply of nails to use on the trip.—Shop Notes Quarterly.

Handicapped.

The second Duke of Wellington was handicapped through life by his father's fame. Bernal Osborne once asked him why with his undoubted talents he made no effort to shine in public affairs. The duke replied: "If you had sat so long as I have under the shadow of a great tree you would be as colorless as I am."

His Game.

"Some say there is a sucker born every minute."

"I don't know anything about that," responded the eminent trust magnate. "Nor do I care, so long as the birth rate of ultimate consumers remains as satisfactory as it is."—Pittsburg Post.

THE LOT OF HARDSHIP.

It Is Ever the School In Which Greatness Is Taught.

There is a purpose in circumstance. Nothing in our lives is for naught. All things which have been given us, even our chains, are meant for our making—meant for the working out of our goodly destiny. Bunyan in prison, apparently cursed by sunless hours of solitude and loneliness, was a greater Bunyan than if he had been free to roam afield. The walls which shut his body in could not confine his soul. It escaped them and went out into all the world to lift to higher levels the hope and vision of mankind. The log cabin in which Lincoln was born lent its ruggedness and simplicity to the man himself and has become a shrine which men approach with reverend feet as to some holy place which love and truth have glorified. The hard lot is ever the school in which greatness is taught, and the best scholars are those who perceive the purpose of difficulty and do not grow bitter as they grapple with it. The very genius of progressive living consists in a capacity to appreciate the day and what the day holds, to find in all seasons and events a divine conspiracy to refine the soul and make it a greater soul, to hail hardship with grim gladness and bless the hills which must be climbed, to look with kindly eyes upon every human thing, to accept with complacence the small circle of opportunity until it has been shown that we are worthy to move in a wider one. Along no other path may we come to our best and largest estate of being and serving.—Richard Wightman in Metropolitan Magazine.

She broke off abruptly to point at a boy in the class.

Bedouins and Water.

It is not unusual to hear a Bedouin upon reaching a camp where water is offered him refuse it with the remark, "I drank only yesterday." On the Bedouins' long marches across dry countries the size of the water skins is nicely calculated to just outlast the journey, and they rarely allow themselves to break the habit of abstemiousness, as this would be sure to make their next water fast all the harder. They are accustomed from infancy to regard water as a most precious commodity and use it with religious economy. They know every hollow and nook in the mountains where water may be found. Their camels and goats, which they take with them on their marches to supply them with milk and meat, live principally on the scanty herbage and foliage of the thorny mimosa. Neither men nor animals drink more than once in forty-eight hours. No wonder they can subsist where invaders quickly perish.

Suttee, or the practice of immolating widows on their husband's funeral pyres in India, was first attacked by the British government in 1829. It was on Dec. 4 of that year that Lord William Bentinck carried a resolution in council by which all who abetted suttee were declared guilty of "culpable homicide." In the year 1817 700 widows were burned alive in Bengal alone, but since the passing of the act the practice has entirely died out. Suttee was really a primitive rite, a survival from barbarous times, and not sanctioned by Hindooism, the passage in the Vedas supporting it being a willful mistranslation. But no previous governor had the courage to violate the British tradition of religious toleration. Lord William Bentinck also suppressed thuggism, which made strangling a religious rite to the goddess Kali.

It Cost Money to Be Smart.

A sprightly young matron hopped on a car at Eighth and Chestnut streets, handed a half dollar to the conductor and hurried to a seat without getting the change. The conductor, grinning broadly at the outcome which he expected, awaited developments. When the car reached Sixth street the woman turned to the conductor and remarked, "Did I get my change?"

The conductor laughingly handed her the change.

Then the scene changed.

"My good man," icily spoke the young woman, "I gave you a dollar."

Protestations on the part of the conductor availed him nothing. He fished about his clothes and found another four bit piece and handed it up, with a sigh.

"The next time I try to be funny," said the conductor, "I hope some one catches me before it costs me so much money."—Philadelphia Times.

THESE STURDY LIFE—PARTNERS

ATTRIBUTE THEIR GOOD HEALTH TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Everyone for miles around Grande Ligne, P. Q. knows Mr. N. Joubert. He was born and raised in St. Johns Co., went in business for himself, prospered, and then retired to enjoy the fruits of his industry. Mr. Joubert and his esteemed wife have the respect of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Although Mr. Joubert is now 80 years old and Mrs. Joubert is 75 years, they are enjoying the best of health. This is due to the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives."

GRANDE LIGNE, QUE., JAN. 2nd, 1910.

"I heartily recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to all who suffer from Constipation and the painful consequences—Piles. I am now over 80 years of age and suffered for over 20 years with Constipation and Piles. I tried all kinds of remedies, saw the doctors and took their medicines, but nothing cured me. About four years ago, I received a sample of 'Fruit-a-tives.' After taking a few doses, I really felt that 'Fruit-a-tives' were doing me good. As 'Fruit-a-tives' were not sold here I wrote to Ottawa for several boxes. My previous opinion of the value of 'Fruit-a-tives' was more than confirmed by the wonderful good they did me. After taking four boxes, I felt well—my bowels were regular—and the Piles had disappeared.

My wife was troubled for three years with Asthma and Eczema on the hands, which made her hands almost useless. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, none of which had any effect. He also advised her to use rubber gloves (she wore out three pairs). I persuaded her, as a last resort, to try 'Fruit-a-tives.' The effect was marvellous. Her hands are cured and the Asthma has also left her. We both attribute our present good health to 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

N. JOUBERT.

It does seem wonderful to think of one remedy curing four such diseases as Constipation, Piles, Eczema and Asthma. Yet when you think of it, all four troubles are caused by one thing—poisoned blood. Old age brings a certain weakness. The liver becomes clogged and does not give up enough bile to move the bowels regularly, causing Constipation and the Constipation in turn causes Piles. Waste matter in the system is carried to the skin and lungs, causing Eczema and Asthma. "Fruit-a-tives" cures all such diseases because it contains, in tablet form, the most wonderful blood purifying elements ever discovered. 'Fruit-a-tives" is not made by a drug trust—nor some chemist who knows nothing about disease. No! "Fruit-a-tives" is the discovery of one of Canada's most eminent physicians, who devoted many years to searching for the medicinal elements in fresh fruit. This physician found that by combining certain fruit juices in a certain way, he formed a new compound which was many times more valuable in curing disease than anything known to medical science.

This discovery is "Fruit-a-tives", now known and praised in every part of Canada. The case of Mr. and Mrs. Joubert shows the remarkable powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in curing disease when all else has failed. If you are a sufferer, try "Fruit-a-tives." 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The Globe.

AS A NEWSPAPER.

The Globe does not, never did, and never will consider itself infallible. It has its own opinions and is not afraid to openly advocate them. It is a matter of pride with those responsible for its management that The Globe has assisted in moulding public opinion until the expression thereof has materialized into beneficial legislation.

There are "mugwumps" in the newspaper world as well as in politics; they lead no party. They wait until they are sure they will be on the winning side before expressing themselves, if indeed they ever venture a real opinion. To have influence that counts a newspaper must have opinions and courage.

AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Every business man must have been impressed during the past year or two by the number of enterprising corporations that have adopted a policy of newspaper publicity.

Until recently, who ever thought of a street railway carrying on an advertising campaign? or a gas company? or an electric light company? or a power company? or even a newspaper itself? But all of these have been regularly using the columns of The Globe for months past. Why? Not for fun, but for more business.

Practically, there is no commercial enterprise to-day whose field of operation cannot be widened through Newspaper Publicity.

Indian Relics.

The Ontario Education Department has obtained a curious and interesting collection of Indian relics. The collection was bought from Mrs. Rutherford, whose husband was in the British Civil Service in India, and spent many years in gathering the curios.

The collection is a large one. Chief among the relics is a river crocodile which had a known record of killing six Indian women, before Mr. Rutherford shot it. There are two mounted wild black boar heads and one glimpse of them makes the timid person glad that he is many miles from India.

The collection also contains the mounted heads of six black buck, four jackals, and a wolf; a fish-eating crocodile, and the skull and horns of two Indian bison. Some of the minor relics are: a fusee, which is like a heavy shot gun, and is used for shooting elephants; a hill-gun; a spear 10 feet long, made of solid bamboo, and used for boar sticking; Indian gods, anointing bottles, pistols, sabres, breast plates, daggers, Indian tyles taken from a temple, a holy bull which they worship, and five silver coins, some round, some square.

Mrs. Rutherford also sent an original copy of The London Times of Thursday, June 22, 1815. The copy contains the first official report by Wellington himself, of the battle of Waterloo. The report is dated June 19, the fighting having continued from the 15th to the 18th.

When You are Sick.

It doesn't take a good doctor to tell you that—most anybody could do that much, but to tell exactly the nature of the disease sometimes calls for the utmost skill of the physician. Most anybody by a few simple tests could tell that your eyesight was defective, and that you needed glasses of some kind, but to diagnose the exact trouble and fit the right glasses calls for more than ordinary skill. We have given years of study to that one thing, and we are in business to bring wrong eyes and right glasses together.

The Palace.

The following letter was received by Palace management re King Edward's funeral pictures, which can be seen Thursday and Friday at the Palace, with another new picture each night:

Palace Theatre, Belleville:

I take great pleasure in announcing that I have secured sole and exclusive rights for the Dominion of Canada to rent and exhibit the "Hepworth Company" (London, England) subject film, "The Funeral of King Edward." This company was positively the only one granted permission by Royalty to take this subject, and under these conditions special locations along the line of march, and at Windsor station and St. George's Chapel were reserved for their cameras and operators. Thus the film shows in detail and to better advantages than any other, the many features of interest in connection with the funeral. In the parade are easily seen and recognised the members of the Royal Family, along with foreign monarchs and their representatives. The subject in all comprises one thousand three hundred and seventy-five (1375) ft. No matter what different makes of this subject you may have seen this one far surpasses any other and will bear repeating. Yours truly, Crystal Palace, Film Exchange. Everybody &c.

Houses Dynamited.

Greensburg, Pa., July 2.—The Westmoreland coal district is in the throes of a miners' strike, which so far has caused several deaths, the use of dynamite, many arrests and much violent disorder.

The latest trouble arose yesterday at Export, when the home of two foreign miners were dynamited, resulting in the injury of a one-year-old baby, which was hurled from its crib across a room against a wall. The miners whose homes were wrecked are said to have remained at work while the others were out on strike. Late Thursday night marching strikers fired into the barracks of deputy sheriffs guarding the property of the Fort Palmer mines.

To date several men have been shot and killed, over fifty persons have been arrested and jailed, and the mine operators are claiming a heavy loss while the labor war is going on.

Receives a Bloody Ear.

Cleveland, July 2.—Wrapped around a bottle of alcohol in which lay a bloody human ear, Harry Coulby, president of the Pittsburg Steamship Co., received a letter here yesterday, in which he was threatened with mutilation and death if he refused to grant the demands of the sailors who have been on strike for two years.

The man to whom the ear belonged has already been identified as Edward Fraser, a non-union sailor, who was assaulted in Buffalo last Monday, and had his ear severed from his head by his assailants. He was picked up later by the police, dying from loss of blood. Across his breast was pinned a sheet of paper inscribed "Don't be a scab."

Demonstration at Execution.

Paris, July 2.—Liabouef, the apache, who killed a policeman several months ago, was guillotined at daybreak yesterday.

The Socialists had attempted to get a reprieve for the assassin but failed, and a violent manifestation by the revolutionary Socialists occurred at the scene of the execution. At the very moment the blade fell, several of the rioters fired revolvers. The police charged them repeatedly with bayonets. A police captain was shot in the throat, and several persons were badly injured.

Attempted Suicide.

Allenstein, East Prussia, July 2.—Frau Von Schoenbeck Weber, who has been on trial for a month, charged with complicity in the murder of her husband, an army officer, attempted suicide yesterday by opening the veins of the wrist. The self-inflicted wounds were serious, but the physicians hope to save her life.

The case has excited national interest, because it brought into prominence the conditions existing at the garrisons in this and other cities of Germany.

Took Her Money and Skipped.

Detroit, July 2.—Sophia Rapaporth, before Judge Murphy for divorce, said she met Victor G. Rapaporth and went with him to Brussels, Ont., to be married in 1907. He promised to take her to London, Eng., for the honeymoon, she said, and while in Toronto she handed him her money, $500, and a gold bracelet. She has never seen him since.

Three thousand persons who went to Mineola in the hope of seeing some one fly saw a nattily-dressed little woman climb on the stool behind Mr. Harmon's seat in his big skeleton like air craft, but only a few of them knew her identity.

They simply saw her sit apparently nerveless in her seat some twelve feet above the ground and wave her hand when the machine started off. After it alighted and Mr. Harmon asked her how she like it she simply said:

"It was perfected splendid."

Then she stepped into her automobile and whisked away.

The Broken Trust

It vexed Paul Westerne that Edith never seemed pleased when the presents came. Her fair face would cloud over and grow sad.

"Papa," she said one day, suddenly, as the artist hailed with warm welcome a box of choice Havanas, "papa, you would never allow yourself to be bribed, would you?"

"Bribed!" cried Mr. Westerne. "How can you use such a word to me, child?"

"Because," she replied, "all these things seem to me so many bribes for your silence and mine."

"You will certainly lose your reason unless you abandon these ideas," sternly said her father.

She threw down her work and went up to him, clasping her arms round his neck.

"Papa, have patience with me," she said. "I loved Alan Wayne and he loved me. This man not only suspects but dislikes me. His eyes have never looked kindly into mine. He comes to see me—he talks to me—but there is fear on his face all the time. If he is afraid of no one else on earth, he is afraid of me."

"You make me unhappy," said her father, gravely. "You spoil all my pleasure in meeting with Sir Alan."

She looked wistfully at him.

"I fear that," she said, simply; then her face glowed as she turned to him. "Art, you always say, papa, is the handmaid of religion; therefore men who follow art should have a deeper, keener love for truth than others."

He nodded in reply, for Paul Westerne never liked to shake his daughter's faith, and he had serious doubts as to the truth of this assertion.

"More quickly than any other, a man who loves art as you do, would denounce a great wrong."

"Of course, child; any honest man would do that," he replied.

"Because Sir Alan is kind to us—because he gives you grand commissions, and invites us to Carsdale—because every day he sends us luxuries out of our reach, you would not hesitate to expose him, if he were an imposter, would you, papa?"

"Certainly not," replied Mr. Westerne; "but, Edith, supposing it to be the case, how could we prove it?"

"It would not rest with us," she said simply. "Skeptics talk and sneer, atheists rail—but, after all, papa, you know—God is in heaven and will see justice done."

This very plain theology somewhat startled the artist.

"Of course," he said slowly, "I believe God is just; but I do not think there will be any miracle worked to prove your assertion."

"There will be no need. God clothes the lilies and feeds the sparrows. He will not fail when truth and justice are both at stake. You will be convinced in time, and then you will wonder at your present blindness."

"If ever," she continued, "I find that old drawing of yours and you see the face of the boy Alan Wayne, and compare it with the face of Alan Aynsley, you will believe me at once."

"Faces change," said her father. "I might not recognize you, either."

"Expression changes," she cried, eagerly; "but the real points of a face never alter. Blue eyes never become black, straight brows never become curved; sweet, true lips never grow cold, and false and thin. I can see his face; it rises vividly before me. I can see the tree full of scarlet berries and shining green leaves. He is sitting under it—sure as Heaven itself, the man who wears his name is not Alan Wayne."

Paul Westerne began to feel bewildered; either his daughter spoke the truth or she was going mad, and either alternative was dreadful to him.

"You do not take much notice of me because I am a young girl. Look down the rolls of history, papa; see how often Heaven has made use of a weak woman to bring about some great event. Do you remember Judith, a delicate lady of great beauty, who, perhaps, never injured even a worm, whose voice, perhaps, was never raised in anger? Who inspired her and made her the saviour of her people? I have not much time to think much of what I am saying, but I do believe the greatest good and the greatest harm in all the world has been done by women. I am not advocating a lot of nonsense, you understand; the name of 'Woman's Rights' is quite enough. I only say that sometimes Heaven makes use of a woman for great purposes."

"Do you believe that Heaven will make use of you to prove Sir Alan Aynsley a thief and an imposter?"

She paused for a few minutes before replying, then said in a low voice:

"I do, papa, believe it firmly."

Mr. Westerne laid down his cherished Havana in silent despair; arguing with a woman at any time he considered useless, but arguing with a woman with a mission seemed to him a compelte waste of time.

"Be careful what you do and say," he signed at last. "I loved the boy and I loved his father."

"There are three questions I should like you to ask him when he comes again, papa. Let me be in the room; I will not speak. Ask him first, what flowers we planted in that little garden at Wabash; ask him what he gave me when we parted, and what I gave him. If he answers these questions, I will own myself mistaken and beg his pardon."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Fate Leads the Way.

A week passed after the above conversation, yet Sir Alan had not appeared again at the artist's studio. He was far more pleasantly employed than in waiting upon Miss Edith's smiles and frowns.

Sir Alan was occupied almost night and day in choosing new furniture for etaoin shrdlu cmfwyp etaoin cmfwyp Carsdale. He intended to completely change the order of things; new carpets, new hangings, every modern luxury were to transform the old abbey into a palace worthy of a queen. He had plenty of money and he did not spare it. In the course of a few days Sir Alan was well-known at every bric-a-brac shop in London. No peer fitting up a castle could have excelled Sir Alan in magnificence, and he said to himself his beautiful Blanche was worthy of it all.

He gave commissions right and left, to artists, to sculptors, to decorators. Carsdale was to be unique for grandeur and beauty whn he took Lady Blanche Aynsley home. Lord Damar and his daughter were still at Cowes. It suited his lordship's purse to remain there. Nothing called him away and he was quite charmed with Lady Belmont—the most suave and gracious of all hostesses. Lady Blanche, after receiving Sir Alan's reply to her letter, submitted, resignedly, to her fate. For one brief hour she had hoped something would arise over Miss Bruce to separate them, but it had died away and left nothing for her save a deeper contempt for the man who saved himself at the expense of a woman's honor. Sir Alan was rather surprised at hearing nothing from Esther. Judging her by himself, he had expected her to claim compensation from him for her lost place. He had expected she would want money to live upon, as his refusal to clear her character would prevent her from obtaining any other situation.

But Esther neither wrote nor came. Selfish though he was, he wondered once or twice what she would do—if she had money to live upon—but he took no steps toward tracing her or finding her out. The greatest relief to his mind would have been never to have seen her again.

Paul Westerne came home one evening with delight in his face.

"Edith," he said, "my fortune is made; my picture will live now, and my name be famous for long years after I am dead. I am so pleased and happy!"

"Yes," he continued, exultingly. "My fortune is made. I have found such a face, Edith—grand, stormy, passionate, magnificent—a face full of power and strength, yet feminine and sweet. Just the eyes I wanted—full of woe and anguish; the lips full of sorrow; the face of a woman who would be quite capable of lying down by her lover's side to die."

"What a rhapsody, papa!' his more matter-of-fact daughter interrupted. "From whence did she come? Who is she?"

"It's a coincidence," said the artist, solemnly (he little knew how great a one). "I went this morning to Letson's for a new brush—you know, Edith, I have been looking for such a face ever since I undertook this picture—and while there a young lady entered. She asked for some carmine. Her voice struck me first; it was so clear and pure, but the saddest ring in it I ever heard.

"I looked at her face, Edith, and it charmed me; it will charm you, not so much for its beauty, mind, as because it is just what I want; a face with a terrible sorrow in it. She is young, no older than you, but I am quite sure every hope of that girl's heart has been wrecked, no common grief has shadowed her eyes and marked her lips; there is no hope, no love, nothing but terrible anguish. Think of such a face for my Niobe!"

"Are you sure of it?" asked practical Edith.

"Yes," replied the artist, triumphantly. "I spoke to her quite simply. I told I was an artist engaged upon a picture that I hoped would make me famous, and hers was the very one I wanted. She was very proud and independent. She looked straight at me and asked, 'Why?'"

To be continued.

SIR JOHN AND THE HOME.

Mr. Basile Benoit Tells a Characteristic Story of Macdonald.

The Canadian Club of Ottawa has placed the lover of Canadian lore under a debt of gratitude by preserving in its last published volume the record of a banquet held some months ago at which the guests of honor included eight of the twenty-four survivors of the First Parliament of Canada. They were Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Hon. John Costigan, Hon. Wm. Ross, Hon. Wm. Miller, Hon. G. B. Baker, Sir James Grant, Sheriff Hagar, of Prescott County, and Mr. Basile Benoit, of Chambly, Que. The reminiscences uttered on that occasion are preserved. Of the great Conservative leader, Sir John A. Macdonald, Mr. Benoit gave a couple of little incidents. During one sitting of the House, he said, Sir John was speaking on the possibilities of settlement in the immense fields of the Northwest Territories for a vast number of families. He appealed to his people in Canada and to the world at large to come and to take these lands and to build happy homes.

"His voice grew tender," said Mr. Benoit, "and I have still in the ear the words 'Happy Homes' that he repeated many times with a caressing tone and deep feeling, pressing them, as a father, to come and to found a happy home in the boundless prairies that God had reserved to them.

"Another trait of personal character that I love to point out," continued Mr. Benoit, "is the following: When I was superintendent of the Chambly Canal, Sir John happened to be Minister of Railways and Canals in the interim. As everywhere, some accidents happened occasionally to to the laborers on the canal. I asked Sir John what to do when a man was injured on the work. His first question was always, 'Has he a family; has he children?' On an affirmative answer he invariably told me in earnest, 'Find the means to pay that man; don't let his children suffer.' I do not refer here to what Sir John has done in the building of the country, nor to his wonderful attainments. I have just found in him a tender heart; his memory is sacred to me forever."

Waiting For Homesteads.

Philosophers will tell you that it is the lust for land, that hunger for a holding of his own that has sent the man of Aryan origin and his ideals of civilization to the four corners of the earth. It was this hunger that first peopled Europe; just as it has populated America, Australia and South Africa, and which has sent the white man to face impossible conditions of climate in the tropic lands. This primitive instinct, ordered and controlled, may be seen at work with all its original intensity at any Dominion Land Office in the Northwest provinces, when new homestead holdings are to be allotted. The rule of "first come, first served" has been adopted as the fairest to all parties and the scene resembles that in a great city before the opening of the box office sale for a critical collegiate football match or for some theatrical star of world-wide fame. It resembles it but it is infinitely more serious. It even has its tragic aspects. Frequently the waiting man is a down-and-outer, to whom the hope of wrenching a living from the virgin land appears his last chance. The eager men wait for days holding their places in line to make sure of a good choice. All sorts and conditions mingle together on democratic terms. Many languages are heard and under the influence of a mutual desire, a spirit of comradeship springs up, which is a check on dirty trickery; though this is not unknown.

The Speculators.

Many speculators think it a great hardship that they have to sit down and wait for the crops to grow.—New York Evening Post.

Some of the charges as to bucket shop methods make the gambler who deals off the bottom of the pack seem a comparatively conscientious person. —Washington Star.

Waves of Water.

There is no tide in the Mediterranean sea.

The Merrimac river is 183 miles long, including the Pemigewasset.

The highest of all navigable rivers is the Tsangpo, which flows for nearly 1,000 miles at an elevation of from 11,000 to 14,000 feet.

Three rivers as big as the Rhine would just about equal in volume the river Ganges, three Ganges the Mississippi and two Mississippis the Amazon.

St. John's Exhibition.

Ever since a persistent delegation of St. John citizens, by their energetic lobbying at Ottawa, secured the $50,000 grant, which goes with a Dominion exhibition, the people of that bustling city have been boosting their fair for all they are worth. The dates of exhibition are Sept. 5th to 15th, just at a season when New Brunswick, the Mecca of tourists and big game hunters, is in her most glorious attire and weather mood.

The St. John Exhibition Association engaged the services of Mr. H. J. P. Good, whose wide experience of seventeen years with the Toronto Exhibition executive fit him amply for the conduct of a Dominion exhibition.

In addition to the grant of the Dominion Government financial support is forthcoming from the New Brunswick Government and the city of St. John. As these funds are being largely devoted to marked increases in prize moneys, it is assured that competition in all departments will be exceedingly keen. Furthermore, the national character of the exhibition, the official tone lent it by Dominion and Provincial sanction, is inducing scores of manufacturing houses in widely separated sections of Canada to exhibit their wares, as it were, in a truly Canadian and representative ensemble.

In the agricultural and live stock sections enormous displays will be made by eastern producers and by many in the middle west, and the Maritime Provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island have settled down to united effort in safeguarding the prestige of the East against the wonderful development of the West.

Canada's Convicts.

There are six penitentiaries in the Dominion, and the population of these institutions in the fiscal year 1908-'09 was 1,765. Their nationality, as indicated by country of birth, is as follows:

Canada, 1,046; England, 199; Scotland, 34; Ireland, 54; other British, 23; United States, 181; Italy, 71; Russia, 31; Germany, 27; Austria, 23; France, 19; Denmark, 15; China, 16; other countries, 26.

The Canadian-born constitute 59 per cent.; the British-born outside of Canada, 18 per cent.; and foreigners, 23 per cent. Ten per cent. are under 20 years of age; 774 are between 20 and 30 years; and 447 are between 30 and 40 years of age. Fifteen per cent. are unable to read or write. Seventeen per cent. have been total abstainers, and 40 per cent. have been intemperate. In civil condition, 1,196 are single, 512 married ,and 57 widowed. The average daily population was 1,625. The criminal record shows that 1,435 offenders are serving first terms; 232 second terms; 65 a third term; and there is one case each of tenth, twelfth and fifteenth terms. In duration of sentence, 66 are serving life terms, but the majority are serving periods of two, three, five or seven years respectively. The classification by occupations shows that 603 registered as laborers and 129 as farmers—these being the two largest single classes.

The Opium Couch.

In the library of a Chinese gentleman the opium couch is as inseparable a feature of a gentleman's home as the armchairs and cigars of an American den. Perhaps it must disappear now before the prohibition campaign which is being waged from Peking, or it will remain under the innocent guise of a reclining reading table, as some innocent globe trotters have described it. Opium as used in the ordinary citizen's private house is considered no more a vice than tobacco with Americans. It is the custon; that is all. The host waves you to the couch for a perfunctory whiff just as Americans begin by offering a guest a cigar.

Touching Verse.

At first she touches up her hair
To see if it's in place,
And then with manner debonair
She touches up her face.
A touch to curls behind her ear,
A touch to silken collar,
And then she's off to hubby dear—
To touch him for a dollar.

SCIENCE WINS THE GIRL.

How Mental Suggestion Works When Two People Think Alike.

Scene—A drawing room. He and she.

He (a shy youth)—Are you interested in mental suggestion, Miss Arethusa?

She (demure and desirable)—Tell me about it, Mr. Summers.

He—It's rather odd, you know, but I'm afraid you—you are not interested.

She—Oh, yes, I am, Mr. Summers, so much.

He (encouraged)—Well, you think of something that you want another person to know, and you look at that person a long time. Seems foolish, doesn't it?

She—Not at all, Mr. Summers.

He—You look at the person until your thought passes into the other person's mind, and then the other person says something that shows she understands your thought.

(He draws his chair a little nearer.)

She—Isn't that lovely? Let's try it.

(He looks at her adoringly. She endures the scrutiny with remarkable patience. Nothing happens.)

She (after a long pause)—Yes.

He (amazed)—Why, that's wonderful! I—I was asking you in my mind if you would marry me, and you answered, "Yes." Oh, Arethusa!

She—Oh, William!

(A pause.)

She (presently)—Isn't science grand? —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Popular Drama.

Manager—We've got a great play here.

Backer—But it has no comedy in it.

Manager—The actors will insert that.

Backer—There's no action.

Manager—I've got a few dandy mechanical surprises to put in.

Backer—What has the author furnished, then?

Manager—Everything else except for required indecency. I'll have to hire an expert on that.—Cleveland Leader.

The Old "Chanticler."

Ethelyn—Oh, grandmamma, Jack and I were to see the new play last night! All the players were dressed to represent barnyard fowls.

Grandmamma—Why, that's nothing. The summer before I was married I had a duck suit, a leghorn hat trimmed with canary ribbon, and every one said your grandfather was the biggest quack in town.—Judge.

She Knew the Answer.

A reporter called on a rector to ask him if he had accepted a bishopric that had been offered him. The servant said that her master could not be seen. He was at prayer seeking for guidance. Then could the reporter see the rector's wife? "Oh, no," said the slavey, "you can't see her. She's busy packing up!"—Circle.

A Neighborly Precaution.

The new clerk at the drug store returned the prescription to the old customer with a request that he wait till the boss returned.

"But why can't you fill it out?"

"I could if you was a stranger, but I ain't to fill 'em for folks that lives about here."—Success Magazine.

Tricks of the Trade.

Friend—What on earth are you doing to that painting of yours?

Dauber—I'm rubbing a piece of raw meat over the rabbit in the foreground. Mrs. De Jones will be here today, and when she sees her pet dog smell that rabbit she'll buy the picture.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

The Current Demand.

"Do you read Dickens or Thackeray?"

"No," replied the best seller author. "I know I'd enjoy them, and some time I'm going to read their books. But at present I can't take a chance on spoiling my style."—Washington Star.

Pa's Definition.

Little Willie—Say, pa, what is a matrimonial prize?

Pa—A matrimonial prize, my son, is the woman some other man married.—Chicago News.

The Link With Australia.

"This new line should be of great benefit to Canada," a leading member of the Montreal Shipping Federation remarked recently, referring to the first Australian boat to reach Eastern Canada by way of the St. Lawrence.

"Our trade agents in Australia send reports from time to time of the most favorable nature, to this country, touching the expanding market which can be found for our Canadian goods at the Antipodes.

"They want our flour, our furniture, our sewing machines, our pianos, our farming implements, in Australia.

"We can get from them large quantities of chilled mutton, which our people will like.

"This fact is of importance, the new policy of the Australian Government is to encourage immigration, and such encouragement would mean a larger market. It is our business, and this is the time, to get that market for the manufactured products I have mentioned."

The Girl From the Effete East

By ARTHUR DENSMORE

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

BARRINGTON was completing his first year of practice when Theodore Tuppenheim arrived in Knuckleville. Mr. Tuppenheim was selling stock in the Charitable Gold Mining company at 5 cents per share, price to advance to 10 cents at the end of thirty days. Incidentally he found time to foster in Barrington's bosom the spirit of discontent which ten months' fruitless waiting for clients had engendered. If he were a clever, clean cut young man like Barrington, did Barrington know what he'd do? Move west. He wouldn't fritter away his time in a mossbacked New England hamlet where people looked down on a fellow just because they'd known him all his life and could remember when he was a little shaver and went with patches on his trousers. No, sir. He'd just gather together his earthly possessions and take the first train for Gilt Gulch, Nev. There was the coming town; there lay the opportunity for an able young man to rise. No reason in the world why he should not be in the United States senate within five years. That would be coming some? Well, everybody and everything came some in that country. Why, sir, where the thriving city of Gilt Gulch now stood there had been less than two years since naught but sagebrush and alkali. And now look at it—just look at it! Six thousand inhabitants and more coming by every train! Simply couldn't get houses up fast enough for 'em. Had to camp out in tents. And every blamed one of 'em making money. Why, sir, you couldn't find a bootblack in Gilt Gulch who was worth less than fifty thousand!

This vision of wealth and political prominence was quite too much for Barrington. He adjusted his affairs in Knuckleville, which was no very difficult matter, took tearful leave of numerous relatives and of a certain pretty damsel, who was not yet a relative, but had rashly promised to become one whenever Barrington's income should suffice for the support of two persons, and hied himself to Gilt Gulch, promising to send souvenir postcards from every municipality he passed through on the way.

Now, underneath the lurid exaggeration with which Mr. Theodore Tuppenheim had clothed his narrative of the rise of Gilt Gulch there lay a respectable substratum of truth, and the combination of Barrington's ingenious appearance with certain letters of introduction to persons financially prominent in Gilt Gulch, which Mr. Tuppenheim procured for him, resulted in his speedily establishing a thriving practice. For the most part it was work in connection with the location of mining claims, and, besides numerous fees in cash, Barrington acquired several claims of his own, which he disposed of profitably.

In brief, at the end of a year Barrington had waxed so prosperous as to feel himself warranted in marrying. The Knuckleville Weekly Times announced editorially that it understood that young Mr. Barrington, for whom, its readers would remember, the Times had predicted a brilliant career when he hung out his shingle in Knuckleville, was now one of the leading men in the west, and the other village maidens were openly jealous of Susie Cutler, whose good fortune it was to be to marry a millionaire.

But Susie herself had no illusions. She even refused to permit Barrington to come east for the marriage. Her childhood lessons of thrift and economy had taken deep root in her mind, and she would not, she said, have the price of a round trip railroad ticket thrown away. If Barrington felt that he must spend the money, let him buy a cabinet organ or a secondhand piano for the front parlor. They would be married in their own house at Gilt Gulch and after that take a little wedding trip to Colorado Springs or maybe Denver. Perhaps, being a prudent damsel, Susie desired to have a glance at Gilt Gulch before she committed herself irrevocably. At any rate, matters had been thus arranged, and, the date set for the wedding being but two days away and Susie due to arrive that afternoon, Barrington was in the state of ecstasy appropriate to such circumstances. It was in this moment of supreme happiness that misfortune befell him.

The work Barrington had been doing requires to be performed with great accuracy; otherwise it is not only valueless, but may be the occasion of great loss to the client. Now, it is possible that Barrington possessed genius. People who have that, you know, are apt to be careless as to details. Perhaps it was merely that, being deeply in love, he could not concentrate his mind upon his work. However that may be, Hartford, the attorney whose office was next to Barrington's, had discovered in the course of an investigation of the records that Barrington had filed documents containing serious errors. He spoke to Barrington about it in a perfectly friendly way. Barrington received his kindly admonitions with a contempt which he was at no pains to disguise. Why should he pay heed to the remarks of a man who wore baggy trousers and long hair and played faro, to say nothing of becoming intoxicated now and then? He knew well enough what inspired these critical observations. Hartford was jealous of the prosperity which Barrington had so rapidly achieved. Let him stop caviling, said the virtuous Barrington to himself, and seek success by leading a sober life, as he did.

Feeling that he had been insulted, Barrington thereafter confined his communications with Hartford to a curt "How are you?" accompanied by a barely perceptible nod when they chanced to meet. It was with a good deal of surprise, therefore, that Hartford, glancing up from his rather dilapidated desk as he heard the door open, perceived Barrington entering his office. One had not to look at Barrington twice to be convinced that he was badly frightened. His eyes, which ordinarily regarded those about him with an air of easy toleration, were wide with terror, and his well chiseled features, customarily wearing an air of placid conceit, were now white and drawn. His manner toward Hartford was no longer supercilious. All his carefully constructed attitude of dignity had vanished.

"You've been in this part of the country longer than I have, Hartford," said he. "I want your advice as a—a friend, you know."

Hartford nodded and withdrew his pipe from his lips.

"Sure," said he succinctly. "What's the row?"

"Why, you see," said Barrington, "it seems that in filing the papers for Jim Busby on that last mining claim of his I made a slight error. I have been doing a large business, you know, Hartford—a very large business—and it was inevitable that I should make a mistake occasionally. It seems that some unscrupulous persons have taken advantage of this purely technical slip and have jumped Busby's claim, and he is very much exercised about it."

"I should think he might be," Hartford observed.

"Yes," repeated Barrington, "he is much exercised and quite unreasonable about it. He came into my office a few moments ago and demanded an explanation. Of course I couldn't tell him anything except that it was just a mistake such as any man might make, and he said I was lying to him. He said I was too smart to make a fool break like that and that I was in with the gang that were trying to do him out of a claim that would have made him rich. I argued with him the best I could, but it didn't budge him. He said he didn't see that it made much difference, anyhow, whether I was a fool or a knave, because either way I hadn't any right to live, and he wound up by saying that he'd just go down to the Jolly Dog and get a few drinks to put him in the right frame of mind and then he'd come back and reduce the membership of the Gilt Gulch bar by one."

It is significant of Hartford's broad and tolerant temperament that he did not remind Barrington that he had previously predicted such a catastrophe as had now befallen. Nevertheless a slight glimmer of amusement stole across his face.

"So you want my advice, do you?" he asked.

"I should appreciate it very much," said Barrington.

"Well, you shall have it," said Hartford laconically, rapping the bowl of his pipe against the heel of his shoe. "If Jim Busby were out gunning for me and I couldn't shoot any better than you can, and I had a comfortable little sum saved, as you have, and there were a pretty girl in New England who didn't know any better than to love me, as she does you, I'd go east on the half past 2 train, and I wouldn't hurry back."

"But the trouble is," Barrington explained, "Susie—Miss Cutler, that is—will be here on the train that gets in at 2:50. The trains pass on the first siding out, you know. The fact is we are to be married day after tomorrow at noon. You'll pardon my omitting to send you an invitation, won't you? It was quite unintentional. I've been so busy"—

"Oh," Hartford broke in, with a deprecatory wave of his arm, "you need not apologize. It's just one of those little mistakes a busy man is bound to make every now and then. I haven't Busby's disposition. I'll forgive you."

Then Hartford looked at his watch and found that it was twenty minutes past 2.

"You'll have to move lively, my boy," he said. "Keep an eye open for Jim, and if the coast is clear take the 2:30. If it isn't, walk over to Sand City and take the next one there."

"But about Susie," Barrington remonstrated.

"Pshaw!" growled Hartford. "That's easy enough. Leave a note for her with the station master, telling her to go back to Colorado Springs and you'll meet her there. If you don't have time to write a note, have the station master tell her you've been called away on a life and death matter and that she's to go to the hotel and wait until you send her word. Don't you worry about the girl. She'll prefer a slightly delayed wedding to an expedited funeral. Hurry up now. You've just about time to make it."

As he slipped down the main street of Gilt Gulch on his way to the station Barrington caught a glimpse of Jim Busby's gaunt profile as he stood at the bar of the Jolly Dog, his back toward the entrance. Barrington's indolent heart rejoiced as he reflected that the ten mile walk to Sand City would now be unnecessary. It was just twenty-eight minutes past 2 when he reached the station. He gave the necessary instructions concerning Susie to the station master and rushed out upon the platform. But the train which made up at Gilt Gulch was not yet ready to depart. A freight car had left the rails, blocking the track. Five, ten, fifteen minutes passed, and still the obstruction remained. Barrington grew uneasy. Jim Busby might at any moment deem that he had imbibed a quantity of liquor commensurate with his contemplated task and begin to search for him. But at the end of twenty minutes, to his great relief, the perspiring train crew succeeded in replacing the derailed car, and the freight train pulled slowly out upon a siding. Even as it did so Barrington caught sight of the 2:50 train as it rounded the curve just beyond the station.

A moment later Susie Cutler, her trim little figure set off by a skillfully tailored gray traveling suit and her face wearing the look of determination befitting a girl who had just completed a journey nearly across the continent alone, descended to the platform of Gilt Gulch station. Barrington rushed toward her joyfully. Within three steps of her he encountered an obstacle—a very serious obstacle. This was nothing less than the muzzle of a revolver. Behind the revolver stood Mr. James Busby.

"Now, young man," said Mr. Busby, "we'll attend to your little matter, and we [illegible] doing it."

Then Busby became suddenly conscious of a voice, evidently feminine, proceeding from some point in his rear and of the light pressure of a hand upon his arm.

"Do you know," said the voice, "it's dreadfully careless of you pointing that thing at anybody so. Why, it might go off."

Turning about, Busby looked into the piquant features of Susie Cutler. He decided unhesitatingly that, notwithstanding some freckles and the tendency of the nose to turn up, it was a rather pleasing face to view.

"So it might," said Busby slowly. "So it might."

"Well, then, stop aiming it at Har— Mr. Barrington," she commanded. "You make me nervous."

"Fact is," said Busby, "I was sort of planning to shoot Mr. Barrington."

He had lowered his weapon and spoke very calmly and deliberately.

"What!" shrieked the girl. "You have the audacity to stand there and tell me you mean to commit a cold blooded murder? Where are the police? A splendid place this must be to live in, where a man goes out to kill another as coolly as he'd eat his breakfast!"

"That's the way with all you folks from out Boston way," grumbled Busby. "You're always getting murder and the administration of justice mixed. I ain't going to murder him. I'm going to execute him. He's done me dirt, and if he ain't killed he'll do somebody else dirt. So for the good of everybody he'd ought to be shot. What do you care anyway? Ain't no relative of yourn, is he?"

"Why, no," she answered in some confusion, "he isn't a relative exactly—that is, he"—

A gleam of comprehension shone in Busby's eyes.

"Come to think of it," said he, "I heard something about his being going to get married. Be you the girl?"

She nodded.

"Yes," she answered simply, "I'm the girl."

"Then," said Busby, "it's clear enough to my mind that in interfering with this execution you're preventing me from doing you a great favor. Howsomever, if you stick to it that you don't want him shot and if you'll take him out of Nevada and keep him out"—

The girl did not wait for him to finish. She transferred her grasp from Busby's arm to that of Barrington, who during the preceding conversation had stood silent, his face white, his limbs trembling, cold sweat beading his forehead.

"Come, Harry," she said imperiously.

Meekly, with bowed head and downcast eyes, Barrington suffered her to lead him aboard the train, which was now, the track being clear, about to move eastward.

Jim Busby sat down upon the edge of the platform and burst into a roar of laughter. Long after the train had disappeared around the curve below the station the station master found him there, his broad shoulders still shaking with merriment.

"Well, you doddering idiot," said the station master, "what's the joke?"

"Oh, ain't he going to get his all right, though?" queried the mirthful Busby. "Did you hear her 'Come, Harry,' him and snake him aboard the train like he'd been a puppy hitched to a string? He got out of being executed, but he's getting a life sentence, and that's a whole lot worse."

Senatorial Repartee.

Once in the senate chamber John J. Ingalls was directing some remarks to Senator Hoar of Massachusetts. The other senator from that state, Mr. Dawes, having come in while Mr. Ingalls was speaking, thought the words were meant for his ear, and so, interrupting, he asked Ingalls if he was directing the remarks at him. The Kansas senator turned slowly around, for Mr. Dawes sat behind him, and then, with delicious intonation, but an instant wit, he said, "I was directing my remarks to the successor of Charles Sumner and not to the successor of Daniel Webster."

The repartee has become traditional, and the utterance was at once placed alongside of that reply of Conkling to Senator Thurman, which is also traditional in the senate chamber.

Conkling was speaking, and Thurman had said, interrupting him, "Does the senator aim his remarks at me; he constantly turns to me?" when Mr. Conkling, with delicious gravity, bowing to Thurman, with whom he was very friendly, said: "When I turn to the senator I turn as the Mussulman turns to Mecca; I turn as I would turn to the common law of England—the world's most copious fount of jurisprudence."

VOL. 43 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, JULY 4, 1910. NO. 254

UNION BANK ABSORBED

The Royal Purchases Halifax Institution's 45 Branches.

Directors of the Two Concerns Complete the Deal Which Places the Assets of the Union In the Hands of the Larger Company—It Is Expected That Eight Branches That Over-lap Will Be Closed Up.

Montreal, July 4.—The important deal by which the Royal Bank of Canada purchases the assets, amounting to about $15,000,000 of the Union Bank of Halifax, has been consummated as far as the directors of both institutions are concerned. The closing of the transaction depends now upon the ratification of the shareholders of the Union Bank.

As the annual meeting of the Union does not take place till February, it is quite probable that a special meeting will be called, notice of four weekss being given to each shareholder.

The Union has 45 branches, but it is supposed that the branches in Amherst, Bridgewater, Lunenburg, Sydney, Truro, St. John, N.B., Charlottetown, and San Juan, Porto Rico, will be closed, as the Royal has also branches in those localities. As for Halifax, where both the Royal and Union Bank buildings are crowded, it is supposed that the Union office will be called the Hollis street branch of the Royal.

The banking fraternity view the purchase with favor. Mr. John Knight, secretary of the Canadian Bankers' Association, said that both would probably profit by the outcome.

Miss Pankhurst Hopeful.

New York, July 4.—The Sun's London correspondent cables: The suffragettes intend to take advantage of warpath. Miss Christabel Pankhurst expressed satisfaction at the decision of Premier Asquith to devote July 11 suffrage bill. Miss Pankhurst believes She said Sunday:

"With a long pull, a strong pull be ours."

Arraigned For Assault.

Kingston, N.Y., July 4.—Ewing Watterson, the son of Col. Henry Watterson, the well-known Louisville, Ky., editor, was arraigned Saturday at Saugerties on a charge of assault, first degree. It is charged that Watterson, who is 40 years old, shot and wounded Michael Martin, a saloonkeeper, at Saugerties, Friday.

Railwaymen Strike at Brantford.

Brantford, July 4.—Employes at the Grand Trunk freight sheds went on strike here on Saturday, truckers demanding 16 1-2 cents per hour and checkers 18 cents. The company made a compromise offer of 15 cents per hour and $45 per month respectively, which was refused. Thirty are on strike.

Dr. Sutherland Buried.

Toronto, July 4.—Representative, impressive and reliant, with a tone of strength and power such as characterized the living presence of Alex. Sutherland was the funeral service in Sherbourne street Methodist Church on Saturday morning. Memory instantly recalled to the recollection of many present that dark and gloomy Saturday afternoon some months ago, when, in the Metropolitan Church, Dr. Sutherland paid tribute to his old colleague, Dr. Withrow. In that address Dr. Sutherland, with luminous imagery and a radiant magnificence of description, painted a word picture of a golden sunset on the Pacific as emblematic of the passing away of a Christian leader to glory. Saturday morning the obsequies were in the full blaze of a summer sunshine, with the meridian still unreached, a fitting hour and setting for the funeral of so militant a missionary leader.

The church was suitably draped with black, the only color visible being an outburst of gorgeous blossoms amid the profusion of floral tributes on the casket.

An Act of Clemency.

Ottawa, July 4.—A militia order just issued announces that His Majesty the King has been pleased, as an act of clemancy marking his accession to the throne, to approve of remission of sentences to soldiers undergoing detention in military prisons and detention barracks. Soldiers undergoing sentence of 56 days or less would be released, while those undergoing longer sentences will be entitled to a remission of one-half of the unexpired portion of their terms. Pardon will also be extended to deserters and absentees from the regular forces, who are required, however, to report themselves in writing. Men who have been in a state of desertion for over five years, or who are physically unfit for service, will not be called upon to rejoin for service, but will be given certificates freeing them from future service.

Deaths Caused by the Heat.

Chicago, July 4.—Excessive humidity caused seven deaths and many prostrations from heat here Saturday, although the temperature did not get above 88.

Providence, R.I., July 4.—Three deaths resulted from the heat in this city Saturday. The mercury stood at 89 degrees, with high humidity, and no breeze.

Gouldthrite Is Dead.

Fleeing Civil Servant's Body in Detroit River.

Passengers on the Steamer Columbia Sight the Corpse off Grosse Isle and it is Towed Ashore--Friends in Ottawa Who Believed Message Was a Ruse Are Surprised at the News of Suicide.

Detroit, July 4.—The body of Frank S. Gouldthrite, the former superintendent of the stationery department of the Ottawa Printing Bureau, who committed suicide last Tuesday morning by jumping off the steamer Eastern States, was found floating down the river off Grosse Isle yesterday afternoon, 20 miles south of here. The body was towed ashore and taken to Trenton, Mich.

The body was first seen by passengers on the steamer Columbia, on their way to Bois Blanc Island. The captain of the boat notified the lighthouse keeper on Grosse Isle, and he recovered the body. Marshall Winnie notified police headquarters last night that the body had been identified by letters found in the pocket. Lieut. of Detectives Tuttle immediately notified Col. Sherwood, commissioner of the Canadian police.

Gouldthrite left Buffalo last Monday afternoon on the steamer Eastern States, bound for Detroit, and was last seen alive sitting on the railing around the upper deck, and ordered by one of the boat attaches to get off. A few minutes later Gouldthrite's straw hat and the notes were found lying on the deck.

Surprise at Ottawa.

Ottawa, July 4.—When news reached Ottawa last night that the body of Frank Gouldthrite, the missing purchasing agent of the Printing Bureau, had been found in the Detroit River, it surprised everybody but the most intimate friends of the missing officials. While ninety people out of one hundred were convinced that Gouldthrite had not committed suicide, and that the message left on board the steamer at Detroit on Tuesday was a ruse to put the police off the track, those who knew Gouldthrite well were disposed to believe that he had done away with himself. It was asserted by one friend that Gouldthrite, before quitting Ottawa had gone to the Chaudiere Falls, with the determination of throwing himself in, but that his nerve had failed him. He was in a highly nervous state.

Mrs. Gouldthrite, who returned from Detroit on Saturday, has been convinced all along that her husband's body was in the Detroit River, but when information that it had been found was conveyed to her last night, she was much affected. Her belief was doubtless strengthened by the receipt of letters previously addressed to her by Gouldthrite.

Since the disappearance of Gouldthrite followed by the discovery of the frauds in the stationery department of the Government Printing Bureau, the authorities have been looking for Edwin S. Andrews of Toronto, upon a charge of complicity in the thefts. Andrews was associated with Gouldthrite in "The Mervin Baby Food Warmer" Co., with offices in the Yonge street Arcade.

Gouldthrite began his career in the Dominion civil service as a messenger in the Printing Bureau twenty years ago. His promotion was steady. Fifteen years ago he married a woman from Minneapolis, by whom there is one child alive, a boy five years of age. It was his experience as a father that resulted in his inventing a device to keep warm at night the bottled milk, which he patented. It is charged that the company which he formed to manufacture the article became a means of coaxing money from those who sold supplies to the Government through him.

He was about 45 years of age, short and light by build. He was of a modest, retiring disposition, and had a large circle of friends, who believe he was led into the system of frauds by others, rather than that he originated it. Just what the amount of the embezzlements has reached, has not been discovered, but it is claimed that the percentage that went into his pockets, and those of certain suspected associates, from huge quantities of supplies purchased, mainly from United States firms, may have aggregated a quarter of a million. Five other employes of the department have been dismissed and one suspended. Gouldthrite got $2,100 a year salary. When he built an $1,800 fence in front of his house, people began to wonder. He said he had been fortunate in mining speculations. A week ago last Friday the truth came out, and he was a fugitive from justice.

In official circles there are no developments in connection with the Printing Bureau enquiry, but it is possible that Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, may be in a position to make a statement after the next meeting of the Cabinet Council, to be held on Tuesday next.

Ancient Colony Prosperous.

St. Johns, Nfld., July 4.—A surplus of nearly half a million dollars, more than double that of any previous year, is shown in the revenue returns for the colony of Newfoundland for the fiscal year ending June 30. The total revenue was three and one-half million dollars and the expenditures about three millions.

The Deadly Hatpin.

Boone, Iowa, July 4.—A large hatpin penetrated four inches into the brain of Mrs. Peter McDonald Friday, when she, with a companion, Mrs. Andrew Simpson, was thrown from a buggy in a runaway.

Seized While Buying Ticket.

Peterboro, July 4.—James Matchett of Otonabee, 55 years of age, was seized with apoplexy while buying a ticket at the uptown C.P.R. ticket office on Saturday afternoon, and died shortly afterwards.

Accuser Is Dead.

Winnipeg, July 4—J. T. Prudhomme died suddenly of heart failure at his residence, 48 Notre Dame street, St. Boniface, at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. He was afflicted with a weak heart and had been ailing the last two days.

Undoubtedly the great strain, following the leading part he has taken for several days past in the provincial campaign, told on his strength. It was he who preferred the charges, denied by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that Horace Chrerrier, the well-known Liberal Manitoba politician, had offered to promote his now deceased brother, County Court Judge Prudhomme, to the federal bench, on payment of $10,000, presumably for the Liberal party funds.

The deceased was born in the County of Beauharnois, Que., in 1866. He came to Winnipeg in 1886, and since then has occupied many offices in the public eye, notably as member of the present Dominion Government's half-breed scrip commission.

Runaway Train.

Saranac Lake, N.Y., July 4.—John Brennan, engineer of a switching locomotive in the yards of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad here, was steampipe Saturday evening, and the locomotive, freed from human restraint, swept over the rails toward Lake Placid. Rushing toward the runaway from Lake Placid was a passenger train which had left that village at 5.30.

runaway sped on, but the escaping steam from the broken pipe caused it to slow down. Frank Rochette, engineer of the passenger locomotive, set his emergency brakes. The train ing wheezy progress. Rochette sprang aboard the runaway and closed the throttle, and it was backed to a siding by train hands.

Millionaire Fights Arrest.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 4.—John I. Beggs, president of the local electric railway and light companies, and director of the North American Co., which owns properties in other cities, has decided to make a vigorous fight against his arrest by the Socialist administration for failing to pay a city license of $15 a car for all street cars operated in the city. He was arrested recently to make a test case, and now has obtained an injunction from a higher court forbidding the lower court to take testimony in the case. This carries the suit at once to the higher state courts and will rush the termination of the city's suit.

Want a Magistrate.

Walkerville, July 4.—Residents of Walkerville are discussing the advisability of having a police magistrate. Under existing circumstances, all cases which come under the city's bylaws are tried before Justice of the Peace Reid, but the other cases must be taken before the Windsor police magistrate.

This takes time, and the Walkerville police are anxious to have a magistrate of their own.

Treasure Seekers.

Detroit, Mich., July 4.—A Cleveland despatch says Bernard McGroder, a veteran lake pilot, will lead a new expedition next week to seek the treasure lost with the sinking of the old steamer Atlantic off Point Canada, dead north of Erie, in 1852.

McGroder thinks there was between $300,000 and $400,000 aboard the ship.

Executed General Who Betrayed.

New Orleans, July 4.—A private cablegram received here last night from Bluefields, Nicaragua, says Gen. Matuy has been executed, following a trial by court-martial. It was charged that he betrayed the Estrada cause.

Big Touring Car Upsets.

Blyth, July 4.—About six o'clock Sunday morning a heavy 60 horsepower touring car was flying through Blyth on its way to Toronto, when it suddenly swerved to the side of the road, skidded on the wet grass at the edge, and without any warning, turned turtle in the ditch, imprisoning its eight passengers, with the exception of those on the front seats, who jumped. Only the height of the back of the car saved the lives of those in the tonneau. This kept its two tons of heavy machinery from crushing them to death. In about ten minutes all succeeded in crawling out of the debris, saturated with gasoline, which flowed down like a waterfall from the tank. The wife of the owner of the car had her shoulder dislocated and was badly bruised about the body, and one of the other passengers was unable to walk from injuries sustained to his back.

The cause given for the accident was the dangerous condition of the road, which had gravel piled in ridges off the centre, not giving sufficient clearance for the heavy car.

Biggest Meet Ever.

Paris, July 3.—The— Rheims aviation meeting probably the biggest scheduled for Europe this year, will begin to-day, with every indication that last year's remarkable success will be repeated. In the nine days of flying, prizes totaling $65,000 will be awarded, the largest list ever offered.

Nearly all the well-known men-birds of Europe have entered in one or more of the events. Among these are Rolls and Bleriot, the channel crossers; Paulhan, Farman, De Bonnet, Lambert and many others of the French flyers.

Sixty-three machines have been entered, including 40 biplanes and 23 monoplanes. The Farman biplane and the Bleriot monoplane are the favorite types. There will be 13 Farman biplanes to four of the Wright type.

For the first time the French Minister of War has delegated three army officers to take part in the meeting. These will be Capt. Eteve, in a Wright machine; Lieut. Comerman, in a Farman, and Lieut. Anquavin, in a Bleriot monoplane.

May Fly to Toronto.

Montreal, July 4.—Count de Lesseps, the famous French aviator, has he crossed the English Channel, arrives in good shape, he will consider undertaking a flight from here to Toronto.

Though the count has done some wonderful flying durng the present meet, he has been handicapped by his machine. He has only his small one here, which he says is but a toy.

The distance from Montreal to Toronto is about 333 miles.

The aviator's route will be through the St. Lawrence Valley and along the north shore of Lake Ontario. If he covers the distance without alighting he will break all non-stop records.

It surely sounded like the flutter of angels' wings when the wind began to blow from the north last night.

Here is an illustration of how our finances are managed. The last loan floated by Finance Minister Mr. Fielding in England brought 99 1-2, and the rate of interest we have to pay on it is three and a half per cent. This money is being borrowed for the purpose of lending it to the Grand Trunk Pacific. The rate the Grand Trunk Pacific pays us for it is three per cent. Hence on every hundred dollars we borrow for the Grand Trunk Pacific we lose fifty cents. That is not all, after that we lose a half of one per cent. per annum, because we have to pay that much more for the money than we are getting for it. No bank would care for transactions of this nature for the reason that they are not conducted on party political principles.

No more "Tag Days" in New York. Mayor Gaynor, on the 29th of June, vetoed a resolution passed by the Board of Aldermen giving permission for a tag day in the Borough of Richmond. The Mayor said:

"This resolution would authorize the women of the Day Nursery in Richmond to accost people in that borough for the purpose of extracting coin and other moneys from every possible citizen on the occasion of the tag day. Such an authorization is of doubtful legality and more than doubtful propriety. The collection of money on tag days is made a success usually by the aid of small children—a practice which should not be permitted."

Mayor Gaynor, most people will think, is over sensitive. Tagging for charitable purposes is not a very heinous offense.

◆ ◆ ◆

Forest fires, a telegram from Fort William of June 28th says, are threatening the towns in this vicinity, and Fort William is clouded with smoke, it being necessary to turn on the big street lights this morning.

◆ ◆ ◆

The fires are getting worse at Silver Mountain, 20 miles out. Scores of men, women and children fought the flames all last night and could not put them out. The fire is near Mackie and Taylor's camps and making great headway towards Silver Mountain, which is inhabited by 200 people.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mackie and Taylor intend making a raft to load the horses and camping outfit if they cannot extinguish the fire. People are getting nervous. There has been no rain for four weeks and everything is as dry as a tinder.

Cosbey vs. Detlor—Judgment has been given in this action, which was tried at the last County Court sittings. The parties live in Sidney and own adjoining farms bordering on Oak Hill pond. The plaintiff owns the north half and the defendant the south half of lot 25 in the 8th concession of Sidney. The Stirling road cuts across the south half of the lot, leaving about one acre thereof in a triangular form north of the road, which is watered by an inlet from Oak Hill pond. This piece has for 30 years or more been fenced with, and been used as a part of the north half of the lot by the plaintiff. Last spring the defendant claimed to own it as a part of the south half and took down the plantiff's fences and erected a new one and also filled up some post holes the plaintiff had dug for a new fence. The action was to have the plaintiff declared the owner of the triangular piece of land by possession and to restrain the defendant from trespassing on the same. Judgment accordingly for the plaintiff. Porter & Carnew for the plaintiff, Northrup & Ponton or the defendant.

Lucas vs. Bruyea—This was an action tried at the June sittings of the County Court, when judgment was reserved. The plaintiff lives in Belleville and had a chattel mortgage upon the crops of one James Casement, who was a tenant on the farm of the defendant in Murray for 3 or 5 years. During the currency of the mortgage the defendant in the absence of the tenant went to the farm and took away a quantity of hay and oats which were covered by plaintiff's mortgage, claiming that the lease for 5 years had been surrendered by the tenant and that the tenant was working the farm on shares, the defendant furnishing the seed and each to have half the crops and in taking what he did he only took his share of the crops. Judgment has been handed out that the tenant Casement was not working on shares and no such bargain was made, that the lease had not been surrendered and that the defendant had no right to take the hay and grain under such alleged agreement and that the mortgage held the goods, the landlord not having distrained for rent and finds the plaintiff entitled to judgment against the defendant for $97.00, the value of the hay and grain, with costs of suit. T. A. O'Rourke, Trenton, and J. B. McColl, Cobourg, for defendant; Porter & Carnew for plaintiff.

Serious Accident at Coe Hill.

Allen Casement, an employee of the Anglo American Co., while at work trying to dislodge a fallen tree, slipped and fell about ten feet to the ground, striking on his upturned axe and inflicting an ugly wound from the collar bone to the left side. The men were quite a distance from camp and had to cut a trail to bring him out. The doctor from Coe Hill attended him. He is in a serious condition.

A Dog and a Song.

During one of the last birthday celebrations of the poet Whittier he was visited by a celebrated oratorio singer. The lady was asked to sing, and, seating herself at the piano, she began the beautiful ballad "Robin Adair." She had hardly begun before Mr. Whittier's pet dog came into the room and, seating himself by her side, watched her as if fascinated, listening with a delight unusual in an animal. When she finished he came and put his paw very gravely into her hand and licked her cheek. "Robin takes that as a tribute to himself," said Mr. Whittier. "He also is Robin Adair." The dog, hearing his own name, evidently considered that he was the hero of the song. From that moment during the lady's visit he was her devoted attendant. He kept by her side when she was indoors and accompanied her when she went to walk. When she went away he carried her satchel in his mouth to the gate and watched her departure with every evidence of distress.

Courtship in China.

A curious custom prevails at Huayninghsien, in Kwangsi. On the fifteenth day of the first month in each year all the young ladies and gentlemen take a walk to the Yenyen mountain. Each damsel carries a little box, which she deposits at the foot of the hill. Any young gentleman desirous of entering the bonds of matrimony may select one of the boxes and take it away with him, whereupon the fair owner of the box makes herself known, and an acquaintanceship is thus formed. Ill assorted matches are not likely to occur, as this custom is observed only among the well to do classes of society.

Rattled.

A nervous looking man walked into a grocery store with his baby on one arm and a kerosene can on the other, placed the can on the counter and said, "Sit there a moment, dear." Then, holding the baby up to the dazed clerk, he added, "Fill this thing up with kerosene."—Argonaut.

A HEARTY VEGETARIAN

SIR RICHARD ATTRIBUTES VIGOR TO ABSTINENCE FROM MEAT.

Father of the Scott Act Uses Neither Tobacco, Liquor or Meat—Despite His Own Rigorous Regimen, Sir Richard Does Not Force His Views on His Guests Who Find the Usual Dishes on His Table.

The Hon. Sir Richard Scott, the father of the "Scott Act," has been much gratified at the number of letters reaching him from former coworkers in the temperance cause congratulating him on the vigor shown by him in his recent speech in the Senate upon the occasion of the introduction of his bill to amend the Temperance Act. Sir Richard spoke upon the occasion in question for nearly two hours, certainly a remarkable effort for a man over eighty-five years of age. The good old knight ascribes his vigor to regular living, his love of fresh air, and particularly to his total abstinence from tobacco, spirituous liquors and animal food of any kind. If it were possible he is a more pronounced vegetarian than a total abstainer from drink. He is absolutely convinced that not only was the flesh of birds, beasts and fishes never intended for human food, but that its almost universal use as such is responsible for the decadence of the human race and for the existence of most of the misery and wickedness in the world. He, himself, has, since early manhood, subsisted wholly on vegetable diet and has found it abundantly sustaining and capable of sufficient variety to be always satisfactory to the palate. He claims absolute immunity from headaches, rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion, and all the other bodily ills that the average man and woman of to-day complain of, and says that if everybody lived and ate as he does, the practice of medicine, which he considers an unnecessary imposition upon the world, would soon become a lost art. The use of drugs of any kind he considers as nothing but dangerous. While he was Secretary of State, Sir Richard, like the other members of the Cabinet, gave the usual round of Ministerial dinners, and invited guests who were aware of the host's ideas on the subject of diet, were generally curious before they sat down as to the menu. But Sir Richard did not impose his tastes upon his guests, and the usual courses of soups, fish, game and meats were served upon his table. Of course the host partook of nothing but vegetable diet himself, and in a delicate way attention of the guests was drawn to various unique vegetable dishes specially prepared for Sir Richard but passed around the table for the benefit of his guests if they chose to help themselves. These dishes included vegetable soups without meat stock, fritters similarly cooked, salads, garden vegetables, vegetable butter, fresh and dried fruits and nuts prepared in various ways and made into a variety of dishes. Sir Richard attaches great value to nuts as an article of food, considering them of infinitely more sustaining power than meat. In fact, he is passionately fond of nuts "au naturel," or prepared in various ways, and whenever his friends invite him to dine with them they are careful to provide at least a couple of courses of nut food. After the last opening of the Dominion Parliament, when shaking hands with the Privy Councillors present, before leaving the Senate precincts to return to Government House, Lord Grey remarked to Sir Richard: "I am glad you are able to come to the State dinner to-night. My cook has prepared a vegetable menu for you, not forgetting the nuts."

It is not generally known that it is to Sir Richard Scott more than to any other individual, perhaps, that Ottawa is indebted for the honor of being the capital of the Dominion of Canada. Fifty-five years ago he represented Ottawa in the Legislature, was mayor of the city and before that had been reeve of Bytown for several terms. Shortly after the destruction of the Parliament buildings in Montreal he brought the claims of Ottawa as a site for the national capital to the attention of the Ottawa City Council and the Canadian Legislature. Gradually a keen competition to become the capital of United Canada developed, the principal competitors being Montreal, Toronto, Quebec, Kingston and Ottawa. There were repeated heated debates in the Legislature, and whenever the question was up Mr. Scott, as Ottawa's champion, was present, first as a member of the Legislature, and later (after his defeat for the Legislature), as a municipal delegate. After fighting over the question for several years, the Legislature decided to refer the subject to Her Late Majesty for her decision. The municipal authorities of each place seeking the honor were invited to prepare a written "case" setting forth their particular claims to the preference. On behalf of Ottawa, Judge Armstrong, H. J. Friel and Mr. Scott were deputed to each prepare a case, the most complete one to be forwarded to England. Mr. Scott's was selected and forwarded in May, 1857. December 31 the same year, word was received from Mr. Henry Labouchere, the Colonial Secretary, that Her Majesty had chosen Ottawa as the site of the capital. That, however, was not the final adjustment of the question. Rival cities persisted in putting forward their claims, and in the Legislature the whole question was fought out anew. But Mr. Scott was by this time again a member of the House and spoke and canvassed on behalf of Ottawa. In 1858 a motion to reject the choice of Ottawa was carried by a vote of 64 to 50, but Mr. Scott at once moved for a reconsideration, and at the following session succeeded in having a vote passed to accept Her Majesty's recommendation. Still the rivals of Ottawa were not content, and the question remained open until, urged all the time by Mr. Scott, the Government placed the contracts for the Parliament buildings in 1859.

TRAPPERS AND TRADERS.

The Men Who Harvest the Furs Lead a Hard Life.

The history of a lady's fur coat is, if one thinks of it, full of strange contrasts. A wild creature of the Canadian forests, a silent Indian trapper and his wife, a lone Hudson Bay Co. trader, the half-breed peddlers of a "north" canoe, the hands of the Hudson Bay steamer in the icefloes off Ungava, the employes of a British railway company, the operatives of a London furrier—all these may have played a part in the making of the coat before it can appear in the windows of a shop in Bond street or on the back of some proud lady of St. James'. The fur trade is one of the few departments of modern business about which there still lingers the odor of romance. Other trades have been revolutionized by nineteenth century science; it has remained, almost alone, primitive in its methods. Since the day when "The Honorable Company of Adventurers trading into Hudson Bay" was founded by Prince Rupert it has hardly changed at all. In unimportant details it may have altered, perhaps. The trade-mark of a famous Pittsburg steel works may now be stamped upon the Indian's traps; and the legend "Made in Germany" may now adorn the barter that is given for the furs; but these slight innovations have the force of bald anachronisms. They stand out sharply from the surroundings into which they are intruded, and they merely serve to show by contrast how primitive these are.

The life of the bush is a closed book to most people. A great deal has been written about the life of the wild animals that furnish the fur, but very little has been written about the life of the traders and trappers who collect it, though the latter is a subject full of the most romantic interest. The life of the bush often appears on the surface one of bitter trial and hardship. The Indian trapper often goes through trials and hardships that would crush another man. He goes off in the autumn to his winter's hunting ground with a single small canoe; he sleeps all winter in a bark tepee or in a canvas tent, when he does not roll up in his rabbit-skin in the snow; he travels through the bush when the mercury is frozen in the glass, snowshoeing with his pack upon his back and his rifle on his arm, through windfall and through tangled swamp, and, worst of all, through perilous burnt bush where a wilderness of charred poles sway in the wind like the masts of countless ships. Comfort is a thing he knows not. He lives on pork and beans, and flour and tea. His clothes he never changes, night or day. His only remedy for all the ills that flesh is heir to is a drink of burning painkiller. He lives and dies in debt, and would not become solvent if he could. A good winter may bring him in $500; a bad winter $50. On the whole, his life is that of Hobbes' natural man, "nasty, poor, mean, brutish and short." But, on the other hand, he is quite content. He does not feel the need of comfort or a balance in the bank; and he has a stoical and philosophic calm that enables him to take with equal mind whatever the gods may send. He may always get, he argues, credit with the traders. Why, then, should he take thought for the morrow—what he should eat or what he should put on?

The trader's lot seems even harder, because he has, as a rule, known better things. The Hudson Bay Co. traders are, with a curious unanimity, sons of the "land of wild heath and shaggy wood."

The labors of the traders are not arduous. They have to sell the trappers their outfits in the autumn; and they barter for the peltries in the spring. They have to sort the peltries that they buy, and transport them by canoe or dog-train to the nearest railway line or steamboat wharf; and there their duties end. The only time when they have cause for worry is when they have to meet with opposition. Then they have to fight for very life. When the Northwest Co. set up against the Hudson Bay men in the beginning of last century, there was a bitter fight, in which trading-posts were burned, and men were kidnapped, and often blood was spilt. The methods of warfare now adopted are those of commercial aggression; and they are directed mainly against what are called "free-traders"—free lances who set up beside the H.B. Co. posts, and try to win the company's Indians over.

Such is the life of the traders and trappers. The rest of the story of the fur is simply and easily told. Early in June, when the pelts have been gathered and sorted and cured, the great six-fathom canoes are brought down to the water and loaded with their precious freight. The "packers" (as the Indians are called) step in and man the thwarts. The procession of canoes streams out across the lake. With gaudy handkerchiefs the Indian village waves a last farewell, and the fur brigade disappears around the bend.

Few things are necessary for the wants of this life, but it takes an infinite number to satisfy the demands of opinion.

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

THE MONTENEGRIN.

He is Hospitable, but Dearly Loves the Vendetta.

To listen to a Bulgar singing is to make one's flesh creep or want to weep. The centuries of cruel oppression are only too manifest in Bulgarian music and words, but a Montenegrin grows restless over his songs and curses the powers that forbid him to emulate his forefathers' deeds en masse across the frontier. He does so whenever he can, but only in twos and threes.

When the Montenegrin goes raiding across the border it is really a more sporting affair than the well equipped and organized outings of the Bulgar "comitatchis." With him it is usually a private act of revenge or vendetta to which he invites one or two friends. Then they steal across the border at night, find their man, do their best to kill him and then make tracks homeward with the whole district at their heels. Perhaps the method of killing is not up to the standard of western sport, for they shoot their victim "sitting," so to speak, and do not give him a chance, but as it is the recognized system on both sides little can be said.

This custom makes men very wary, and the stranger can appreciate the reason when he sees a plowman, for instance, attending to his duties with a rifle slung over his back. But in spite of this they are the essence of honor and hospitality. As their guest no one can come to any harm, and they will do all in their power to make his stay among them pleasant and safe.—Wide World Magazine.

THE HORSE.

His Appeal to His Master For Humane Treatment.

To thee, my master, I offer my prayer. Feed me and take care of me. Be kind to me. Do not jerk the reins. Do not whip me when going uphill.

Never strike, beat or kick me when I fail to understand what you want of me, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I refuse to do your bidding see if there is not something wrong with my harness.

Do not give me too heavy loads. Never hitch me where water will drip on me. Keep me well shod. Examine my teeth when I fail to eat. I may have an ulcerated tooth. That, you know, a very painful. I am unable to tell you in words when I am sick, so watch me, and I will try to tell you by signs.

Pet me sometimes. I enjoy it, and I will learn to love you.

Protect me in summer from the hot sun. Keep a blanket on me in winter weather, and never put a frosty bit in my mouth, but hold it in your hands a moment first.

I carry you, pull you, wait patiently for you long hours, day or night. I cannot tell you when I am thirsty; give me clean, cool water often in hot weather.

Finally, when my strength is gone, instead of turning me over to a human brute to be tortured and starved, take my life in the easiest, quickest way, and your God will reward you in this life and in heaven. Amen.—From the Swedish in "Our Dumb Animals."

WHIPPED BY MACHINERY.

Automatic Floggers Used by Several European Armies.

Automatic flogging machines are in use among the military forces of several European nations. For many years the whipping was always done by soldiers under the command of an officer, and the punishment varied, according to the personal relations subsisting between the soldier and his victim. It was to correct this disadvantage that the flogging machine was invented.

The machine is automatic in action, and as soon as the culprit is fastened in position a spring is tightened or loosened to gauge the exact force of the blow. A pointer is moved over a dial to the requisite number of strokes and the mechanism is started.

With perfect regularity the victim's back is scourged by the thongs, the handle of the whip being moved by a screw device after each stroke so that the lash does not fall on the same spot throughout the punishment.

Each blow is of uniform severity, and as soon as the required number has been given the machine comes to a rest, and the offender is released, with the assurance that the exact punishment ordered has been meted out to him.—Harper's Weekly.

The Last of the Ruffs.

In 1762 the rage for ruffs, such as are seen on many monumental effigies, began to decline. A writer in the London Chronicle of that year says of gentlemen's dress, "Their cuffs entirely cover their wrists, and only the edges of their ruffles are to be seen." It is said that a distaste for ruffs was first created so far back as 1613, when a woman named Turner wore them on her trial for the murder by poison of Sir Thomas Overbury. The French revolution of 1789 much influenced British fashion, and the picturesque cocked hat and ruffles then gave way generally to round hats and small cuffs. The period of their final disuse cannot be easily determined, as men of old fashioned or eccentric habits have worn ruffled shirt fronts within quite recent memory similar to those which, according to Planche's "History of British Costume," originated in the seventeenth century.

MYSTERIOUS CONVENT

SISTERHOOD OF THE HOLY FACE IS NOW A MEMORY.

Order of Devoted Women In Montreal Who Lived and Practiced Their Holy Exercises In Heart of Business Section Have Disappeared—Tradition Says They Slept In Coffins With a Crucifix Before Them.

The evening of Good Friday is the time set apart in the great Church of Notre Dame, Montreal, for the Adoration of the Holy Face.

"La Sainte Face," a ceremony which consists chiefly of visiting the Stations of the Cross, with a period for meditation at each spot, hallowed in the imagination by the sufferings endured by the Saviour in the course of his agonized journey.

And when, the ceremony finished year after year, the faithful have wended their way thoughtfully homeward, they have asked one another, quietly and solemnly, "And what has become of the Convent of that other Holy Face, and what of the little nuns that inhabited it?"

For, not more than a decade ago, there was such a convent right in the heart of the city, inhabited by little nuns, who lived as austere a life as the Trappists at Oka, and, like so many other brave and noble religieuses prayed for those in the great world who did not pray for themselves.

It used to be known as the Mysterious Convent and was situated on the west side of Amherst street, just below St. Catherine.

The block containing the building with its big gateway, like a Porte Cochere, in the centre, is there still, but its appearance is changed, and one might almost say, like in so many similar cases in the West End where churches have been turned into stores and theatres, the money-changers have entered the temple.

Stores and business places are occupying the lower part of the block now, but the gilded mortar which was there when the convent existed, the sign of the old-fashioned physician, is still to be seen in front, and in the rear there are the ruins of the once-beautiful convent garden, with here and there in corners the battered holy statues that adorned it.

That little garden was the only place of recreation the little nuns had; and there they walked and meditated. This exercise and their walk to early Mass at St. James Church, on the corner of St. Denis and St. Catherine streets, were their only outings.

As a rule, they wore a black habit, with a small white frill projecting from that part which framed the face; on feasts days it was quite a treat to see them walk to and from the church in their special habit with the crimson front, upon which the face of the Saviour was painted.

Tradition has it that they slept in coffins, which were mounted on trestles, and contained a pillow and a blanket, and that the only other furniture of their rooms or cells consisted of a little table with a crucifix and a death's head.

At least one such cell existed, furnished in exactly that manner, but whether they actually slept in the coffin is a matter of uncertainty in view of statements made, by those who should know, at the present day. Suffice it that ten years ago some of the little nuns told the numerous faithful who were visitors to the strange convent that they did.

The rigor of their devotions is not however, to be doubted even at the present time.

They spent seven and a half hours at prayer each day. They retired to sleep at half-past eight, and arose at midnight. Then, like the Trappists, who, however, do not sleep again, they devoted an hour and a half, when all the busy world was asleep, to more religious exercises, after which they retired once more, to rise again for the spiritual and mundane tasks of the day, at five o'clock.

On Fridays they scourged one another with the same knotted scourges of many lashes which the Trappists use in their devotional system.

And, in reading this, remember that when the order was, so to speak, at the height of its prosperity, the Sister Superior was apparently not much more than twenty-five years old, and the little nuns ranged in age all the way down from twenty to fifteen.

All this may seem strange to those who pride themselves on being worldly wise, the scoffers, and cynics; but careful investigations made at that time showed that the matter was tragically real to those little women.

They believed themselves called to the work they were doing; they believed that they were serving the Lord in a fashion he could not fail to approve of, and many are the faithful to be found to-day who will tell you that not one, but several miraculous cures, were effected through their piety and good works.

For some years they quietly and peacefully went their devotional way, and then the fame of their piety, and the reported cures which had been wrought through their prayers, brought unpleasant notoriety.

They were never officially recognized as a religious order by the heads of the Church. As the then Sister Superior said:

"We are only verbally recognized, but God is good and we must have patience. We have only been founded a few years, and the little sisters of St. Joseph were founded forty-six years before they were recognized."

For a while after that the newspapers throughout Canada and the United States published sensational accounts of the Little Convent and the Little Sisters.

Then suddenly it was stated that some of them had gone to form a branch convent at Bideford, Maine; still later, that the others had gone up North to establish a convent like the Trappist Monastery, and after that came oblivion, as it were.

During its actual existence the convent was called the Mysterious Convent.

WHERE RICE IS KING.

In Burma It Is the Money Crop, the Exports Selling For Millions.

The greatest rice mill in the world is at Poozoondoung, on the Irrawaddy river, writes Frank G. Carpenter. Burma is about the best rice patch on the bosom of old Mother Earth. The country has altogether rice areas equal to the Province of Ontario, and its annual exports of this grain are more than 2,000,000,000 pounds. This is enough to give every human being on earth all the rice he could eat in one day, and still leave enough over to make a pudding for every man, woman and child, as well as sprinkle all the brides and grooms of one year. Rice is the money crop of Burma. It takes the place of wheat, corn and cotton with us. The exports sell for millions, and the people are rich or poor as the rice grows well or ill.

The grain is harvested as paddy. In the field it looks not unlike wheat or oats, but every kernel has a husk on it, and this sticks to it as though it were glued. When the grain is ready for shipment to the mills, it looks much like our wheat grains unthreshed, save that the rice husks have neither beads nor beards, and they stick tight to the kernels. It takes quite as much work to get them off as to grind the threshed wheat into flour. This is the work of these rice mills.

The rice paddy is brought to the mills from all over Burma. It is unloaded from the boats by East Indian coolies, many of whom are young girls. Bare armed and bare legged they carry the rice from the boats to the mills in baskets of 50 pounds each. Their hours are from daylight to dark, with an average pay of less than two cents an hour.

The paddy or rice in the husks is first winnowed and then carried to the top story, when it is passed through grinding stones so carefully set that they pare off the husk without breaking the rice. After this progress the rice is again winnowed. It goes through countless fans and shaking sieves, being again carried to the top of the mill and descending by gravity from floor to floor, shaken, grated and cleaned at every turn.

After the husk is off, the kernels are polished.

It seems strange to think of rice being polished like your best silver. The polishing is done with chamois skin, the grains being thrown back and forth against a roller covered with this material. The chamois cylinder goes around at the rate of 500 revolutions a minute, and when the rice flows out from it it is as clean and white as the first tooth of a baby. It then falls through a chute into bags and is sewn up by Indian girls, when it is ready for shipment abroad.

Head of Royal College.

Sir Thomas Barlow, Bart., who succeeds Sir Richard Douglas Powell in the presidency of the Royal College, is a Lancashire man, and the son of the late James Barlow, of Bolton. Sir Thomas deserted cotton for medicine, and has had a wonderfully successful career. He has had an amazingly long list of degrees and honors conferred by Universities at home and abroad. He has held all the honorary appointments that fall to the greatly successful doctor, and he was Physician Extraordinary to the late Queen, at whose bedside he was during her last illness. No one can accuse Sir Thomas of an ultra-courtly manner. A man of kindly and sympathetic disposition, patients invariably find in him not only a highly skillful adviser, but also a frank and strong friend whose very presence is a tonic. He is sixty-five and is a remarkably well-preserved man.

Odd Way of Smoking.

During the South African war a Boer soldier named Frank Brown was shot in the forehead with a rifle bullet. Strangely enough, it did not kill him, and after the war he secured employment on one of the transatlantic steamers. When fully a year had passed he complained of trouble in his head, and after a thorough examination the surgeon of the ship decided that the bullet, which had never been removed, must be extracted. This was done, and afterward, for the amusement of his friends, the wounded soldier placed a lighted cigarette in the hole from which the bullet was extracted and drew the smoke through his nose.—Strand.

Great Age of Parrots.

Some parrots live 100 years, and no telling how much longer. One which belonged to George IV. is still alive, but many old country parrots are still older and act and speak as young and sharp as ever. Long life in parrots come on account of extremely small lower intestines, so some savants thought it might keep man young to shorten his a few feet.

Scared by Mirrors.

When cannibals attacked Captain Greenhill and crew of the British ship George Fleming off the coast of Patagonia the Britishers held up mirrors in front of the savages, and when the latter saw their images they fled in fright.

The Broken Trust

"What is the woman in your pic[illegible] doing,' she asked again, 'that she [illegible]t look so sad?'"

"'She has just found her lover,' I replied, 'on the field of battle, and he is dead.'"

"'Dead!' she cried, in a tone I shall never forget. 'Dead and safe—she should look happy, not sad.'"

"I wonder what her story has been, Edith?"

"She perhaps loved one who is worse than dead," said Edith. "Has she promised to come, papa?"

"She was very proud. I felt as though I were talking to a duchess. She is not rich, I am sure, from her dress; but she has a patrician face—a strange one, too, very fair, with dark eyes, dark brows, golden hair and perfect scarlet lips. My picture will make a sensation."

"Is she coming?" asked the girl again, patiently awaiting the end of her father's rapture.

"Yes; I asked Mr. Letson to introduce me to her. She was very proud and quite refused to come at first. Mr. Letson began to talk to me about the picture and Sir Alan Aynsley. I said Sir Alan would be greatly disappointed if my picture were not finished before his marriage. The most curious whiteness came over her face.

"'Pardon me,' she said, after I told Mr. Letson how kindly Sir Alan had promised to give my picture the best place in his gallery. 'Is the picture you mentioned painting for the gentleman who is going to be married, I think you said?'

"'The picture is for Sir Alan Aynsley, of Carsdale,' I replied, 'a gentleman who is going to be married soon. It will be a great disappointment to him if the picture is not finished in time.'

"That little explanation quite altered her views.

'He will not be disappointed," she said; 'if you wish me to sit while you sketch my face I will willingly do so.'

"I thanked her, but when I said something about payment she stopped me abruptly.

"'I shall not come on those terms; it is a favor. I consent to sit. I take no payment for it.'

"'I, too, in my humble way, love art,' she said. 'I may have to live by it. If you will kindly give me a few hints, they will be worth more to me than money.'

"I gave her my address and told her my daughter would make her very welcome. You must be very civil to her, Edith. It will take many sittings to get a perfect picture of her face; you must make her pleased to come again."

"I will do my best," said Edith. She was interested in her father's story.

"She will be here this evening," said Mr. Westerne. "Show her your drawings, Edith, and keep her to tea."

The September sun shone warmly when Esther Bruce reached the house where Paul Westerne dwelt. She was true to her promise. She had been in London for more than a fortnight, yet Sir Alan had made no effort to see her. She did not want for money—the little sum she had saved with such pride for the home that was never to be hers—lay at her command. But time hung heavy on her hands, and Esther resolved to follow an art she was fond of. It was the merest coincidence that she met Paul Westerne in the color shop. At first she had been indignant at his addressing her, but when she heard Sir Alan's name and knew she was wanted to be a picture always before Sir Alan's eyes, she consented. If his sin prospered when he took his high-born lady home, at least her face would be there to accuse to haunt and reproach him.

She consented at once, and went that day to Paul Westerne's home.

Edith wlcomed her warmly—the girl who loved the true Sir Alan Wayne, and the girl who loved the false one met at last, all unconscious of the bond that linked their lives so strangely.

They met, and Esther's hand lay for a moment in the clasp of the girl who had pledged herself to denounce Sir Alan Aynsley.

They talked for a few moments, then went into the studio.

Esther, who was no judge of art, stood lost in admiration before the canvas.

"You want my face," she said, gently, "to put in such a picture as that. Your own daughter is a hundred times more fair—why not paint hers?"

"Edith has the beauty of youth and repose; you, pardon me, th beauty of passion and sorrow. My daughter's face would not fit such a picture!"

"God grant it never may!" cried Esther ,turning away from the fair sweet face of the artist's daughter.

Could the terrible story of her life be put into words? Nay, they were all too weak to express the sorrow, the love, the agony, the despair. Dead! why the woman who knows her best loved one dead—who can remember how he died, who can kneel by his grave—cannot even understand the hopeless anguish of Esther Bruce.

She liked the artist, and she liked his daughter. Edith looked so wise, so calm, so serene, so unlike her stormy self—it was rest and repose to be with her.

She sat while the artist began to sketch her face. Most unconsciously she assumed the expression he most desired, one of unutterable sadness, for her thoughts were with her early love, Paul Lynne. And she was asking herself if these things were real, or only a dream? Was he reallly living, a living cheat, a living lie, false to her as to every one, or did he sleep, as she once believed, where the waves wash the low Australian shores.

Paul Westerne thanked her, and Edith declared she should not leave them until she had taken some tea. It was long since Esther had heard kind words, and she consented.

To be continued.

WHITSUNTIDE CUSTOMS.

Remarkable Observances Are Found In Rural England.

It would be idle to inquire the origin of some of the extraordinary customs which still obtain at Whitsuntide, for the beginning of many of them is lost in obscurity.

All the history that can be gathered of them is that they have been observed from time immemorial, and that local sentiment will not permit them to die out.

Not the least remarkable is one that is dear to the hearts of the good people of Birdlip, a usually quiet village in the Cheltenham district. Down a hill which the neighborhood boasts a substantial round cheese is set rolling, with the younger and more active of the population in hot pursuit.

Before it can be captured many of the pursuers are rolling, too, but none so fast as the cheese, which generally falls to one of the crowd who is able to keep his feet. It would be interesting to know the why and wherefore of this cheese-rolling, but there is nothing to show this.

The County of Northampton has a Whitsuntide observance which is only kept up once in twenty years, the next year for it being 1923. It dates from the reign of "Good Queen Bess," and the scene of it is the village of Corby.

Its object is to commemorate a charter granted to the inhabitants by Queen Elizabeth which freed the knights of the shire from certain military duties, and other folk from serving on juries at Northampton.

In the small hours of Whit-Monday morning the roads and byways of the parish are stopped up, and toll is demanded of all who would pass thereby. Should this demand not be complied with, the pedestrian is seized and hoisted on to a stout pole, upon which he is carried through the village, escorted by the jeering populace, whose lung-power is given full scope for the occasion.

Whitsuntide is essentially a religious season, and perhaps one of the most remarkable celebrations of it is that which takes place in Cornwall. It is held in what is known as the Gwennap Pit, and in commemoration of the years gone by when John Wesley conducted religious gatherings there.

The service is of a most impresaive character, and on occasion it has attracted more than 10,000 devout Wesleyans to the spot. No distance is to great for them to travel, and some have been known to come from such distant parts of the country as Lancashire and Yorkshire.

The mention of Cornwall recalls the fact that in the year 1540 a church there was struck by lightning during the course of the service on Whit-Sunday morning. Many of the worshipers were injured, the storm being described as "awful" and as a "fearful judgment" upon the church.

Superstition is not quite so rife in these enlightened days, but there are still people in this country who get up unusually early on Whit-Sunday morning in order to see the sun rise.

They firmly believe that whatsoever is asked of the Almighty at the instant the sun rises on Whit-Sunday morning is sure to be granted. In years gone by this was a widely accepted superstition, in which there are still believers to be met with in the hills and valleys of Derbyshire and elsewhere. They declare, too, that their requests have been granted.

A veracious chronicler rejoicing in the appropriate name of "Arise Evans" has it on record that he "went up a hill to see the sun rise betimes on Whit-Sunday morning and saw it at its rising skip, play, dance, and turn about like a wheel."

In those days many marriages used to result from the mingling of the sexes in the various games and amusements peculiar to Whitsuntide. The young men and maidens came more together at that season than at any other of the year.

It was looked upon as the first "blush" of summer, and as lending itself to outdoor pastimes retarded by the cold winds of the earlier days of Eastertide and spring.

A TRICK IN FENCING

One Highly Distressing to an Accomplished Swordsman.

TURNS A DUEL INTO A FARCE.

Used by a Weak or a Timid Opponent It Renders His Adversary Practically Helpless—A Case of Two Playing at the Same Game.

A long and interesting chapter might be written on the humors of duels which never came off or which in some way fell short of deserving the name. A case which occurred a few years ago in Paris, the particular home and harvest field of the habitual duelist, merits mention.

A peaceable looking gentleman was walking down one of the boulevards with a lady on his arm when out of a cafe sprang a man, who dealt him a violent kick. The victim turned, only to meet the horrified apologies of the aggressor, who begged to assure him that it was wholly a mistake in identity. Instead of insisting upon an exchange of cards and the other customary forms, the kicked man answered, with much warmth, but admirable self control: "I cannot, sir, accept your expression of regret as sufficient. Your action may have been a mistake, as you say, but acquaintances of mine may have witnessed it and will go away and spread the news that I have submitted to an insult without avenging it. I must therefore and instantly slap your face with equal publicity." The other most becomingly assented, the first sufferer administering a ringing blow on his ear, and the affair ended with entire satisfaction on both sides.

Weak or timid fencers are sometimes taught by their masters to keep a more skillful antagonist busy by fixing the sword in one position, aimed straight at his sword hand, and then not moving except to retreat when pressed too hard. It is highly distressing to an accomplished swordsman to have to face a learner so instructed, for it means a great outlay of energy and wind to little purpose.

Comte de Dion once thus chased a retreating adversary across plowed fields for a mile and a half and finally under the wheel of a cab for the poor satisfaction of giving him a slight prod in the back. Dr. Clemenceau in his famous duel with M. Deschanel, after a swift and wearisome pursuit, halted, shouldered his rapier like a walking stick and strolled back to his original place, throwing the contemptuous remark over his shoulder, "And now, monsieur, I will await you here."

Catulle Mendes had a similar run after Lugne Poe through the forest of St. Germain, which he ended by flinging his own sword into the bushes, with the angry exclamation, "I am willing to die from exhaustion by the roadside, if need be, but not from running after a poltroon."

A yet funnier incident was that which occurred in Toulouse, where a lawyer of some note named Cazeneuve was called out by a landed proprietor whom he had offended by a speech in court. He repaired at once to a fencing master, as he knew nothing whatever about handling a sword. This teacher gave him the usual advice about keeping his adversary at arm's length with the poised and immovable rapier, but strongly enjoined him not to retreat. It so happened that the landed proprietor, being equally ignorant, applied to the same master for instruction. The master, who was somewhat of a wag, gave him the lawyer's lesson in duplicate.

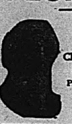
When the two men met and their seconds had duly placed them a long and tedious stillness ensued. For more than five minutes each foeman stood with his sword arm extended at full length, waiting for the other to advance. Then the seconds intervened, claiming that both had proved themselves men of honor and courage and that nothing further was necessary but to shake hands and be reconciled.

And this recalls the occasion when Lieutenant Randolph Ridgely of our army while in the Mexican war was sought by two young officers who had quarreled and each of whom wished the lieutenant for his second. It was finally arranged that he should act as second for both. On the field, where the adversaries were armed with shotguns, Ridgely measured off a line of ten paces and placed them respectively at its two termini, cocked his own revolver and announced that he would give all the orders himself and in his own way and that he would shoot down whichever of his principals disobeyed him in the slightest particular.

Then came the orders, very deliberately uttered: "Present arms!" "Carry arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Take aim!" They took careful aim and waited almost breathlessly for some minutes for the command to fire. It never came. Instead came the orders: "Present arms!" "Carry arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Right about face!" "Front!" "Forward march!"

They recognized his commands as given in deadly earnest and knew that it would be instantly fatal to rebel. He kept them marching till they reached his tent. There he halted them and bade them stand at parade rest till they had listened to a lecture on the folly of dueling which fairly made their ears ring. But he seasoned his dose of rebuke with a few words of praise for the soldierly mettle they had shown in facing each other's gun without flinching, and the two men became fast friends from that hour.—New York Post.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.



Sermon by
CHARLES T. RUSSELL
Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

The Glorious Liberty of the Children of God.

"The creature also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Romans viii, 21).

Brooklyn, July 3.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle preached today in Brooklyn's largest Auditorium, the Academy of Music, from the above text, to a crowded and attentive audience. He said:

To some the national holiday means a time of recreation, but to others it speaks eloquently of "liberty enlightening the world!" Even the enemies of the nation must concede that an influence has gone forth from these shores to the uttermost bounds of earth—an influence against tyranny, and in a broad, general way in line with the Golden Rule, which respects the liberties of others as it desires its own to be respected. It is difficult to estimate the weight of influence attaching to the numerous letters going from these shores to every country under heaven, to every hamlet and village and city. It is difficult to estimate the influence of the newspapers and magazines which go forth breeding the love of liberty. And yet, dear friends, every day and every year, as our ideas mature, we come to see more and more distinctly what constitutes true "liberty," and to distinguish this from "license," which sometimes steals the livery of liberty, to grossly misrepresent it.

It is not surprising that many who come to these shores from lands where personal liberty is almost unknown are inclined to expect more liberty than we can safely accord them. They are obliged to learn gradually the lesson that social liberty signifies, not personal license, but the permission to do only those things which will not interfere with the rights and liberties of others. Indeed, this is the lesson which all must learn in order to be good, useful citizens; a lesson therefore to be learned by all who would enjoy true liberty. It is the lesson of self-control; the lesson of minding one's own business; the lesson of speaking evil of no man; the lesson of doing good unto all men as we have opportunity; the lesson of intruding on the proper rights and privileges of no one else. But alas, how few of the world have come to rightly view the liberty of which we boast!

It is in the School of Christ that the pupils or disciples of the Lord Jesus may learn of him, the Great Teacher, the important lesson of self-control and the proper exercise of our own liberty, without encroaching upon the rights and liberty of others. Alas, dear friends, we must concede that remarkably few of the Lord's people have learned this lesson and are qualified to graduate along this line! Many followers of Christ continually practice injustice in the little things of life, neglecting to regard the liberties and rights of others. In the Church, in the home, in business, the rights of others are all too frequently ignored or only partially recognised. It is more important that we learn to recognize the rights and liberties of others than to insist upon our own rights. The former course tends to make us Godlike; the latter cultivates selfishness and frequently gets us into difficulty unnecessarily. The Apostle's instruction is that so far as possible, we should live peaceably with all men, which often necessitates the voiding of our own rights for the sake of peace.

This matter of insisting upon rights and liberties is moving the world more and more toward contention and strife, and hastening it toward the great time of trouble which shall engulf the whole social structure. Doubtless the great majority will be claiming their individual rights while almost totally disregarding the rights of others. We urge, therefore, that kind of love of liberty which is willing to sacrifice as respects its own privileges, that it may be helpful to others in maintaining their proper liberties. Nor does this signify that the people of God should ignore their own liberty and fight for the liberty of others. Rather we should stand for the principles of righteousness, and both by word and precept refrain from stirring up violence, or jeopardizing the interests of others. Liberty of conscience we should maintain in ourselves and should encourage in others.

St. Paul speaks in our text of the "liberty of the children of God." This, primarily, signifies our desertion from our taskmaster, Sin, and the surrender of our will to God and righteousness. It means a repudiation of liberty to do wrong and the grasping, through Christ, of liberty from bondage to Sin. But, as the Apostle elsewhere explains, we find it impossible to conquer fully the fallen flesh. We will find it impossible as "New Creatures" to attain the full liberty of Sonship under present conditions, because, as St. Paul declares, "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the two are contrary the one to the other" (Galatians v, 17). We have a constant fight to resist the enslaving influences of Sin—to maintain our liberty as sons of God. The victory will not be fully attained until our resurrection, when "This corruptible must put on incorruption." Then our new minds will receive new, perfect spirit bodies, through which they can operate perfectly, and exercise, to the full, true liberty, true freedom.

The full liberty of the Children of God, therefore, is not attained in this present life, but will be attained in the resurrection, when we shall be perfected in the Master's likeness. And in this connection it is well to note that this is the liberty of the angels also — liberty of freedom from Sin, from the power and domination of error and superstition and weaknesses through heredity. All the angels were thus created, and father Adam and mother Eve also were thus created, in the full likeness of the children of God. Some lost their liberty by disobedience; they became slaves to Sin and Death, and have been more or less bound by these conditions from then until now. So, then, "The liberty of the children of God" is absolute perfection—the ideal condition for which the Church is striving.

The Apostle in our text is discussing the condition of the world of mankind in general. He reminds us that "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now" (Romans viii, 22). In the nineteenth verse he tells us what they are waiting for, namely, "The earnest expectation of the (human) creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." The world of mankind is now enslaved to Sin and Death; they cannot help themselves; they must wait until God's time for setting them free from this bondage. God's time will come in connection with the glorification of the Church, and her manifestation with her Lord in the glories of his Messianic Kingdom. Then the groaning creation will be set free from the bondage of Sin and Death, under which it now groans and travails.

The Apostle reminds us that the slavery of mankind to Sin and Death came upon the world through vanity, or frailty, unwillingly. Our frailties are the result of sin and of the Divine sentence. Father Adam was disobedient and our Creator, in sentencing him to death, made the dying condition such that all of his children would be involved with him, as sinners, through heredity, and thus sharers in his dying condition. But God did not subject our race to this dying condition, this slavery to Sin and Death, with the intention of blasting the hope of humanity to all eternity, much less with the expectation of sending Adam and his race to eternal torture. Rather, we are to understand that when God pronounced the death sentence upon our race, intermingled with it was the hope, the desire, on the part of the Creator, that the result of that death sentence should not be man's absolute and eternal destruction, after the manner of the brute beast. In the Divine purpose there mingles a hope — a desire and intention that all of Adam's race who will learn the lesson of righteousness may ultimately be delivered from the bondage of Sin and Death, into the true liberty of children of God. It was to secure, in God's due time, for Adam and his race, liberty from Sin and Death, that Christ died for our sins.

Some of the nation look to the liberty that was accorded them by the "Emancipation Proclamation." But this emancipation is nothing in comparison with the great Emancipation which God purposes shall come to all the world of mankind through Christ. Enslaved to Sin, through Father Adam's disobedience, "Sold under sin," the purchase of the race by the precious blood of Christ is to be announced by the Great Judge who pronounced the sentence. This is a glorious hope, a glorious prospect, but as yet it is merely a prospect. Only the true Church has as yet been set free; and she waits for perfect freedom through the "First Resurrection." "The whole world lieth in the Wicked One," and still are slaves to Sin and Death conditions in every way.

The arrangement of Divine Providence for this great liberation of the captives of Sin and Death is wonderful! God's Kingdom is to be established and to exercise his reign or rule of righteousness amongst men for a thousand years; Satan is to be bound during that period, that he may deceive and entrap humanity no more. The knowledge of God and the assistance of Divine power are to be extended to every creature, bond and free, rich and poor, of every tongue and nation. Not only will the living nations enjoy this privilege of release from slavery to Sin and Death, through the great Redeemer, but, additionally, all who are in their graves will have the glorious opportunity of being awakened and of being brought to a knowledge of the Truth, that they may be saved by laying hold thereon—by conforming heart and life to the rules of the Kingdom of God's dear Son, and thus attaining eternal life.

Truly, that will be a glorious epoch, when to the great Deliverer "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God." It will be grand, indeed, to witness during the thousand years of Christ's reign the gradual liberation of the slaves of Sin and Death—their gradual attainment of full mastery over their weaknesses and imperfections by the assistance of the great Emancipator! Many of these poor slaves went down to the tomb in fearful anticipation of a future of eternal torment. How glad they will be when they awake from the sleep of death, realizing it as only a momentary interim! They will be advised of the fact—that the Redemption price has been paid by Jesus and that, therefore, he is fully qualified and empowered to set them free in every sense of the word—not only from the condemnation of death, but also from the actual blight of death—the mental, moral and physical weaknesses, which are elements of the death sentence.

True, the Scriptures intimate that all will not appreciate the privilege of emancipation from the dominion of Sin and Death. It is not for us to speculate as to the number who will ultimately be set free. It is sufficient for us to know that all will be brought to a full opportunity of attaining or rejecting the emancipation privileges. All will be free in the sense that none will die the Second Death, except by his own wilful, deliberate sympathy with sin and rejection of the righteous and liberal terms of the Great Liberator.

Pursuing the subject, the Apostle marks the Church of this Gospel Age as separate and distinct from the world. He shows that those who receive the begetting of the holy Spirit now, are already children of God, and already enjoying full freedom, full liberation from the condemnation of Sin and Death. He says, "And not only they (the groaning creation, the world), but ourselves also (the spirit-begotten Church of this age), which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption (deliverance) of our Body"—"the Body of Christ, which is the Church" (Verse 23, I. Corinthians xii, 27).

The Apostle is here pointing out that while the world is groaning under its share of the Adamic condemnation, believers in Christ also groan—though in a different manner. The world groans and travails, waiting for the Church's manifestation — "the manifestation of the Sons of God." The Church groans, not outwardly, but inwardly, while waiting for something different. The world is waiting for the manifestation of the Sons of God, because "Now are we the Sons of God" (I. John iii, 2). Our salvation will come, therefore, before this manifestation of the Sons of God, which will bring release to the world. The elect Church is waiting for the adoption, the deliverance of the Body in the First Resurrection. Our Heavenly Father has already granted us the spirit of adoption whereby we can cry, "Abba, Father," but our adoption is not yet accomplished, completed. We are already set free in our minds from the Law of Sin and Death, but will not be entirely free until our adoption shall be completed by our resurrection change. The adoption of the Church by the Father will be her full entrance into the liberty of the Sons of God, her full entrance into perfection, "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye" (I. Cor. xv, 52).

The Apostle continues the same thought, pointing out that the salvation of the Church at the present time is not her actual or complete salvation, but a hope-salvation or a faith-salvation. He points out that what we hope for is to be brought unto us at the revelation of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, at his second advent. He points out that, in the meantime, if we have this hope as an anchor to our souls, it will lead us to be patient in waiting for the glorious things of the Divine arrangement. It will lead us to wait patiently for the Lord's time for our own blessing and further opportunity for service in bestowing God's blessings upon the world. We are to wait for our deliverance, with patience, and in this we shall be exercising and developing one of the graces of the holy Spirit necessary for our perfecting. It is not sufficient that we learn to love liberty; we must learn full submission to the Divine will and to receive our liberty, in kind and in time, according to the good pleasure of the Father.

The expression, "The redemption of our Body," does not refer to the Lord's people, individually, for each of us will have a separate body in the resurrection. The Apostle's thought is that of the Scriptures in general, namely, that there is one Body, which is the Church; and that, so far as our complete adoption by the Father is concerned, this must be done in unison; he will not receive the Church separately, member by member, but altogether, at the close of this age. Then so many as shall have fought the good fight of faith and finished their course, so many as shall be found worthy a place with our Lord in his throne will be "changed" in the "First Resurrection." These will be presented together as one glorious Body, or "Church of the living God, whose names are written in heaven."

So far, then, as the world is concerned, let us think less of assisting them to individual and personal liberty than to freedom from the yoke of Sin. Let us rejoice in the privilege and opportunity which, if faithful, we will have by and by with the Master, of delivering or setting at liberty from sin and death the entire groaning creation. Let us remember that to attain this we must become members of the glorified Kingdom, which will extend this blessing to all the families of earth.

Busy London Methodists.

A great fund is in contemplation for the development and reconstruction of Wesleyan church work in London. The sum of $1,250,000 is likely to be fixed on as the minimum required. It will be remembered that the Wesleyans celebrated the advent of the twentieth century by raising a fund of a million guineas for church purposes. Since then the denomination has grown in wealth. As Londoners subscribed $925,000 to the twentieth century fund, which was for the purposes of the denomination in general, it is not likely that they will shrink from the task of subscribing $1,250,000 for work in their own midst.

Remarkable Blind Man.

There has just died, at Boxgrove, Chichester, a remarkable blind man, named Stephen Targett, who was in his ninety-third year. More than fifty years ago Targett lost his eyesight while at work in Woolwich Arsenal, and, being pensioned off, went to live at Halnaker. He was appointed village post master, and for twenty years daily delivered and collected letters in the district. For thirty years he was the local newsagent, and he sang in the village choir for forty years. He learnt to make fibre mats and clothes baskets, both of which he supplied to the ducal houses of Goodwood and Molecomb.

Army Airship Wrecked.

A new army airship was wrecked the other day on Farnborough Common, near Aldershot. The airship was towed out for inspection by engineers, and had no sooner reached the Common than the wind caught it, beating it about from side to side, and almost carrying the men holding it off their feet. An endeavor was immediately made to get the balloon back to the shed, but a strong gust caught it broadside, and the balloon struck the ground with great force, ripping the rubber envelope from end to end and smashing the framework to splinters. No one was injured.

FRENCH OPENED THE ROAD.

How the General Cleared the Way at Klipdrift, South Africa.

Many Canadians are probably unaware of how brilliant a soldier Gen. Sir John French, who is now in Canada on a mission to inspect the military forces of this Dominion, really is. By critics as disinterested as the German military attaches who accompanied the British forces in the South African campaign he is regarded as one of the most brilliant cavalry leaders who ever commanded men. The feat which impressed them, and which is described at length in their report on the tactics and strategy with which the war was conducted made for the German War Office, occurred at Klipdrift, on the road to Kimberley. Gen. French was in command of the force which sought to open the way to Kimberley then under siege. He advanced with a force of six thousand cavalry and a supporting force of artillery, and on arrival at Klipdrift it was found that the Boers had fortified every height on the other side of a deep valley and had, as they thought, absolutely blocked the road to Kimberley, since they could not be dislodged except at terrible loss of life and by an enormously superior force. Scanning the hills with his glasses Gen. French discerned what is known as a "saddle" or gap between two hills. The Boers had so fortified the slopes of these that on short notice they could annihilate any force that attempted to get through the gap. Quick as a flash an inspiration came to him. He at once gave orders for his artillery to open fire and thus draw on themselves the fire of the guns of the Boers on the opposite height. This was but a cover for his main scheme. His whole force of six thousand troopers was shot like a thunder bolt down the hills, across the valley and through the "saddle" before the Boers, who were busy in their artillery duel with the British gunners on the heights opposite, had a chance to realize what was happening. Within half an hour after the order was given the road to Kimberley was open. French lost less than twenty men, and these were the victims not of the Boers but of careless riding. They were thrown and trampled in the mad rush across the valley. The departure of the whole force was accomplished in sixteen minutes, and that six thousand men could be sent away so quickly was evidence of the general's capacity for organization as great as the plan itself, of his brilliant courage and resource. To the German critics this was the most brilliant episode of the war either on the side of Briton or Boer, and one of the most amazing achievements in the history of cavalry.

What She Wanted to Know.

She was a sweet-faced old lady, but with an expression which showed plainly that she possessed opinions of her own and the spirit to stick to them. Someone, with a mistaken idea of showing her a kindness, had taken her to the matinee to hear "Carmen" sung in a Toronto theatre, and it was obvious to those around her that she thought that in her case at least the afternoon of Victoria Day was being wasted. At the end of each act she asked the same question, "Is there any more of this?" and each time, when the answer came in the affirmative, her lips became a little straighter, her back a little stiffer, and her expression more disapproving. For her Carmen sang and danced and coaxed and intrigued in vain; it was not to such as her the cigarette girl's wiles appealed.

At last she could stand it no longer, and she made her decision clear: "Through three acts of this awful thing have I sat," she explained to the attentive young man who was her escort, "and not another minute will I endure it. I've seen troubles enough and wickedness enough to make your poor dear father turn in his grave if he knew I was here, and now I'm going home. Here have I wasted three mortal hours and, thank Heaven, I haven't understood enough to make a decent woman blush, though I've half a mind to let you stay, son, to see if that young hussy gets her deserts before the show's over."

Apple Exports.

Those who know say that Canada in the very near future will monopolize practically the whole trade in export winter apples from the continent of North America. It is estimated that we now produce 12,000,000 barrels a year. Our commercial orchards are confined principally to the three Provinces of Nova Scotia, Ontario and British Columbia. In 1908, besides furnishing our own home market, we supplied Great Britain with 59 per cent. of her imports of apples, and sent a considerable quantity to more than 22 other countries. In 1909, we sent Great Britain 49 per cent. of her requirements of apples. Our largest customers in 1909, besides the United Kingdom, were the United States, $37,698; British Africa, $32,689, and Newfoundland, $18,365. Our apples travel to such places as Fiji, China, and Japan. In addition our exports of evaporated apples are growing. In 1907 they were 3,718,372 pounds, in 1908, 6,939,028 pounds; and in 1909, 4,973,562 pounds. Our principal customers for evaporated apples are Holland, Germany, and the United States. The recent improvement in trade relations with Germany is expected to open a wide market for Canadian apples. In 1903, for instance, Canada's exports of evaporated apples to Germany amounted to 4,289,314 pounds, but in surtax times this went as low as 377,250 pounds.

Canada First In Cheese.

Canada is the greatest cheese exporting country in the world. Even though our exports for 1908-'09 dropped to 164,907,139 pounds, we are still ahead of Holland, our nearest competitor. Great Britain is the world's largest importer of cheese. Although she produces an estimated quantity of 300,000,000 pounds of cheese a year, yet her imports in 1906 were 289,371,824 pounds, and Canada supplied the bulk of this, or 214,877,077 pounds. Germany was the next largest importer to Great Britain, with 48,187,525 pounds; France third, with 44,714,972 pounds; the United States fourth, with 33,848,766 pounds, and Belgium fifth, with 30,333,690 pounds.

The Big Fight at Reno.

Up to hour of going to press.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Reno, Nevada, July 4. —There may be having a sane Fourth of July in every other part of the United States but not so here.

This city is fight crazy and shows it in marked degree this morning. For two nights this place has been wide awake all through, and saloons gambling places, restaurants and every other public place this morning was filled with quarrelsome crowds There was something of a sensation here when it was noised about that Jeffries had notified Tex Rickard he would not enter the ring unless the canvas covering on the floor was removed. Jeffries' theory is that this is too slippery and might result in broken bones for either fighter too early in the game.

Pocket picking and theft among the crowds are so common that people, except victims themselves, are taking very little notice of it.

Altogether it promises to be the wildest fight day in the history of the United States.

Those who have seen Jeffries and Johnson in their fighting quarters this morning declare that each man is well and truly fit.

The betting is ten to seven on Jeffries, but slid to ten to six, when a prominent New Yorker placed ten thousand dollars on the boilermaker at those odds.

Sullivan, Kilrain, Fitzimmons, Corbett, Burns, and all the big pugilists and sports living to-day are here and most of them favor Jeffries.

The police force now numbers three thousand, including special constables. Special guarded camps have been organized to take care of those among the eighteen thousand spectators who get into trouble.

Reno, Nevada, July 4. —(later)— Jeffries' kick about the canvass on the ring stage seems to have appealed to the promoters and men are now scurrying the town looking for some other material to cover the boards.

Notwithstanding odds in betting against him, with the great battle of his life only a few hours off, Jack Johnson is not discouraged. "It's a dark secret," said the negro this afternoon, grinning broadly, "but when the fight starts they will all be color blind, and betting may change around. I am going to win that fight." Jeffries is not doing any punning, but he is equally confident

Did Not Trust Council.

Under a somewhat curious will left by Mr. Patrick Murphy, whose estate totalled $517,000, the town of Newry, County Down, Ireland, has been bequeathed a large portion of the property to pay off the local municipal debt. Mr. Murphy states in his will that as the bequest may be insufficient for the purpose, and "as I have no confidence either in the ability or good sense of the present urban councillors, it is my will that my residuary personal estate shall not be handed over to the board for a period of 21 years from the date of my death," the interest and dividends to be invested. Mr. Murphy directs that certain houses are not to be sold, but the rents are to be applied in perpetuity for the reduction of the rates.

"Spooks" Terrorize Family.

A curious story comes from Dunfermline. The recent occurrence of four fires in rapid succession in the household of Thomas Watson, has had the effect of terrorizing the family. These outbreaks have each had their origin in a cause which is inscrutable to the occupants of the house, and Mrs. Watson, who hails from the Highlands, imagines that a supernatural agent has been at work. She, with others in the domicile, have lately been living in dread. Afraid to go to bed o' nights, members of the family have sat up to watch for further manifestations of the strange, uncanny, "unseen power."

Employs 30,000 Hands.

Sir Weetman Pearson, who has had much to do with the development of the oil-fields of Mexico, and is likely to be a principal figure in the forthcoming "oil war," is head of the great firm of contractors bearing his name, which employs something like 30,000 hands. Engineer, dock, tunnel, railway, and bridge builder, Sir Weetman has carried out some gigantic contracts. It was the construction of the Blackwell Tunnel that brought him his title, and other works standing to his credit are the Southampton Docks, the Milford Haven Docks, and the Pennsylvanian Railroad tunnels.

Mrs. Pat's House.

One of the most remarkable houses in the world is the London residence of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress, whose recent entrance into vaudeville has aroused so much interest and comment. It is in its furnishment that the Campbell residence owes its title to distinction. Each room in the house represents a different country, and within each room are gathered the various trophies, mementoes and works of art which Mrs. Campbell associates pleasantly with her visits to that particular country.

When You are Sick.

It doesn't take a good doctor to tell you that, almost anybody could do that much, but to tell exactly the nature of the disease sometimes calls for the utmost skill of the physician. Almost anybody by a few simple tests could tell that your eyesight was defective and that you needed glasses of some kind, but to diagnose the exact trouble and fit the right glasses calls for more than ordinary skill. We have given years of study to that one thing, and we are in business to bring wrong eyes and right glasses together.

Parrott-Parke

(Philadelphia Advance.)

At the pleasant home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bell Parke this village, last Wednesday evening, occurred the wedding of their only daughter. Lillian Maude to Frederick Stanley Parrott, of Belleville, Ont.

Pink and white were the predominant colors in the decoration of the home, to which added plants, vines and cut flowers made the interior of the home very beautiful.

AT GRIFFIN'S

Family Theatre the first three days of this week will be three big acts of Vaudeville, including James Wise, Cartoonist, who is one of the cleverest in his line, amusing and surprising. Also May Fulton, Character Comedienne, the girl from home, will introduce some very clever character changes. Must be seen to be appreciated. The management has also secured as a Special Feature John and Brady, in their own original success, Cohan the Cop, a laugh from start to finish. Don't fail to hear Mr. Brady's own original parodies on Old Grey Bonnet and Rings on My Fingers, and all other popular songs; without doubt the best act of its kind ever put before the Theatre going public of Belleville; also three illustrated pictures and Joe Carr in illustrated song. 4-3d

The Palace.

The following letter was received by Palace management re King Edward's funeral pictures, which can be seen Thursday and Friday at the Palace, with another new picture each night:

Palace Theatre, Belleville:

I take great pleasure in announcing that I have secured sole and exclusive rights for the Dominion of Canada to rent and exhibit the "Hepworth Company" (London, England) subject film, "The Funeral of King Edward." This company was positively the only one granted permission by Royalty to take this subject, and under these conditions special locations along the line of march, and at Windsor station and St. George's Chapel were reserved for their cameras and operators. Thus the film shows in detail and to better advantages than any other, the many features of interest in connection with the funeral. In the parade are easily seen and recognized the members of the Royal Family, along with foreign monarchs and their representatives. The subject in all comprises one thousand three hundred and seventy-five, (1375) ft. No matter what different takes of this subject you may have seen this one far surpasses any other and will bear repeating. Yours truly, Crystal Palace, Film Exchange. Everybody c.

BANK MANAGER DROWNS.

Canoe of Victor Kirkpatrick of Toronto is Found on Beach.

Toronto, July 4.—Letters and papers found in a coat lying in a canoe stranded on the beach at Mimico, afforded mute evidence of the drowning of Victor Kirkpatrick, manager of the Deer Park branch of the Dominion Bank.

It was learned that Mr. Kirkpatrick had rented a canoe at Sunnyside about 6.30 p.m. on Saturday with the intention of paddling up the Humber. The finding of the fragile craft by Fetherstonhaugh is the sole clue to the tragedy. Owing to the murkiness of the air, occupants of other boats which were out in great numbers between Sunnyside and the Humber Saturday night, were probably prevented from seeing Mr. Kirkpatrick's plight, and the siren whistles almost constantly blowing because of the fog may have drowned any cries of distress.

Mr. Kirkpatrick, who was about 28 years of age, was appointed manager of the Deer Park branch less than two years ago. He had been in the bank's service about 15 years, and had had experience in Orillia, Lindsay and Guelph before coming to Toronto. He was unmarried and lived with his sisters, the Misses Kirkpatrick, in the Spadina Gardens. His parents, who lived at Chippewa, Ont., died some years ago. One brother is at Prescott, Ont., and the other is manager of the Saskatoon branch of the Bank of Commerce.

Property Commissioner Harris is desirous of ascertaining if a drifting canoe was observed on Saturday night with the aim of fixing as well as possible the location of the accident. It is feared the body may not be recovered.

Sylvester Johnson, 18 years, of West Toronto, is the victim of the second drowning accident of the season. He lost his life in the bay at the foot of Bathurst street at 9.30 Saturday night, as the result of a curious mishap.

He with four other young men, D. S. Robertson, 195 Osler avenue; H. Milner, 353 Howland avenue; C. W. Wardell, 1,478 Dundas street, West Toronto, and L. Armitage, 58 Annette street, West Toronto, was cruising in the bay in a gasoline launch, which had just been launched that day. Robertson dropped something on the floor of the launch and lit a match to look for it. This exploded a quantity of gasoline floating on the bilge water and, with the flash, all the young men jumped into the water.

All the others could swim, and made their way to a scow, which was anchored nearby. Johnston sank. He was missed by his friends and the body was soon recovered. It was removed to Speers' undertaking rooms at West Toronto, where Coroner Hopkins will open an inquest to-day. The launch was only slightly damaged.

Toronto Boy Drowned at Ottawa.

Ottawa, July 4.—Vernor Deer, a 13-year-old Toronto boy was drowned while bathing at Britannia Bay on Sunday. His parents only arrived at noon that day, and while they were in Ottawa he went in swimming with other boys. His disappearance was not noticed, but his body was held up at 7:30 last evening near the pier. An inquest may be held.

Bank Teller Drowned.

Alix, Alta., July 4.—Howard Frederick, son of T. Frederick of this place, paying teller in the Union Bank, was drowned while bathing in the lake on the outskirts of the town on Friday afternoon.

Three Drowned In Thames.

London, Ont., July 4.—Three young men were drowned in the Thames River yesterday while bathing, two of them in the north branch and one near the pumphouse at Springbank Park. In all three cases the men were in swimming and all apparently were taken with cramps. The dead are: Alfred Clark, aged 22, a young Englishman, who was employed at the McCormick Biscuit Works, drowned at the Adelaide street bridge; Ernest Neil, aged 22, barber at Tecumseh House, drowned at Springbank; Wm. Baker, aged 24, employed at the Gorman Eckert Spice Mills. The bodies of Clark and Baker were soon recovered.

Drowned In Bathing.

Stratford, July 4.—John Wood, son of John Wood of this city, lost his life on Saturday night by drowning. With a number of other boys he went in bathing in Victoria Lake. It is supposed he got beyond his depth. He made no outcry, and the tragedy was only revealed when his clothes were found on the shore after his companions had dressed.

Captured In Canada.

Brockville, July 4.—Immediately upon crossing the border here yesterday, the Brockville police arrested Robert King and Frederick Payne, two young men wanted at Watertown, N.Y., for committing burglary Saturday night in Duggan's tobacco store. Descriptions of the pair were wired the local authorities, who lost no time intercepting them as they landed on Canadian soil.

When faced with the charge, they acknowledged guilt.

The men claimed to be en route to Merrickville, Ont., where a relative of Payne resides. They will waive extradition.

O, Those Laundries!

Lake Placid, N.Y., July 4.—The needless destruction of linen by laundries and the extravagant kitchen waste of large institutions were two of the subjects considered by the American Home Economic Association which adjourned here last night. Among the speakers was Miss Mary Urie Watson, of MacDonald Institute, Guelph, Ont.

Pope Has Fainting Spell.

Rome, July 4.—Pope Pius X. was seized yesterday with a slight fainting spell which necessitated the attendance upon him of Dr. Petacci. The doctor said the seizure was not serious and that it resulted from the heat and an attack of hemorrhoids. He prescribed complete rest for several days.

Up Over Two Hours.

New York, July 4.—Although an amateur, Clifford B. Harmon broke all American records for length of time in the air in a continuous aeroplane flight at Mineola, L.I., Saturday evening. He remained aloft in a Curtiss biplane for two hours and three minutes and only descended when his gasoline became exhausted.

The best previous record for dura-Louis Paulhan at Los Angeles last January.

Harmon is wealthy, and has recently made aviation his hobby. He carries a cane with him when he goes aloft.

Strike Averted.

Washington, July 4.—Official announcement was made Saturday night that an amicable adjustment of the controversy between the railroads in the southeastern territory and their conductors and trainmen had been reached.

The agreement signed provides for a substantial increase in wages and improved conditions and hours of labor. The adjustment also will avert a threatened strike of 10,000 men, which would have involved approximately 40,000 others.

The Day That Tells.

Reno, July 4.—The day of reckoning is at hand. Jeffries or Johnson, the bear or the tiger, which will win? A few hours more and, unless there is a draw, or some unexpected disturbances, two words will be flashed around the world, "———— wins."

This afternoon James J. Jeffries and John A. Johnson will meet in their long-talked-of fight for the undisputed heavyweight championship of the world. Gloved fists will thud against flesh in the open arena near Reno. And the son of a slave mammy of the old south, heavyweight champion Johnson, or the son of a preacher, the undefeated Jeffries, will be declared the most perfect fighting machine in the history of the prize ring.

It is estimated that 10,000 visitors are crowded into this desert city today. From east and west the specials disgorged their loads of sporting men, many of whom have traveled from the far corners of the earth. All day big automobiles, powdered with the white dust of the desert, have chugged in from the coast cities, from the California valleys, from ranch and mining camp, even from Seattle, a thousand miles away.

Buys Regina Land.

Mark Hambourg, the distinguished pianist, during his recent visit to Regina, purchased four lots of land or two double corner sites. These lots, writes The Standard of Empire correspondent at Regina, are pleasantly situated in the Lake View annex, which adjoins the new Parliament building site. Mr. Hambourg said that this was the first property he had purchased in Canada, and he considered his investment a good one. He was thoroughly impressed by the wonderful growth of Regina since he last passed through the town some years ago.

Canadian Critic of Bjornson.

The most noted authority on Norwegian literature is a Canadian, Prof. W. H. Schofield, of Harvard. He is a graduate of Toronto University and his summary of Bjornson's standing as a poet is of interest.

In pure lyric verse, says Prof. Schofield, no Norwegian has equalled Bjornson. Beneficent like the sun in the meadow, jubilant and dancing, full of fancy and fire, of earnestness, tenderness and pathos, Bjornson's verses respond to the varying moods of his people. There is something haunting, something of trolldom, both in his joy and melancholy. For Norwegians he is in poetry what Greig is in music.

THE PEAT INDUSTRY.

Dominion's New Venture Has a Promising Future.

There is considerable interest in Alfred, Ont., and in the surrounding country in the Dominion Government peat plant, which has just been started there, and which is the first venture of the kind made by the Federal authorities in this country.

Several previous efforts to manufacture a commercial peat fuel in Canada had failed, so Dr. Eugene Haanel and other officials of the Dominion Mines Branch recently decided to establish an experimental peat plant.

The Government acquired a peat bog of 300 acres located at Alfred, near Caledonia Springs, Ontario, fifty miles from the Capital. A storage shed that will hold 300 tons of air-dried peat was built; also a blacksmith shop and an office. After machinery was installed, men were set at work digging out the peat belt, and making it into small squares, or, as they are called, peat briquettes.

The process of manufacture is comparatively simple. The peat is shoveled into a carrier, which carries it upwards until it falls into what is known as a hopper. If it is not, when taken from the ground, moist enough, water is automatically sprayed on it, and then it passes from the hopper out into the conveyors, which dump it at a spot where a device for cutting it up into blocks passes over it.

This device passes over it in one direction, making fourteen straight cuts. Then it is cut at right angles to this. This leaves what looks like several hundred pieces of black clay, shaped a little larger than bricks. Nature does most of the rest. These wet blocks—for all the world like blocks of black moistened clay—are left there until they dry by the aid of sun and wind. After several days boys turn them over, getting paid at the rate of 8 cents a thousand blocks for doing so. Then the other side dries. This takes about three weeks.

It costs about 80 cents a ton to make the peat, 8 cents per thousand bricks for drying, 15 cents a ton for stacking, and probably 20 cents per ton to take it from the peat plant to the C.P.R. railway station. He thinks it can be laid down there at about $2 a ton; or selling at a profit of say 25 cents a ton, at $2.25. The plant started running on May 16th, and already between 200 and 300 tons of peat are out in the open drying. Many curious people have visited it.

Recently, after dwelling on the scarcity of coal and wood in certain parts of Canada, and the importance of fully investigating the peat deposits, Dr. Haanel made the following remarks: "Considering the fact that we imported during the year 1908 coal to the value of $2,850,000, constituting an enormous and increasing drain on the wealth of the country, every effort should be made to retain a portion of this money at home, not only to give employment to our own people, but to lessen our dependence upon outside sources." Dr. Haanel also indicated that the known peat bogs of Canada covered around 36,000 acres; that such an area would produce twenty-eight billion tons of air-dried peat, which would be equal in value to fourteen billion tons of coal.

O'Brien's Aesthetic Tastes.

Those who remember the ill-starred tour of Canada made by William O'Brien, M.P., nearly a quarter of a century ago when he sought to arouse indignation against the then Governor-General, the Marquis of Lansdowne, for his treatment of his tenants, will be interested in the following notes about him published in Current Literature:

"Life, habits, and residence have been transformed for William O'Brien by his feud with John Redmond. Next to his own native Ireland, O'Brien loves Italy. There he has lived with the lady of Russian extraction he wedded years ago, there he has studied the Italian classics, and there he has corresponded with some of the most brilliant students of this age upon the scientific themes that interest him.

"Few political agitators have so many intellectual interests as William O'Brien. He writes brilliant fiction. He is a profound student of Dante and Ariosto. He has fitted up a little laboratory for the chemical experiments in which he sometimes whiles away his leisure. He adapts himself to Italian modes of life when residing near Florence, eating spaghetti and wandering through art galleries like the average tourist. He speaks Italian well, and perhaps few foreigners are so much at home in the dialects of the natives of the northern provinces.

"In Ireland his tastes, although he is nearly sixty, remain athletic. Riding, shooting, sailing in his little cat boat—these are the occupations of his Irish leisure."

Ontario's Forest Preserves.

The policy of setting aside forest reserves is now followed by all countries that have considerable areas of land still in public ownership. The Province of Ontario has many such reserves, and it seems probable that still more will be added. This policy was inaugurated in 1893 by the reservation of Algonquin National Park, 1,733 square miles. Since then, the following have been added: The Eastern Forest reserve, 125 square miles, was made in 1899, and the Sibley reserve, 70 square miles, in 1900. The great and beautiful Temagami Park, 2,200 square miles, was then reserved, and the Western Temagami reserve, 3,700 square miles, was added in 1903. Others were as follows: Mississaga reserve, 1904, 2,916 square miles; Lake Nipigon reserve, 1905, 7,297 square miles; and Quetigo reserve, 1909, 1,562 square miles.

A Valuable Collection.

What is described by Dr. Doughty, Dominion archivist, as the best collection of medals in the world, has just been placed in the archives building at Ottawa. It is the gift of the British Government, and comprises every medal struck during Queen Victoria's reign, as well as every clasp issued. There are 214 medals in all, many of them being of gold. Their value sentimentally and intrinsically is very great.

Two Toronto Lads Lose Their Lives While Canoeing.

Son of Undertaker Ellis Perishes In Lake Couchiching While Trawling—Arthur Burt, a University Student Goes Down In Humber River—Woodslee Youth Seized With Cramps at Windsor.

Toronto, July 5.—"Teddy" Ellis, 18 years old, son of Harry Ellis, undertaker of College street, was drowned while paddling on Lake Couchiching, just off the Orillia Asylum, at 5.30 yesterday afternoon.

Young Ellis and a companion were trolling at the time, and were about half a mile from shore when their canoe upset. Both could swim, and the other lad succeeded in reaching the shore.

Ellis swam about half the distance, when he was apparently taken with cramps and sank. The body has not yet been recovered.

Mr. Ellis left on the early morning train for the scene, where he will personally supervise the efforts to locate the body.

Arthur Burt, a student at the University of Toronto, was drowned in the Humber about 11 o'clock yesterday morning. He was with another young man and an 11-year-old girl, named Annie Evert. The party having landed from their canoe at Dead Man's Point, Burt determined to go in bathing. The other two left him there and continued up the river.

On returning shortly afterward, they could find no trace of Burt, though his clothes were lying on the bank. Assistance was at once summoned from Devins' boathouse, but though two boats with grappling irons dragged the river all afternoon, they had not recovered the body at sundown. The dragging operations will be continued this morning.

William Mitchell Drowned.

Windsor, July 5.—William Mitchell, aged 18, was drowned in the Michigan Central reservoir at Woodslee yesterday afternoon. In company with a companion Mitchell was enjoying a swim when he was seized with cramps. He sank at once, and his comrade, who was afraid to venture beyond his depth, was obliged to look helplessly upon the death struggles of his friend. Mitchell's home was at Woodslee.

Drowned at Moosejaw.

Moosejaw, Sask., July 5.—Egerton Lemond, aged 22, formerly of Stouffville, was drowned on Saturday while bathing in the river. He had reached the middle when he became exhausted, and before help could reach him had gone down twice.

Freighter Struck Small Boat.

Windsor, July 5.—In full view of a crowd a huge freighter crashed into a sailboat in which three Americans were enjoying their Fourth of July holiday. The boat was smashed and one of the occupants drowned.

Michael Mangle Inquest.

Port Credit, July 5.—Coroner Dr. Sutton held an inquest yesterday afternoon on the body of Michael Mangle, who met his death as the result of an altercation at the St. Lawrence Starch Works, on Thursday, June 30.

The jury brought in a verdict of death resulting from a blow delivered by George Barker.

James Smith, a fellow employe of the two men was the only witness, apart from the medical men. He was an eye-witness of the whole affair and testified that the men had got into a bit of a wrangle, in which Mangle went down twice, the second blow resulting in his death.

Barker, the assailant, will come up before Police Magistrate Shaver on Monday, July 11, at Cooksville, on a charge of murder, when he will be committed for trial. The charge will probably be reduced to manslaughter.

Far-Reaching Claims.

London, July 5.—A Hague despatch, referring to Senator Turner's speech, says the results of the United States' contention will apparently be that the United States will be entitled to send warships into Newfoundland waters and soldiers to Newfoundland shores to protect and control inhabitants of the United States when exercising the liberties granted them of fishing in Newfoundland waters and drying and curing fish on Newfoundland shores.

Numerous questions have been put to Turner by the members of the tribunal during the course of his argument. The Senator has on several occasions at a later stage read the tribunal written answers.

Twenty-Five Killed.

Cleveland, O., July 5.—Twenty-five persons were killed and forty hurt in the wreck on the C., H. & D., twenty miles south of Dayton, according to information received here. The wrecked passenger train was the westbound twentieth century limited on the Big Four, which, on account of a wreck at Sharon, Pa., had been routed over the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton. North of Middleton the passenger train collided head-on with a northbound freight train at 1.30 p.m.

Up and Down.

The next hardest thing to getting up in the world is to keep from getting down.

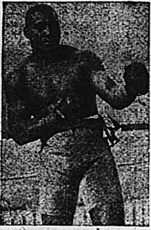
Johnson In Fifteenth.

Black Fighter Proves Too Good For the Old Champion.

In a Rather Slow Fight, Where the Boilermaker Shows that He Is Unable to Get Back to Form, Johnson Keeps Clear of the Fatal Wallop--Jeffries Tires Toward the Finish--Spectators Stop Knock-out.

Reno, Nevada, July 5.—Jack Johnson is still the world's heavyweight champion. He knocked out Jim Jeffries in the fifteenth round yesterday. The fight was one-sided from the start. The negro blocked the old champion's blows at every stage of the game and punished him severely in the last five rounds of the fighting.

At the beginning of the thirteenth round the experts at the ringside passed out the verdict that if Jeffries would simply stay and not fight he might stay the limit. As they came up for the fifteenth round, Johnson went at his man savagely. He sent Jeffries to the floor the first time with a rain of lefts and rights to the jaw, and Jeffries took the count of nine twice. Each time Jeffries fell outside the lower rope on the platform. As soon as he got up the second time and staggered for a foothold, Johnson sprang at him like a tiger, and with right and left swings to the jaw sent him through the lower ropes of the east side of the ring, where he lay until counted out.



JACK JOHNSON.

"I am not a good fighter any longer. I could not come back, boys—I could not come back. Ask Johnson if he will give me his gloves."

As Jeffries hung through the ropes after the last knockdown a hundred of his friends rushed forward. "Please don't let the old man be knocked out. Stop it," they called.

Jeffries was not counted out. As the timekeeper's hand moved up and down, the towel was brought into the ring from Jeffries' corner. Whether counted out or not, it probably will be recorded as a knockout.

The fight by rounds was as follows:

Testing Each Other.

First Round.—Jeffries walking in and feinting. Both smiled and Jack gave ground. Johnson led a straight left and landed lightly on Jeffries' face. They were in a clinch, Johnson shoving Jeffries away. Jeffries walked in and hooked left to neck, and in clinch sent right to body. Johnson responded with a left, and they continued to stand breast to breast, trying for short inside blows. As they broke Jeffries sent a left to Johnson's neck, and the negro stepped in with a left, but missed. The gong rang when they were in a clinch. The fighting was tame, and as they turned to their corners, Jeffries tapped Jack on the shoulder and smiled.

Second Round.—Jeffries assumed his crouch, but missed first attempt. Jack forced, and Jeff stepped nimbly away. Jack sent a left to the face and then ripped in. They held together, and were willing to give each other any chance. Jeffries sent right to ribs, took left on face at close quarters. Jeffries crouched and waited for Johnson, but he was not willing. They came together without a blow, and Johnson tried his uppercut, but missed. Jeffries put his weight on Johnson and pushed him about. When they broke Johnson sent left to Jeffries' face, and tried uppercut, but missed again. There was a lot of wrestling and not much fighting. The gong rang without a good blow being struck.

Corbett Does Talking.

Third Round.—"Take it easy, Jeffries," said Corbett, as they walked to the centre. Jeffries sailed in and led for head, but missed. Johnson hooked stiff left to body and right to head, but neither blow was hard. They shoved and pushed each other about the ring, while Corbett kept up a continual flow of talk to Johnson. Jeffries hooked left to body. Jeffries stood breast to breast, and they whaled and shoved about. Johnson sent two lefts to face and tried right for chin, but missed latter. It was simply a wrestling bout thus far. The gong rang while they were in a clinch.

Fourth Round.—Jeff took his crouch position again and walked in. He missed and they came together in a lock. Johnson tried his right for chin, but missed, and they began an exchange of talk. Jeff put a left to the face and started the blood from Johnson's lip. The crowd yelled, "First blood for Jeffries!" but Johnson only smiled. As Jeffries walked in, Johnson shot a snappy left to his face, and they came to a clinch. Jeff sent left to Johnson's face and Jeff sent him to the ropes with three lefts to the body. Johnson lashed out with right, but Jeffries neatly ducked, and the round ended. Jeffries' round.

Jeffries Eye Closed.

Sixth Round.—Again Jeffries crouched. They stepped around each other, Johnson pounding in two stiff lefts to face. One of them cut Jeffries' cheek a bit. Again they lolled in each other's embrace, neither willing to take a chance. Jeffries rushed, but missed a left for the body and took a left on the chest in return. Johnson kept up a running flow of talk to Jeff when they came to a clinch, but Jeff calmly chewed gum and waded in. He missed a left and took left and right on head. Johnson shot left to Jeffries' face and closed Jeffries' right eye. Jack missed two rights. Jeffries' nose was bleeding when the gong rang. When Jeff took his seat his seconds got busy with his eye, but Jeff assured them that it was O.K., and that it only opened his face. Johnson's round.

Seventh Round.—Jeffries walked right in, but before he had a chance Jack led with right and left and missed. Jeffries' eye was closed and badly swollen; he rubbed it with his glove. He feinted a bit, tried to draw Jack on, but the negro declined. Jeffries stepped in with a left for body, but missed it, and took left on the head. Jeffries hooked left to head and Johnson laughed loudly. Johnson sent left to face twice at close range. Jeffries bulled his way into another clinch, but failed to land. He shot a left to face. Jack's lips bled. In close quarters. Jack sent his left to face twice, and Jeffries' lip bled. This round was faster.

Kidding Corbett.

Eighth Round.—"Come on Jeff!" said Johnson, as they faced each other. Jeff came on and got a left in face. He missed Johnson's body with a left and took two lefts to face. "Hello, Jimmy!" said Jack to Corbett, as he leaned on Jeff. Jeff shoved Johnson about with ease, and the gong found them locked in each other's embrace. "Come on, break!" said Jeff, as Johnson held his glove. Rickard did not touch them. Jeff missed twice with left and took left on face.

Ninth Round.—Jeffries stood up and walked into a left to the chest. "Make him fight!" yelled Corbett. "Never mind, just wait!" replied Johnson. Johnson walked in and tried for body. Jeffries got inside of it and put his head against Jack's chest and shoved the black fellow back to the ropes. Jeffries took it all calmly, and seemed to be awaiting an opportunity to land a good one. Jeffries walked into two left jabs on the face that did not damage. His wrist landed hard on the ribs, and Johnson did not appear to like it.

Tenth Round.—They came up slowly. Jack shot left to face, but Jeff brushed it away and responded with a left to body. Jack again missed a lightning right for jaw. Jeff put his shoulder against Johnson's body and shoved him back. At close range Johnson sent left uppercut to Jeff's face. Jeff got under a left lead and seemed to want to wear Jack out by bearing down his weight and shoving in. Jeff struck two lefts to face from a clinch and got one of the same kind. Jeff took two lefts on the face. When they broke he shot left to body as the gong rang. Jeffries appeared as fresh as when the gong rang for the first round.

Eleventh Round.—They walked up carefully. Jeff finally tried his left once to find it blocked. He took left on face three times, but smiled and talked to Jack. They broke away and Johnson sent stiff left uppercut to face and right to body. He kept Jeff bobbing his head to escape the right uppercut whenever they came together. In a clinch Jack sent two uppercuts to face and Jeffries appeared to tire. They shoved about, Jeff with his head on shoulder and Jack hooked left to nose, drawing blood. Jeffries appeared slow compared with Johnson. Just before the call of time Jeff sent left and right to body, but Jack was going away and was not hurt. It was decidedly Johnson's round.

Twelfth Round.—Jeffries walked forward waiting for a chance to get inside the negro's defence. Jack simply waited and then drew back or hooked left to face. "Thought you said you were going to 'have an' while,'" said Johnson to Corbett's taunts. Jeffries forced his way into close quarters, but got left on sore nose for his reward. Jeff was not worried and looked fresh.

Thirteenth Round.—Putting his right glove before his face Jeff walked into a clinch without a blow. When they broke Johnson sent a left to the body and a right uppercut to the chin. "Stick there, Jim," shouted Corbett. Jeffries stuck immediately until forced away. Then he took two lefts and a right uppercut to face. Holding him with right on the shoulder Johnson sent in three lefts to face in quick succession and then uppercut to face. Jeffries seemed tired and slow. He could not solve Johnson's defence and took all the blows that came his way. Jack swung left to face and then calmly clinched. Jeff continued to come in. The round was Johnson's. Jeff's eye was almost closed.

Jeffries All In.

Fourteenth Round.—Jeffries walked into a left to the ear. Jack tapped the big fellow on the face twice and blocked Jeffries' attempts at close fighting. Jeff took three straights to face and got in a left to the face. Jeff's lefts were blocked by Johnson before they could get within six inches of his face.

"How do you feel, Jim?" said Jack, as they stood clinched.

"How do you like them?" Jeffries was sober and made no response. He took three more lefts.

Fifteenth Round.—It was a clinch to start with. Following Jeffries' attempt to land on the face Jack forced the pace and sent Jeffries down with left and right to jaw. Jeffries got up but was sent down again for the count. The crowd yelled "Stop it," "Don't let him knock him out."

Jeffries was counted out as he hung over the ropes, going down three times. His seconds began climbing into the ring before the timekeeper could count ten.

Flying Machines For Canada.

Montreal, July 5.—That Canada should cancel all expenditure on her navy and spend all she had to spend for defence on the development of flying machines and the training of men to run them is the opinion of Frederick Villiers, war corresponden of the Illustrated London News.

Airships are the thing of the future, he says, but Britain does not seem to realize this, and he hopes some of the colonies will, so that the Empire will not be shorthanded when the time of trial comes.

He says that of all the countries he has been in—and he has seen nearly all in the civilized and uncivilized world—he likes Canada the best, and is going to bring his family here to live for the rest of their lives.

I pray the Lord I may not shirk,

A few weeks ago $86,000 was raised in a few days for the construction of a Y. M. C. A. building in Reno, It is said to be the first in Nevada. Most people think of Reno as devoting its activities to gambling, divorce courts, and prize fights. but there is evidently another side to the city.

While looking after ourselves, don't overlook our animal friends. Remember that every dog running along the road it not mad, he probably only needs a drink, and should not be chased or stoned.

Horses are pretty well cared for as a rule, but of course there are instances in the shape of miserable crowbaits sometimes found between the shafts of delivery and other wagons, and these the authorities or the S. P. C. A. should look sharply after.

Hot weather now being a condition and no longer a theory, it is well to remind all that a few rules rigidly obided by will save much suffering.

"At Last"

For many months the directors have contemplated putting on a Building campaign to raise $40,000 for a new Y. M. C. A. Building commensurate with the needs of Belleville. A short time ago they learned that if they did not run a campaign soon that the building could not be ready until the fall of 1912. They feel that it is wrong to delay the matter longer. The Secretary was authorized to announce the decision on June 20th last, when they heartily approved and endorsed the proposed campaign to be inaugurated on the 4th of July for ten days. Many prominent business men have pledged their services to do all that they can to boost the campaign and make it a great success

City Council

A LONG SESSION IN WHICH CONSIDERABLE BUSINESS IS DISPOSED OF — $30,000 FOR A NEW SCHOOL BUILDING—BACK TAXES BEING PAID.

An adjourned meeting of the City Council was held last evening, presided over by Mayor Marsh, The absentee Aldermen were Green, Thomas, Carlaw, McCrodan and Thompson The session lasted until nearly 2 o'clock this morning. A motion prevailed to grant $30,000 to the Board of Education for a new school, and a motion to reduce the number of Wards from seven to five was defeated. Thirty-six granolithic sidewalk By-laws were passed.

Petitions were presented against building granolithic walks on Harriett, Charlotte, South Patterson, East Pinnacle street and a portion of North Victoria Avenue.—Referred to the Walks committee.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the whole on reports, etc., Ald. Knox in the chair.

It was decided to purchase 250 feet of hose from the Canada Rubber Co. and 250 feet from the Gutta Percha Rubber Company.

The question of the city paying its share towards the erection of a bridge over the River Moira at the Northern boundary of the city was on motion laid over until the next meeting of the Council.

The Tax Collector reported that back taxes amounting to $2,034.01 had been collected since the last meeting on the rolls of 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910.—Referred to Executive Committee.

City Engineer reported that the work on the Dundas street sewer was progressing satisfactorily. He recommended that an Inspector of the work on behalf of the city be appointed. Referred to Public Works committee.

Chief Newton wrote the Council in reference to the refusal of the authorities of Rockwood Asylum to admit to that institution an unfortunate woman named Mrs. Lambert of this city. She was now in the County jail.

It was decided that the Magistrate have her properly committed as an insane person, when the authorities of the institution could not refuse her admision.

SCHOOL GRANT.

A large deputation from the Board of Education waited upon the Council, asking the Council to issue debentures for $30,000 for the erection of a new school.

Mr. W. S. Morden, chairman of the Board adressed the Council at length, pointing out the urgent need of more accommodation. After considerable discussion. it was moved by Ald. Robinson, seconded by Ald. Chown, that the request be granted, which motion was carried almost unanimously.

Mr. Morden on behalf of the school Board thanked the Council for their action in this matter.

The committee rose and reported. Report received and adopted.

BY-LAWS.

Council then went into the committee of the whole on By-laws, Ald. Ackerman in the chair. Thirty-six by-laws were considered and passed when the committees rose and reported.

MOTIONS

Moved by Ald Robinson, seconded by Ald Wallace, that the mover, Ald. Knox and Canning be a special advisory committee for the purpose of consulting with and advising the Tax Collector in connection with the collecting of taxes remaining unpaid for the years 1907, 1908. 1909 and 1910. as shown on the rolls for these years—Lost.

Ald .Robinson tendered his resignation as a member of the old committee. mittee.

Ald. Robinson moved. seconded by Ald. Wallace, that the Dominion Government be requested to deepen the channel through the Bay of Quinte and the Murray Canal so that the dargest lake boats can do business on the bay and that the Councils, Boards of Trade, Navigation companies, boat owners, and shippers interested be asked to join with Belleville in sending a deputation to urge the Government to grant the request.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Robinson, seconded by Ald. Wallace, that the Ontario Municipal Association be requested to have introduced at the next session of the Legislature an amendment by which all actions for damages against municipalities be tried by the Division Court and that our representative, Mr. J. W. Johnson, M. P. P., be requested to support the same.

Ald. Wallbridge thought that the Division Court was not the proper court for such cases.

Ald. Robinosn spoke in support of the motion, which he considered was a move in the right direction.

City Clerk Mikel was of the opinion that such actions could be tried in the Division Court. The costs will not, by any means, be as great as High Court costs are. The municipalities would no doubt be better off. to have such cases tried by a Division Court Judge.

Upon a vote being taken the motion was lost.

Moved by Ald. Robinson, seconded by Ald. Wallace, that the Ontario Municipal Association be requested to have introduced at the next session of the Ontario Legislature an amendment providing for the holding of municipal elections in cities on the last Monday in January and the nominations on the Monday preceding and that our representative Mr. J. W. Johnson, M. P. P., be asked to support the same—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Robinson, seconded by Ald. Parks, that the City Engineer is hereby instructed by this Council to procure a suitable man for the purpose of acting as inspector of work now being done on the Dundas street sewer, the duties of the said inspector to be defined by the engineer and the salary for said inspector to be $2 a day. It is understood also that said inspector shall be on duty continuously during working hours.

In answer to an enquiry the City Engineer said he thought it was necessary to have a competent person to inspect the work, which involved an expenditure of $15,000. He was unable to spend all his time in overseeing that work.

Ald. Wallace moved, seconded by Ald. Chown, in amendment that the matter be referred to the Public Works committee.

Ald. Lott thought the City Engineer had time enough to look after the work.

The amendment prevailed.

Ald. Wallbridge moved that the city be divided into five Wards instead of seven.

The mover spoke in favor of the motion, which he considered was a move in the right direction. As at present the city is unequally divided into Wards. With a small Council the work would be done more advantageously.

Ald. Lott was of the opinion, that no change should be made in the Ward system.

Ald. Robinson said that the citizens generally were not demanding that a change be made.

The motion was lost.

Council adjourned.

A Division of Labor.

Bobby had been unusually quiet for several hours, so quiet indeed that his mother began to worry over the great quantities of stillness that came from the room in which he was sitting. Finally, unable to stand the strain any longer, she rose up from her work and went into the nursery.

"What are you doing, Bobby?" she said as she discovered the little chap curled up in a chair with a very solemn expression on his face.

"Thinkin' and wishin'," replied Bobby.

"What about, dear?" asked his mother.

"I was thinkin' how nice it would be if I was twins," he answered. "Then the other one could do the studyin' at school and I could stay home and play, and then when I did something naughty, why, you could spank him. When I was sick he could take the castor oil, and"—

"And when you had some candy—what then?" asked his mother.

"Oh, I'd eat it," said Bobby. "It wouldn't do for me to let him get sick."—Judge's Library.

Thirty-three years ago Lord Tankerville, who was then Lord Bennet, defeated left-handed the first and second prizemen with the single-sticks at the Artillery sports. Again, when he was fifty-one he threw a stone one hundred and thirteen yards. On one occasion he was challenged by a friend to single-stick contest, and, actually beat him blindfold; all he could see of his opponent was his feet, but that was quite enough.

Cochrane Has Now the Air of a Thriving Metropolis.

A year and half ago Cochrane was not on the map. To-day it is a thriving, bustling community, taking on the airs of a metropolis, basing great expectations on two facts, one that it is the centre of a district rich in timber, mineral, water power, and agricultural land, and second that it is the junction point of two great railways, the new National Transcontinental, building by the Dominion Government, and the T. & N. O., built by the Ontario Government.

Real estate always furnishes a measure for a community's hopes. And it is but a few months since the T. & N. O. Commission auctioned off the lots that constitute the townsite of Cochrane, so christened at that time in honor of Ontario's Minister of Lands and Mines, the Honorable Frank. The prices then realized were surprisingly high, but are vastly inferior to those already commanded for the same lots.

And a year and a half ago the site was the forest primeval. At that time the T. & N. O. rails were laid to within a couple of miles of the present town. A hardware merchant named McManus, with the adventurous spirit of the pioneer, decided to establish a store here. He bought a carload of hardware in Toronto, brought it to the end of the rails, and proceeded to haul it by team along the trail for the rest of the journey. Before he had it transported he had sold over half of the whole car. McManus was the first settler. To-day he is still the first citizen, being the duly elected mayor of a town of around 2,000 inhabitants.

Already Cochrane has its "oldest building." It is a section of the freight shed of the T. & N. O. Railway, large and respectable looking, and filled to the ceiling with merchandise, chiefly railway supplies, canned goods, and canoes. Alongside this building lies the railway diamond, that cannot but prove to be historic. From this diamond fur lines of railway stretch away towards the uttermost limits of Canada. To the south lies Toronto, to the west the great prairie and Prince Rupert, to the east Quebec and the Atlantic, and while this at present is the northerly terminus of the T. & N.O., the tracks have been laid for a mile or so into the "last North." And there is not so much of this "last North" either, 480 miles north of Toronto, Cochrane lies within 180 miles of James Bay. It will be no serious matter to connect Toronto up by rail with James Bay the moment there is any real reason to do so. Then we will be getting on the train at Toronto's Union Station at 10.20 p.m. and be at Arctic waters by the next night. At last Canada is conquering its geography.

For the present Cochrane is the northerly jumping-off place. To reach James Bay you take to the canoe. Seven days is the journey, and it holds no terrors for even a neophyte in the woods. The other day a woman and her baby set out for what was to her a return trip over the route. The wife of a Hudson Bay Co.'s official on James Bay, she has lived there for twenty years without a break. She came out at last to see her former friends near Wingham, Ont. But to her James Bay was home, and she said she was glad to get back.

Place one leg of a compass at Toronto, the other at Cochrane, and make a circle. You will encircle Quebec city, Chicago, and skirt the boundaries of far-away Georgia on the south.

To the south Cochrane has a regular train service, one train each way daily over the T. & N. O. Railway, but east and west the National Transcontinental is still in the hands of the contractors. Eastward for 100 miles Foley Bros. have the route, and while a large section of the track is laid, communication is cut off by the Abitibi River, seven miles from Cochrane, where a big bridge is under construction.

Sensible Legislation

The Argentine Republic is showing more courage and exhibiting better statesmanship than many of the more powerful and pretentious nations. On the 29th of June a bill was passed by the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, which includes provisions against undesirable immigration. Among them are Anarchists. Residence of Anarchists in the Argentine is vigorously interdicted. Expelled Anarchists returning to Argentina will be liable to imprisonment from three to six years. The representatives of shipowners and navigation companies, captains or agents who knowingly engage in the bringing of Anarchists to the country will be liable to a heavy fine or imprisonment.

Capital punishment is provided for those who are responsible for any Anarchistic movement resulting in death. This section of the law is applicable to men and women and minors more than 18 years of age.

These are provisions of law which might with propriety be put upon the statute book of every civilized country. No one is safe where Anarchists ply their vacation.

JOHNSON'S VICTORY CAUSES RACE TROUBLES

(Intelligencer Special.)

Washington, D. C., July 5. — In a terrible record of bloodshed, which is being added to every hour, the United States of America has already paid dearly for permitting the big fight to be held in its midst.

Despatches from all parts of the Union registered the following aggregate casualities in connection with race riots and celebrations attendant upon Johnson's victory.

Negroes killed, 32, more or less injured, 300 to 500,; whites killed, 19, more or less injured about 150.

A thousand white and black have been arrested, while a great number of fatal fights took place in Southern States.

News comes of serious riots in New York and other big cities of the north

Seven thousand were engaged in fights in Gotham, although the police soon secured control. One white man was stabbed in a saloon brawl there.

Chicago was quiet in comparison. Even Washington itself was not immune from racial disturbance. Two were killed and several injured in the lower part of the city.

In Virginia, Texas, Georgia, Alabama and othes States proverbially afflicted with race troubles, the carnival of bloodshed commenced before the fight was decided. There were pitched battles in some places between whites and blacks, both sides being armed with guns. The slightest taunt offered white men by negroes frequently meant trouble, which led to wholesale lynching.

In some towns the militia was called out and are still in charge of the situation.

CLOSING SCENES AT RENO.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Reno, Nevada, July 5. — It's all over but cleaning up. A hundred trains pulled out during the night, carrying their loads of more or less disgruntled fight fans, for the majority of them were on the wrong end of the betting. Workmen have commenced pulling down the great arena and an army of laborers are trying to get the town in a sanitary condition. Already the citizens are beginning to feel remorseful about permitting the battle, which has left a fearfully bad taste in Reno's Municipal mouth.

As for the great actors in yesterday's drama, they spent the night as befitted the outcome of the fight from their standpoint.

From Johnson's camp came sounds of revelry, although the champion himself left for Chicago early to visit his mother. In Jeffries' case there were continual rounds of consolations, and the boilermaker piked off early to-day to spend a quiet day fishing. All experts agree that it was a fair, clean fight, as fights go, that the negro was well entitled to the championship and that it is established now that a pugilist cannot come back after years of lassitude.

DENIES KNOWLEDGE OF BREAD MERGER.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Toronto, Ont., July 5.—George Weston, proprietor of the Model Bakery and well informed re bread situation, denied emphatically this morning any knowledge of a big merger alleged to be taking in smaller bakers in cities of central and Western Ontario.

Weston thinks the smaller bakers are selling out simply because they are disgusted with the Legislature continually changing the bread regulations.

EXAMINATION PAPERS WERE DIFFICULT.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Toronto, Ont., July 5.—From school districts where examination boards have already gone over entrance papers comes the news of startling percentage of children failing to pass, owing to the severe test set in arithmetic paper.

In some districts around Kingston, fifty per cent. only passed. As entrance papers were the same all over the province it is expected that a storm of protest will reach the minister of education. Some newspapers editorially call on the Government to reduce the percentage required on arithmetic.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT FOR DR. HYDE.

Stone Throwing

To the Editor of The Intelligencer;—

Dear Sir,—On Monday forenoon while a yeoman of Sidney Township and his young nephew were driving through town with a load of peas for the canning factory a number of boys crowded around the load pulling off peas, and when the boy on the load attempted to stop them one of the youngsters sent a stone, hitting the little fellow that was on the load in the forehead and inflicting a bad gash. There is too much of that sort of work going on while the canning factory produce is being taken in, and some one should be made an example of.

Battle Between Airship and Dreadnought at the Canadian National

They're anticipating history at the Canadian National Exhibition this year where they will produce as one of the big features of the fireworks spectacle a battle between an airship and a dreadnought. The monsters of the sea and air advancing from different sides of the arena will meet in a terrific fight in which the dreadnought is sunk and the airship finally blows up. It's something entirely new in fireworks and as spectacular as it is novel.

AT GRIFFIN'S

Family Theatre the first three days of this week will be three big acts of Vaudeville, including James Wise, Cartoonist, who is one of the cleverest in his line, amusing and surprising. Also May Fulton, Character Comedienne, the girl from home, will introduce some very clever character changes. Must be seen to be appreciated. The management has also secured as a Special Feature John and Brady, in their own original success, Cohan the Cop, a laugh from start to finish. Don't fail to hear Mr. Brady's own original parodies on Old Grey Bonnet and Rings on My Fingers, and all other popular songs; without doubt the best act of its kind ever put before the Theatre going public of Belleville; also three illustrated pictures and Joe Carr in illustrated song. 4-3d

SHEPHERDS OF PALESTINE.

A Life Which Is Almost Ideal In Its Peace and Quiet.

The pastoral life of the Palestine peasant has always been a subject of interest and a pleasant study. The shepherd is seen at his best in the spring when he has the care of both sheep and lambs and when all his thoughts are centered on his seemingly indolent occupation.

Work for the shepherd begins in earnest with the lambing season, which commences early in January and continues for two or three months; during that time it is no unusual sight to see the shepherd with several newly born lambs or kids stored away in the capacious folds of his bosom and the mothers in close attendance.

When heavy storms of snow or rain come on the shelter of some cave has to be sought and a careful watch against the attacks of wild animals kept. This watchfulness is not relaxed on a fine day, and the long hours on the hillsides or plains are whiled away in making music on the reed flute, of which every shepherd is the maker and player.

The music is an assurance to the sheep that the shepherd is on the alert; let the music cease for any length of time and the flock will stop grazing and look around for their caretaker and leader. At night the sheep are folded around the village or camp to which they belong. The fold is a large enclosure, the wall of which is made up of good sized stones piled one on another. There is only one entrance, which is narrow, for the sheep as they enter have to "pass under the rod" so that the owner may count them and see that none are missing.

To find good pasture and a quiet resting place is the daily duty of the shepherd, and in the long summer days the flock rests during the heat by some stream or under the shadow of a great rock. Each sheep has its name, to which it will respond on being called by its keeper. In southern Palestine the flocks are tended by girls and women, but in other parts by youths and men.

Asking Too Much.

"See here, young man," said the irate father, "your college principal says he doesn't know of anything that you would be likely to make a success of. Now, sir, I'd like to know what you intend to make of yourself."

"Give it up, father," replied the young man. "How do you expect me to answer a question that even a college professor can't answer?"—Chicago News.

CLEARING SHIP FOR ACTION.

A Lively Time While the Decks Are Being Stripped of Everything That Would Impede the Fire of the Guns. Working the Torpedo Nets.

It is a little after two bells in the forenoon watch, or, in shore going talk, 9 a. m., and the officers and men of the battleship wear an expectant air. The ship's company is fallen in at stations for general exercise. The commander, surrounded by his staff—a midshipman, a bugler and the chief boatswain's mate—is standing on top of the after barbette. A kind of tense hush is over all hands and, indeed, over the rest of the squadron at anchor in the bay. It is a general drill morning, and the ships of the squadron are about to compete against each other at various evolutions.

On the after bridge the glasses of the signal boatswain and his yeomen are glued on the flagship. Presently a couple of gayly colored flags are hoisted at her main. Hardly have they left the rail when the signal boatswain spins round. "Signal's 'place net defense, sir!'" he cries. "Out nets!" bawls the commander. "Out nets!" shout the boatswain's mates. Instantly hordes of men dash at the neat roll of wire nets lying on the shelf round the ship and push it overboard. One edge being held in place, it unrolls as it falls, making a veil on the side. "Clear the net shelf!" The men vanish. "Man the purchase!" Somewhere above a bugle blares out a "G."

The marines, handling large bearing out spars, shove the upper ends of the booms, from which the nets hang, outboard. They revolve slowly about their lower ends, which are near the water line and, hauled by the steam capstan on one side and the seamen on the purchase on the other, extend themselves at right angles to the hull. "Break!" bellows the commander, and a signalman jerks the halyards. A red, white and blue pendant, hitherto waiting in a ball at the topsail yardarm, breaks from its confinement and floats out on the breeze, announcing to all and sundry that the ship has finished the evolution and is now protected from torpedo attack by her crinoline of nets. "First ship, sir," reports the signal boatswain, and the men, once more at their general stations, grin contentedly and make contemptuous comments on the struggles of the remainder of the fleet. There is a short pause till these are ended; then another hoist rises from the flagship's bridge. "In nets!" is the order, and the ship's company is once more galvanized into action. Amid a scene of orderly confusion the huge booms return to position, shut back against the ship's side, the brails which pass beneath the nets every few yards are manned, all hands haul with a will, the mass of steel meshes is rolled up and secured on its shelf, and the bright pendant at the topsail yardarm is again broken by the signalman.

A short "Stand easy!" follows, soon ended by another signal, "Clear for action!" To the mind of the bewildered spectator pandemonium follows. But it is only in appearance. Each man knows what he has to do and does it. Under the onslaught of the seamen davits, stanchions, rails, stovepipes—in fact, all things that can possibly restrict the fire of the guns—disappear with a rapidity that gives the impression of their being mowed down; skylights are masked by steel hatches, boats are turned in and secured, and in two or three minutes the decks are stripped bare and the men again fallen in, awaiting the order to replace gear. This done—a longer job, but still accomplished with celerity—the last and most exciting signal of the forenoon appears—"Away all boats' crews; pull round the fleet."

The men tumble into their boats at the davits, the lowerers pay out the falls, and in a few moments the cutters, whalers, gigs and galleys are pulling for dear life, a midshipman in charge of each. On the after bridge the commander, waving two small hand flags which control the huge steam derrick, is lifting the pinnace and launch from the boat deck and depositing them in the water. Men drop into them, double and treble banking the long oars, and soon these are pounding after the lighter boats.

The evolution is a race, ship against ship. Who will have the first boat back? Who will have all boats back and hoisted first? Midshipmen, probably with bets on the matter, are urging their crews on. Every man is putting his back into it for the honor of his ship. Telescopes watch progress from all the vessels of the fleet. Here comes the galley—the captain's boat, manned by a picked crew and dancing through the water under the long sweeping strokes of the oars—first boat back. Again the tricolored pendant flies out, and the captain's "doggie" (midshipman) climbs out of the galley's stern sheets, beaming all over his boyish countenance.

The boats are hoisted as they return, the men left on board manning the falls and running away with them to the sound of the ship's band playing on the shelter deck. Presently all is square again. The boatswain's mates pipe "Hands carry on smoking." The forenoon's drills are over, and officers and men alike are in good humor, proud of the final signal received from the all powerful flagship:

"Evolutions smartly performed."—London Globe.

BOER GIRL IN CANADA.

Miss Jeanette Van Duyn Here Learning Domestic Economy.

A young woman always optimistic, keen to notice all of an educative nature, and enthusiastic over anything Canadian, and not afraid to show it, is Miss Jeanette C. van Duyn, the Dutch girl from the Transvaal who is now studying at Macdonald College at St. Anne de Bellevue, and will go to Guelph Agricultural College during the fall term. This young woman represents the pioneer educating influence in the establishing of a system of domestic economy among the agricultural classes of the Dutch in South Africa. She has come to Canada as the special representative of the Agricultural Department of the new Government of the Transvaal.

"Dutch people, the women, especially of the farming classes, are most backward in everything pertaining to household economy," Miss van Duyn declared. "That is the reason I was sent here. I had read a great deal of what Canada was doing for her agriculturists at Macdonald College and Guelph, so I got my Government to take up the idea, and they commissioned me to study conditions. I will be in this country nearly two years, then I return to the Transvaal to teach what I have learned. My special object will be to organize a system of women's institutes, which seem to be doing so much for the women who live on the farms of Ontario. It is these women of my country who need looking after; for all these years they have been pitiably neglected.

"Am I native Dutch?" she paused to answer the interjection. Then she laughed one of those infectious laughs. "Oh, yes. Call me a Boer. Indeed, when the war ended I could not speak one word of English. But I soon learned that it would be essential to my future; and I was one of the first to learn the tongue. Finally I got along so well that I was used as translator of important Government documents.

"Canada is so lovely that I cannot realize it at all," she laughed, in answer to a question. "I never saw snow until this winter. And, do you know, when I used to look out of my window in the mornings across the beautiful white fields and far up the ice-locked Ottawa River, all covered with the clear, white crystals, I had to pinch myself to make sure I was not in fairyland. It makes me want to keep on stopping here—for we have nothing that can compare with your scenic beauties. At least I have one firm resolve: The minute I return to my native land my whole ambition will be to start at once to save money for another trip, and soon, to Canada."

Miss van Duyn is undoubtedly the popular girl of the college term. Save for a slightly noticeable accent, a somewhat broken English, there is little to tell the stranger that this young woman is Dutch. She is now quite Canadianized in views and manners. "Snowshoeing! It is great. Skating! It is delightful." Her only complaint is that there is so much to learn that she will not be able to master all before her return.

Miss Van Duyn has proved one of the brilliant science students of Macdonald College this term. She has just been appointed by the Ontario Government to go on a lecture tour of the Women's Institute of the Province during June. For a month she will study conditions in the Department of Agriculture in the Parliament buildings, and with the fall term will enter Guelph Agricultural College.

Author of the Miller Bill.

On account of the very general interest aroused throughout the Dominion by the long and hard-fought struggle in the Canadian Parliament over the bill to abolish gambling on the race track, many people who have never met or ever seen the author of the bill, Mr. Henry Horton Miller, M.P., are naturally curious to know what kind of man this is, who has succeeded in putting up such a stiff fight for his measure that the recognized political parties, and even the Ministry itself, have been divided, with a final result that the closest division ever recorded in the Commons was reached, the bill being just defeated by a majority of one, and that although many of the most powerful debaters and strongest party leaders on both sides were against the measure. In personal appearance, Mr. Miller is exactly the type of a man who would be expected to promote such a bill and to fight to the last ditch to secure its passage. Tall, gaunt, rather ungainly in figure and carriage, with a set "dour" face and a heavy, determined-looking jaw, he might pose without make-up for a Cromwellian trooper or a member of the Roundhead Parliament. You cannot hear him speak in Parliament, or engage in five minutes conversation with him, without being convinced that he is a man of cast-steel convictions, and possessed of determination to carry out anything he undertakes to do, if it can be done. He is a good, practical speaker too; not an orator, but a user of plain blunt language which expresses just what he means. The bill was certainly pushed for all it was worth in Mr. Miller's hands, and if he does not bring it up again, and secure its adoption, those who know him well will be surprised. Mr. Miller, who represents South Grey in the House of Commons, is the son of a father of Scotch and American descent brought up in Canada, and of a Canadian mother of Irish descent. Owen Sound was his native place, and he was born in 1861. He lives at Hanover, Ont., where he is a dealer in real estate. He is a Methodist and actively interested in the local church and in the governing body of that denomination.

A Victoria Tragedy.

A pathetic fatality occurred at Kiacatoo Station, Victoria, Australia, recently, when Charles Russell Street met his death. He was conveying the news from an out station to Mr. S. Waite, of the death of his father-in-law, and when within 150 yards of Waite's house was struck dead by lightning, which also killed the horse he was riding.

DAMAGE BY FLOODS.

Many Lives Are Lost In European Countries.

Cologne, Germany, June 16.—Stories of death and sufferings of the survivors are brought by refugees from the flooded valley of the Ahr. The waters are rapidly subsiding, but while at their height they wrought frightful damage. Several villages on the banks of the River Ahr were literally washed away. Houses collapsing, buried their occupants beneath the flood. So strong was the current that it swept away locomotives and steam road rollers as a child might scatter its toys.

In some instances, where the villagers, driven from their homes by the vagrant waters, lacked time to reach the hill tops, they climbed into the branches of trees, only to be drowned as the rising waters tore the trees up by their roots and bore them away.

Near the mouth of the Ahr River a rescuing party recovered the bodies of a woman and an infant. The little one was tightly clasped in the mother's arms.

Thirty-Five Lives Lost.

Belgrade, Servia, June 16.—Floods following torrential rains, have caused havoc in the valley of the Morava River. Thirty-five lives have been lost. The towns of Chupari, Jagodina and Svilainatz have been inundated. Water to a depth of from seven to ten feet has filled the streets. Many houses undermined have collapsed.

Immense Damage In Switzerland.

Berne, Switzerland, June 16.—Inundation caused by swollen streams in the eastern and central districts of Switzerland have caused immense damage. A landslide at Altorf buried a factory building, killing a woman and ten children, employes.

Belgium Also Suffers.

Brussels, Belgium, June 16.—Unprecedented rains throughout Belgium have been followed in the low-lying districts by flood conditions, creating heavy losses. Bridges have been carried away and stock drowned.

The village of Moos has been devastated by the vagrant waters.

Floods In Armenia.

Constantinople, June 16.—Despatches received here say that terrible floods have swept over the Province of Erzeroum, Turkish Armenia. Half of the town of Bassankalek has been wrecked, hundreds of persons being drowned. The flood resulted from heavy rains.

Cut Off by Floods.

Munich, Bavaria June 16—Oberammergan, the scene of the passion play, is to-day cut off from railway communication with outside points by the floods. Of the 600 strangers in the place 300 are Americans. It is believed that these are in no danger, as the hotels are on high ground. The lower streets are filled with water.

The meteorological observatories in the higher Alps announce that the snow is melting rapidly, and that greater floods are expected.

Floods In Austria-Hungary.

Vienna, June 16.—Floods caused by the rain have done serious damage in many parts of the monarchy. The Northern Tyrol Railway has suffered greatly and all traffic over this road in Vorarlberg, has been suspended owing to the destruction of bridges and embankments. Many lives have been lost.

Poison In Dinner?

Brockville, June 16.—Charles Landon, a tinsmith, in the employ of Sheridan and Power for twelve years, is in jail on remand, charged with attempting to poison Sheridan, the senior member of the firm.

Sheridan had been in the habit of bringing his dinner to the shop. He detected a peculiar taste in the tea on three different occasions, and each time investigated the source of the milk supply, which was found O.K. His suspicions then became aroused, and, filling his tea can with water, the same peculiar acid taste was noticeable.

Finally a trap was laid for Landon. A constable was placed in hiding in the shop, and Landon, being alone, was noticed to remove the cover from Sheridan's lunch basket, open the can and drop in a powder or some other substance.

Bourassa Replies to Critics.

Montreal, June 16.—The opponents of Henri Bourassa have accused that gentleman of shedding too bitter tears over Goldwin Smith, who, they claim, had always been an enemy of the French race and the Roman Catholic religion. The Nationalist leader replies to his critics in Le Devoir.

It is true, Mr. Bourassa says, that Goldwin Smith accompanied some Canadians to New York in 1893, on an annexation joint, but the Oxford professor broke up the conference when the American end of the junta wanted to put up a lot of money to buy up the Canadians en bloc. Mr. Bourassa relates that one of the Canadians present, who was later on a provincial Minister and afterwards a member of the Laurier Government said, "The old fool. We might have taken the money anyway."

New Ocean Record.

Quebec, June 16.—Two hours have been clipped from the Canadian trans-Atlantic record from dock to dock.

The Canadian Northern's new triple-screw turbine steamer Royal Edward, which left Bristol at 8 p.m. on Thursday last, docked here yesterday at 3.30 p.m., beating the best previous performances of any Canadian steamer by two hours. It was confidently expected here that she would dock at noon, as a wireless despatch received yesterday morning from Capt. Roberts, her commander, reported the passing of Father Point at 6.10 a.m.

Shortly after passing Father Point the Royal Edward encountered dangerous fog banks and was compelled to proceed from that point on at reduced speed, otherwise a more spectacular reduction of the record would have been effected.

Aviator's Lucky Escape.

New York, June 16.—Capt. Baldwin fell with his aeroplane 75 feet while he was practicing yesterday in Minola, L.I., but, though his machine was badly smashed, he was not injured.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Sir Arthur Forgets.

"What is the matter with your hands, Edith?" asked the artist, as he took his place at the tea table. "What have you been doing to them?"

"The dust is yelow and will not wash off," she replied. "I have spent three whole hours looking for that picture, papa, all among such an accumulation of papers that would frighten any one, but I cannot find it."

"What picture do you mean?" he asked, wonderingly.

"That picture with the scarlet-berried bush with two children under it. I am sure I saw it some years ago, and I am determined to find it."

"Convince a woman against her will, and she keeps the same opinion still," sang Paul Westerne. "Never mind those disagreeable things now; help Miss Bruce to some tea."

They talked long. Paul Westerne asked Esther if she liked London.

"I like its size, its grandeur and its wealth," she said. "It seems to me the home of science, but the sin and sorrow spoil it. I have seen more of both in London streets than I knew existed."

"What of the sins you do not see?" cried Edith; "the gigantic frauds, the daring impostures, the wrongs no man sees, and no man can redress?"

Again that curious pallor came over the scarlet lips.

"Heaven is above all," she said simply. "I have an implicit belief that sooner or later every ill deed comes to light."

And the two girls looked straight at each other. If they could have known that each was thinking of the same man, and the same crime!

They parted mutually pleased with each other, and Paul promised Esther if she would bring her color box he would gladly give her a lesson.

"I shall not let Sir Alan see this face until my picture is finished. He will be charmed with it, I know."

"Remember my test the next time he comes," said Edith. "If he answers the three questions correctly, I will confess that I have made a great mistake."

"He may have forgotten," said Paul; but Edith shook her head.

"Alan Wayne would never have forgotten," she said, simply, and the artist was reduced to silence.

Two days afterward he came, and Edith saw plainly that her father would have given anything to escape the ordeal.

They were in the pretty drawing-room, and Edith joined them there.

Paul Westerne felt embarrassed.

Sir Alan talked resolutely of the picture, and the work to be done at Carsdale, while the artist puzzled his brains until he was in despair as to how he should begin the conversation.

Chance favored him at last. Sir Alan told him of some rare Indian plants that grew like a beautiful golden bell amidst silvery leaves.

Paul looked up at him, trying in vain to smile in his usual, careless genial way.

"Talking of flowers, Sir Alan," he said, "do you remember the name of the flowers we planted in the little garden at Wabash?"

He saw himself quite plainly the furtive movement of the eyelids, as though the man were summoning courage to return his glance. He saw, too, the shade of fear come over the face.

'I do not remember," he said at last "were they mignonette seeds?"

"Do you remember planting them?" asked the artist.

"I have some vague recollection—something like a dream," he replied, hastily; "but I cannot be certain."

"Then you cannot tell me anything about it?"

"No," he replied. "I have seen so much since then; trifling incidents have died out of my mind."

"It might not have been a trifle for you," said Mr. Westerne. "I wonder you have forgotten it!"

Sir Alan rose carelessly; there was no stir in the quiet figure near the window.

Paul Westerne began to hate the task, yet he was curious to know if Sir Alan would fail in the other questions as he had in this one. He spoke of the news in the morning's paper, of the fashionable gossip, of everything and anything save the subject that filled his mnid. He made a spirited attempt, at last.

"Sir Alan," he said, "Edith and I often wonder whether you have preserved the little keepsake she gave you when you parted. Have you it still?"

"I have been very unfortunate," he said; "I lost it long years ago."

"Do you remember what it was?" asked Paul Westerne.

"I forget. All that childish nonsense dies so soon from one's mind."

"Do you remember what you gave her?" asked the artist, wistfully. This was very strange, certainly."

tist no longer saw his way clearly.

"I forget," said Sir Alan again; "Miss Edith will think me very ungallant."

The quiet figure at the window never moved; she uttered no word, and Sir Alan, all unconscious that he was being tested, continued his conversation.

He remained for another half hour and then went away, wondering if the time would ever come when Edith Westerne would look more kindly on him.

"I know what it is," he said to himself, as he went down the street. "Poor Alan talked nonsense to her and she thinks I ought to marry her; perhaps he would have done so had he lived—I shall not! Was ever a man so teased? There is one woman I want to marry, and one who wants to marry me."

When the door had closed behind Sir Alan and the artist, with a puzzled face, returned to the drawing-room, Edith looked at him very quietly.

"Well, papa?"

"Well, my dear," he replied, "it was very stange, certainly."

"I have not to beg his pardon. Papa, do you think any one can possibly forget the incident of sowing those seeds? You remember Alan held them in his hands and the wind blew some in his eyes; his father and you feared for long days he would lose his sight. He was for weeks obliged to have his eyes carefully covered. They were nasturtium seeds, sent me from England."

'I remember all about it. I do not see how he could forget," replied Paul Westerne.

"When we parted I had but one sixpence in the world, and we broke it in two, each taking half. He knew nothing about it, you see—not a word!"

"No," said her father, "not one word. I am at a loss what to think. He must be Alan Wayne; he cannct be any one else."

. . . .

A week later Sir Alan called, bringin gwith him Lord Helstone, his most recent and fashionable friend, to see the picture.

Edith was in the studio, and as Lord Helstone seemed anxious to know what kind of a face it was in which the atist spoke in such rapturous terms, Mr. Westerne altered his mind and showed it to them.

Edith will never forget the white, dull horror that fell across Sir Alan's face when he took the sketch into his hands—a gray, awful pallor more dreadful than death.

She saw him try to recover himself and still the trembling of his hands.

He tried once to speak, but the words died away on his white, parched lips—died completely and made no sound; then he seemed to summon up his courage; he turned the sketch carelessly in his hand.

"Who is this, Westerne? I have seen a face somewhere just like this one."

"I cannot tell you who she is, Sir Alan," he replied. "I met her quite accidentally and was much struck by the sad, sorrowful expression of her face; she seems to have had some terrible trouble."

"Did she never tell you what it was?" he asked; and Edith, watching him intently, saw the awful suspense in his eyes.

"No, never; it is a wonderful face, is it not, Sir Alan?"

"I am not so much struck with it as you appear to be," he replied. "What think you, Lord Helstone?"

"That I never saw perfect beauty and perfect sorrow combined before," he replied.

"I am giving her lessons in painting," said Mr. Westerne. "She is very clever with her pencil."

"Poor?" suggested Lord Helstone.

"And good, my lord," replied the artist.

Sir Alan longed to say he would not have the face there; he longed to tear the sketch into shreds, but conscience made him a coward. He was obliged to be content with vowing to prevent, by some means or other, the picture from ever coming to Carsdale.

He went through the rest of the interview with tolerable fortitude.

He dared not think until he was alone.

When Lord Helstone left him and Sir Alan stood in the magnificent solitude of his own apartments, muttered curses and imprecations rose to his lips. He hated her—he feared her! Was she ever to rise before him, poisoning each moment of his life? Was it likely he should let that hated picture go to Carsdale—to the sumptuous palace he had prepared for his beautiful betrothed? Was Esther Bruce's face, in its wild sorrow, to reproach him there for evermore? It was well for Esther that in that hour she was not in the power of the man who once loved her. If necessary, if he could not silence her without, he would have her shut up in a madhouse. He would take her himself beyond the seas and have her shut up safe behind prison bars. Money could do anything Surely it could rid him of Esther Bruce.

DISCOVERER OF COBALT.

Prof. W. G. Miller Was "Found" In Queen's University.

The simple remark made in Toronto the other day by Professor Willett G. Miller, geologist for the Province of Ontario, that he thinks the country in the vicinity of Hudson Bay is rich in mineral wealth has set people asking one another if this is tantamount to a semi-authoritative announcement of the discovery of another vast mineral area in Ontario. Professor Miller is not a man who gushes and splurges over important discoveries. He it was who located the wealth of the Cobalt and Gowganda districts and his announcement of the fact that his researches had revealed a new Eldorado was just as undramatic as the one just made. Professor Miller is one of the most interesting personalities among the Government officials in Canada. Some years ago he was professor of mineralogy at Queen's University, Kingston, at a salary of about $2,000 a year. Then the Provincial Government got hold of him and has kept him. He could have made a multimillionaire of himself as a result of his discoveries in Northern Ontario, but he does not seem to have made a cent over and above his salary of $4,500 a year.

Shortly after his appointment he was sent up by the Ontraio Government to report on the minerals of northern Ontario. He made a long trip in the north, and with his little prospector's pick, his magnifying glasses, and a lot of geological knowledge in his head he poked all over what is now the greatest silver camp in the world. There were no mining men there then and Professor Miller just went around at his own sweet will. He discovered that valuable minerals were there, with values running into untold millions. He went back to Toronto and reported in a matter-of-fact, simple way, exactly what his trip had revealed. The publication caused no immediate sensation among the general public; but it did among the knowing ones, and an active prospecting campaign was soon under way, with the results we all know. As to the man who had so modestly given the cue, he simply sat down at his desk, and resumed his usual routine work. Had he resigned his Govenrment appointment, returned to the north and staked out the best claims, he could have made an immense fortune for himself; but as he had frequently told friends, he could not, with any respect for his honor, have so taken advantage of his position as a public official. The prospector hasn't even scratched the surface of the country around Hudson Bay, so that when the man who has been the forerunner of the prospector in Northern Ontario, ventures the remark that that country is rich in mineral wealth, people are disposed to take him at his word.

Simpson and the West.

Among the many men of marked ability and high character who had to do with the making of the early history of the Canadian West, one of the ablest and most efficient as an organizer and administrator was Sir George Simpson, for almost forty years the chief executive officer of the Hudson Bay Co. and practically the ruler of all that vast region that stretches westward from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Ocean. With powers somewhat akin to those of a sovereign, and with a territory much greater than that over which many of the sovereigns of Europe held sway, Sir George Simpson, although only a subject and a commoner, may well be ranked among the rulers of his times. The essential purposes of his rule were to maintain peace throughout the many thousands of square miles of territory over which the Hudson Bay Co. enjoyed a monopoly of trade and which practically included all of British North America to the west and north of the upper waters of the Ottawa River; to carry on throughout all that vast region trade with the Indians that would result in profit to his company; to maintain the integrity of the territory as a British possession, and to hold it until, in the course of events, it should be handed over to the Government of the Canadian people as the great western heritage.

As an administrator of the Hudson Bay Co. Sir George Simpson was probably unequalled; but he failed to forsee the greater future that lay before the West as a part of Canada, destined as years passed to stretch from ocean to ocean.

Veteran of the Riel Campaign.

The name of Mr. A. E. Doucet, C.E., district engineer of the National Transcontinental Railway in Quebec, who gave important evidence before the House of Commons committee which was enquiring into the Lumsden charges, was about this time twenty-five years ago prominently before the Canadian public in connection with the Northwest campaign. Mr. Doucet, who is a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, was at the time the rebellion began on the engineering staff of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and obtained an appointment as A.D.C. on the staff of Major-General Middleton, who was his brother-in-law. A few days after young Doucet reached the Northwest Field Force, the desperate little fight at Fish Creek took place (April 24), and Mr. Doucet was seriously wounded. For lack of proper surgical appliances and attention (the extemporized ambulance corps had not reached the front at the time) he nearly lost his arm, if not his life. He refused, however, to be sent back to the field hospital subsequently established at Saskatoon, and when the force advanced upon Batoche he was placed upon the steamer Northcotte. When that vessel was fired upon, as the current of the Saskatchewan swept her helpless past the rebel position at Batoche, he pleaded to have his cot moved to a porthole so that he could aid in returning the fire; but the surgeons would not permit it being done.

Territorials Growing.

During the year ending Sept. 30th last there was an increase of 71,604 Territorials in Britain.

THE MONGOOSE.

If He Can't Get Snakes He Will Fill Himself With Chicken.

"The loneliest living creature in the United States is undoubtedly the mongoose," was the statement made by Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles at the New York zoological park. "I believe that there are but two or three of the beasts in this country. Mongoose society, you might say, is not teeming with members. A mongoose is a pink eyed, flexible snouted little animal with a shape like a debutante. He is chiefly waist, that is to say. He is partial to snakes as a steady diet, or perhaps it might be better to say a wriggly or unsteady diet. He was one of the original 'catch-'em-alive-ohs'. A mongoose will kill almost any sort of an ordinary sized snake. Most of the constrictor family, however, are too big for him. But he's a bold mite of a furry creature and will tackle almost anything in the serpent line. A mongoose is easily domesticated and in many respects is quite as pleasing a pet as a cat or dog.

"The single objection to him is the fact that if he can't have his snakes he is only too willing to subsist on chicken. As a raider of henroosts a Maryland darky is a neophyte compared with a mongoose. That is the reason there are so few of him in this country. There is a federal law which absolutely forbids the importation of a mongoose. It really is a pity that this most companionable of animals has to be barred from the country. But you simply couldn't keep a chicken in the same neighborhood with a mongoose, safeguard the henhouses as you might. A mongoose can go any place he chooses. If there isn't a hole he imagines one and crawls through it. I'd like to keep one in the Bronx reptile house, but I couldn't afford to. He'd dine on my rarest snakes despite anything I could do to prevent him."—New York Press.

Lockjaw.

Lockjaw, known to medical men as tetanus, is one of those terrible maladies which occasion great suffering and baffle the best attempts of the profession to successfully treat them. Commencing with stiffness of the jaw muscles, tetanus quickly goes on to produce violent convulsions, which utterly exhaust its victim's strength, while preventing him from taking food owing to his being unable to open his mouth; hence its more popular designation of lockjaw. Investigations have shown that this dreadful disease is due to a microbe which commonly exists in ordinary soil and the surface mud of the streets, which habitat explains the reason why tetanus frequently attacks persons who have been injured in street accidents and had their wounds contaminated with refuse and dust from the roadway. Although no certain cure for tetanus is yet known, progress is being made with injections of anti-tetanic serum.—London Telegraph.

Collars of Honor For Dogs.

In France the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals decorates dogs that have distinguished themselves by deeds of bravery with a tastefully designed "collar of honor." Among the animals decorated in this way one of the most celebrated is Bacchus, a large bulldog, whose specialty it is to stop runaway horses by jumping up and seizing them by the bridle. It is calculated that this intelligent animal has already saved the lives of eight persons, if not more. Pautland, a Great Dane, received a collar for saving his mistress from the attack of a footpad, and Turk, a splendid Newfoundland, has had similar honor for rescuing young children from drowning on several occasions.

Artificial Marble.

The Italians have devised a method of manufacturing artificial marble. Catania, the center of the industry, is overlooked by the great volcano Etna, and this mountain has furnished part of the material employed. Common white sandstone is cut into the desired shapes, and these are placed in an iron tank upon a heavy wire grating. Then the tank is filled with a molten mixture of volcanic asphalt and coal tar. This is kept boiling for thirty-six hours, when the stones are taken out, cooled, dried and polished. It is difficult, say the experts, to distinguish stones thus treated from genuine black marble, but the cost is much less.—Harper's Weekly.

The Vanity of Man.

"Fur trimmed overcoats are an all the year round adjunct to a photographer's property room," said the photographer. "Men's vanity turns to furs just as surely as women's does. They think they look better in a picture with a fur collar snuggling up around their faces. Most of them do too. For years we have kept fur boas in stock throughout the summer for women to be photographed in. Now they have been joined by the fur trimmed coat. A temperature of a hundred in the shade won't drive a man away from that overcoat if he thinks it will add to his good looks."—New York Sun.

Marking the Children.

A novel means of identification has been adopted by one of the large institutions for deaf mute children of New York. The children sometimes wander away or become lost while traveling, and as many of them cannot read and write it is often a difficult thing to return them to the institution. By tattooing the name and address on the skin it is an easy matter for the deaf mutes to be identified. The tattooing is done in ink which is not indelible, but which will stand for a year or two.—Popular Mechanics.

The Globe.
TORONTO

AS A NEWSPAPER

Specialization is the keynote of the world's work today. One meets it and realizes it everywhere. The Globe specializes, and its particular specialization is the turning out on every lawful day a good all-round newspaper.

Some newspapers run to sporting news to such an extent as to tire the general reader. Others have no sporting news to speak of. Some are so intensely local in news and opinions that outside of a restricted area their interest to a reader is almost nil.

The aim of The Globe is to present to its readers a newspaper of which they will say: "Here's The Globe, now we'll see what is going on in Canada."

AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM

The Globe has been said to be "sixty-six years young."

As an advertising medium it is true that the growth of The Globe lately has been very much like that of a healthy bounding boy. Few mediums on the continent can show such phenomenal increases in advertising earnings as The Globe has shown during the past few years.

This applies to advertising of all descriptions — store, trade mark, and condensed. — More and more Canada's National Newspaper is being recognized as the one outstanding indispensable medium in a Canadian advertising campaign.

WON BY A WHISKER.

Great Gee-Gees' Game Fights For Glory.

The phrase "Won by a short head!" which you often see in the racing news, means that the horse that won pulled off the race by a foot, or perhaps a little less, a distance so small that the judge may, and sometimes does, have considerable difficulty in deciding which of the two leading horses was actually the winner.

Indeed, there have been cases in which the onlookers have quarrelled seriously with the judge's decision. For instance, in the English Derby of 1869, Pretender and Gomez came in so nearly abreast that most who saw the finish declared the result a dead-heat. But the judge gave the race to Pretender, and as he certainly had the best opportunity of seeing what really did happen, no doubt he was right.

The Blue Riband of the English turf has often been won by the shortest of short heads. In 1880 the race lay between Robert the Devil—ridden by Rossiter—and Bend d'Or, with Fred Archer in the saddle. Robert the Devil had the lead, and appeared to be winning, when Rossiter glanced round to see how close the next horse was. Archer came with a rush, and Bend d'Or won a terrific race by a margin of inches.

In 1881 Archer won on the famous American horse Iroquois, and two years later came one of the finest struggles ever seen, when three great horses—Highland Chief, Galliard, and St. Blaise—all galloped in together. Most people believed that Highland Chief had won, and so did Webb, his jockey, and bitter was the disappointment when the number of St. Blaise went up.

The following summer saw the only dead-heat on record in all the years since 1780, when the Derby first became a race. Harvester and St. Gatien came in absolutely level.

1885 was Melton's Derby, and it is certain that no race was ever fought out more fiercely than this one. Archer rode Melton, Webb was on Paradox, and not one of the spectators knew which horse had won until Melton's number went up.

Tom Cannon was once asked to ride a filly in a race at Windsor for which a colt of his own was favorite. He had backed the colt to win $2,500, and this he explained to the gentleman who had asked him to ride the filly, adding that he could not ride his own colt because of the weight.

"Oh, you needn't worry about that!" replied the other. "My filly hasn't got a ghost of a chance. I only want her to get a little confidence—just what your gentle handling will give her."

So Cannon agreed. But a hundred yards from the winning-post the filly drew level with Cannon's colt. To his everlasting credit, Tom sat down to ride in real earnest, and, by a short head, pulled off a race the winning of which cost him $2,500.—London Answers.

From Jest to Earnest.

Of his barristerial days Mr. Justice Grantham, the famous English judge, relates a remarkable coincidence. On circuit, as junior in Croydon, he, with some other members of the Bar, put up at a pastry-cook's in the High street. Included in the company was a clever pianist and vocalist, and his singing attracted crowds to the house. One night young Grantham opened the window and addressed the people outside as his "constituents." Curiously enough, eleven years later, what the future judge had done in fun he did in realty from the window of an hotel a few yards away. Realism is added to the anecdote when it is stated that on that occasion he was returned M.P. for Croydon.

The Duke of Wellington wanted a certain piece of work done and instructed an officer of the Royal Engineers to do it. After examination the officer informed the duke that it was impossible.

The duke sent for another officer, a much younger man and attached to another division of the army. This officer did what the duke required.

The next morning there appeared in the "orders of the day" the following epigrammatic note: "He who in war fails to do what he undertakes may always plead accident, which invariably attends military affairs, but he who declares a thing to be impossible which is subsequently accomplished registers his own incapacity."

A Beef Ham.

Sir Walter Scott wrote little about meat and drink, but his description in "Waverley" of a Scotch breakfast is memorable, says The London Chronicle. "He found Miss Bradwardine presiding over the tea and coffee, the table loaded with warm bread, both of flour oatmeal and barley meal in the shape of loaves, cakes, biscuits and other varieties, together with eggs, reindeer ham and beef ditto, smoked salmon and many other delicacies." "And," as Samuel Weller would have observed, "a werry good idea of a breakfast too." But has any reader ever seen a beef ham? Fortunately the sideboards in Scott's time were of substantial build.

Exporting Celebrated Water.

It is interesting to know that water from the famous St. Patrick's Well, situated in Dublin, is drunk by thousands in all parts of the world. In early Christian days the well was on St. Patrick's Day visited in state by the Bishop of Armagh and his clergy, who blessed the waters, which were celebrated for their curative properties. It now furnishes the water with which the ginger ale and club soda of Cantrell and Cochrane are made.

Dominion Day Celebrated in Chicago

The Belleville Club of Chicago had its first annual Dominion day celebration on Friday, July 1st, at the Great Northern Hotel.

The weather during the past few days has been extremely torrid, Friday being the hottest of the whole period, and as a consequence the attendance was not so large as it otherwise would have been, nevertheless there was a good-sized crowd, about cgihty in all. Belleville boys, Belleville girls, and the girls of former Belleville boys gathered to do honor to Belleville's National Day and to enjoy the hospitality of the Belleville Club. After the people had gathered and spent an hour or more renewing old acquaintances and picking up the broken threads of friendships formed in the long ago back among the Maples, the President Mr. William Robertson called the meeting to order. The regular business was quickly disposed of and the program started. In a splendid address Mr. M. D. Lynch told the history of the formation of the Belleville Club, of its aims, its objects, and its hopes. He spoke in glowing terms of the wonderful progress made in the organization thus far, showing that in less than 2 months time 70 members had been enrolled. He praised the loyalty of the Belleville people their comaradie, their esprit de ville, their unshaken and unshakable belief in the greatness, past, present and future of Belleville, and the wonderful adhesion of the people to each other. In closing he gave voice to an air castle he had builded, of a beautiful home for the Belleville Club in Chicago—a meeting place, a headquarters where Bellevillians in and about Chicago might meet and renew old times, while travelling Bellevillians might have a headquarters and keep alive and foster and cement more closely the common ties which unite us in a splendid healthy loving Brotherhood of Nativity. Mr. Lynch's remarks found on echo in the hearts of all present. Mr. Robertson then introduced Mr. Chas. Harding, a well-known musician of Chicago, who rendered in splendid and masterly style a group of selections from popular music. Miss Evelyn Dean a dainty and charming little lady next entertained with a song, "The Moon, My Rose, and You' Her effort brought forth a ringing round of applause to which Miss Dean gracefully responded.

Miss Mabel Harding favored the audience with two splendid songs and was rewarded with a generous round of applause. Just at this juncture the President introduced to the audience Mr. Alfred Gillen of Belleville, who fortunately for us happened to be in Chicago holidaying, and was persuaded by Brother Fred E. Foster to come to the meeting. Mr. Gillen will not soon forget the reception he received, and after some minutes of applause he made a pleasant, graceful, good-natured speech which was greatly appreciated. It was a breath of Belleville wafted fresh from the bay shores, and everybody enjoyed it immensely.

The final feature of the evening program was a Travel Talk by our Secretary, Mr. Thomas F. Lynch, who has become exceedingly well known in Lyceum circles in and around Chicago. His subject was "A Tour Around the World," and it was handled in an admirable way. The route of the fanciful trip was from New York to Ireland, Scotland, England, France, Belgium, Denmark, Germany Switzerland, Italy, Turkey, India, Japan, and back to Chicago by way of San Francisco and the Colorado Mountains. Instead, however, of coming straight to California, the Lecturer explained that having travelled what is known as the beautiful way around the world, and seeing most of the wonderful places in the Old Countries, he had still in store for us a greater treat—he was going to take us to what he thought was the most beautiful and most wonderful spot in the world. Our surprise was great at this, it was still greater and most pleasant when he quickly transported us to Belleville and showed us some 25 fine views of well remembered and endeared spots in Belleville These slides he had prepared especially for this occasion. Everybody enjoyed the lecture and especially the trip to Belleville. After the program was over the audience remained seated while Mr. Samuel A. Marks a very expert photographer, made a flashlight photograph of the gathering It goes without saying that Dominion day, 1910, will be long remembered by the Old Belleville people living in Chicago.

The Siamese Topknot.

A Siamese child, whether boy or girl, wears its hair in a little topknot until it has attained the age of eleven or twelve years. On reaching this age the topknot cutting ceremony takes place. The child is dressed in its best, and amid much rejoicing of relatives and friends the topknot is cut, one lock at a time. The head is then completely shaved by the priests. All guests invited to the ceremony bring presents, usually money, which is carefully invested for the child by its parents or guardians. A young prince or princess will sometimes receive as much as $25,000 in presents at his or her topknot cutting ceremony, while a poor child may get $10 or $15. —Wide World Magazine.

A Variation.

"Sir," says the anxious suitor, "your daughter has preferred me to you. I—er—that is—you know—I have proposed to her."

"Proposed to her, have you?" dryly observes the father. "Well, I thought she had learned something by this time. And you ought to hesitate a good deal before engaging yourself to marry her. You know she has been divorced four times."

"Yes, sir. But I—I can assure you, sir, that I can provide her with the alimony she has been accustomed to in case our marriage should be a failure."

It doesn't take a good doctor to tell you that, almost anybody could do that much, but to tell exactly the nature of the disease sometimes calls for the utmost skill of the physician. Almost anybody by a few simple tests could tell that your eyesight was defective and that you needed glasses of some kind, but to diagnose the exact trouble and fit the right glasses calls for more than ordinary skill. Y. M. C. A. Banquet At the Quinte.

A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC GATHERING TO INAUGURATE THE CAMPAIGN FOR THE NEW BUILDING — SPEECHES BY MANY PROMINENT CITIZENS—GOOD PROSPECTS FOR SUCCESS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

A ten days campaign to raise $40,000 for a new Y. M. C. A building was commenced to-day under most favorable auspices The scheme was launched last evening by a banquet held at Hotel Quinte, which was a most pleasant affair and attended by many representative citizens.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M P. P, occupied the chair At his right sat Sir Mackenzie Bowell, ex-Mayor Graham Mr J. M. McLaughlin, of Oshawa, Mr. C .M Copeland, Provincial Secretary; Rev. Dr. Bishop and Rev. A. M Hubly At his left sat Messrs. C. K. Calhoun, International Secretary of Y. M. C. A, work and leader of the campaign; J. C. Holden of Montreal; D. V. Sinclair, W. B. Deacon, J, Elliott, Walter Alford, J. P. C. Phillips, Revs. A S Kerr, B Greatrix and H. B. Kenny.

After due justice had been done to the bountiful spread by mine host Jenkins, speech making was indulged in for some time. The singing of the National Anthem opened this part of the program.

The chairman thanked the promoters for the honor conferred upon him by making him chairman of the gathering. He said we cannot do without the mercantile agency. We cannot do without the insurance. We cannot do without the Y. M. C A. which has for its object the training of the young men that they may be successful in mercantile and other pursuits. Mr. Johnson referred in an eulogistic manner to Mr. McLaughlin of Oshawa, and Mr. J. C. Holden, the latter a Belleville boy, who were two successful business men.

Mr. R. J. Graham, in the few minutes allotted to him, reviewed the Y M .C A work in this city, and the prospects for the future. For years it had been aimed at to have a proper building for the young men who are identified with the Y. M. C. A. At the end of the campaign he hoped that $40,000 would be secured for the new building. This scheme was mooted three years ago, but it has been put off owing to other schemes being in project, such as aid to the hospital.

Mr. McLaughlin, of Oshawa, spoke of the social, intellectual and spiritual work of the Y. M. C. A. This Association, he contended, helped the church, being as they were the nurseries of the church. Y. M. C. A's will help young men in industrial pursuits, instilling into them intelligent industrialism. He hoped, and had no doubt, the campaign to be entered upon would be as successful as the one they had passed through in Oshawa.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell in his opening remarks spoke of the necessity of young men acquiring what is known as technical education.

In regard to Y. M. C. A. work, Sir Mackenzie said that as the population increased the greater necessity there was of erecting such buildings as is proposed to be built here. As the Sundays schools were a nursery to the church so also was the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. C. H. Copeland, of Toronto, said the outlook for a successful campaign in this city was most encouraging. Such campaigns had been successfully carried out in St. Catharines, Oshawa, Hamilton, Dundas and other places. How large a building should Belleville have? He would have a building just large enough to be paid for and not have a dollar of debt when the doors are opened. When such a building is erected here it means increased membership, and increased membership means increase of good young men, which is a valuable asset to any city.

Song—When There's Love at Home by Mr. S. Burrows.

Mr J. C Holden said it was a pleasure for him to be present upon this occasion. He was in thorough accord with the Y. M. C A. movement The Association was doing a grand work. It renews the spiritual life of the city. These campaigns want men of faithfulness and earnestness. In Montreal the four words which they nailed to the most were co-operation, concentration, organization and inspiration, each of which the speaker enlarged upon. Above all a deep spirited motive is needed in this campaign. This is the key note of success. Play the game well and success is assured. Have faith and belief in your work. He hoped the best expectations of those engaged in this campaign would be realized.

Mr. D. V. Sinclair said that after years and years of waiting he hoped a Y. M. C. building would be built that would be a credit to the city of Belleville. The speaker said that $40,000 was necessary for the building and $5000 for equipment. He had no doubt but that the money would be forthcoming. Some $8500 had been subscribed conditionally. Mr. J. L. Hess, the local secretary, had remained in this city in order to see a new Y. M. C. A. building, although he had been offered a much larger salary than he is at present receiving in another field of labor.

Addresses of three minutes duration were given by Messrs. Hy. Pringle. J. J. B. Flint, W. B. Deacon, J. Elliott, Walter Alford, J. L. Hess and Rev. Dr. Bishop, all of whom eulogized Y. M C. A. work.

Mr. Deacon read the following letter which speaks for itself:

W. B. Deacon, Esq., Sec'y., Y. M. C A. Banquet Committee

My Dear Sir—I have delayed replying to the kind invitation to attend your banquet this evening and the hope that I would be able to avail myeslf of the pleasure it would give me to be present I regret to say however that at the last moment I have been called to Deseronto on business which will prevent my being with you. You will do me a favor if you will kindly convey to those present my hearty sympathy with the movement to furnish new and better accommodation for the boys and men who will avail themselves of the advantages thus afforded. The greatest and most productive asset any City or Country can possess is young men brought up and trained in a proper atmosphere, which I feel sure is the aim and object of the Y. M. C. A. Although not with you in person, I am in spirit and will be pleased to contribute my mite and assist in any way I can your worthy object.

Yours very truly,
E. GUSS PORTER.

Mr. Deacon amidst applause announced that Mr. Porter's subscription to the scheme was $500.

The plan of the campaign was laid out by Mr. C. K. Calhoun, of Montreal. In the assembly to-night there were enough citizens present to make the campaign a success and he had no doubt of the result. He renewed minutely the plan of conducting such a campaign.

The successful gathering was then brought to a close.

The Sewer Question.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

My Dear Sir,—I perceive that the Council has published a notice stating that the Council intends to undertake the construction of sewers mentioned therein, unless the majority of owners in the respective sections of real property, representing one half in value, petition the Council against such construction of said sewers. There are 14 sewers mentioned in this list. The cost of these sewers, estimating for a 9 inch sewer, will average about sixty cents per foot, with the additional cost to be added of digging from the sewer to each lot, on both sides of each street to the street limit. Now this is the most importance notice that has been published in Belleville for years, because the gross cost of these sewers must total an immense sum. In order to prevent the construction upon any street, the majority in number of the property owners, representing one half of the value of the real estate, must petition the Council against such construction before the 28th day of this present month. If no petitions go in the Council will have a free hand to build all or any of these sewers. I know that the property owners interested do not comprehend what this notice means, and unless they awaken from their stupor they will find that they have given the Council a most terrible power. The Council will tell any citizen who enquires, that they intend to build these sewers at their convenience. They will probably do so, but the citizens must understand that unless they do place their petitions in the hands of the Council, before the day named, that the Council will be perfectly justified in believing that it is the will of the people that these sewers shall be built. After the 28th day of this month there will be no use in making complaints. Any opposition must be made before date named. Now examine the best of sewers for yourselves and walk over the streets named. If you are of the opinion that it is necessary the sewers should be built, as set forth in the notice, then do nothing. If, on the other hand, you think that many of these should not be constructed, you must get the requisite number of persons representing one half in value, to petition against the construction. While some sewers are necessary it seems to me that many out of the fourteen should not be built.

I am yours,
JOHN J. B.. FLINT.

White Slavery In Canada.

Halifax, July 5.—"Stern logic and indisputable evidence shows the existence of the 'white slave traffic' in every part of the civilized world." So the National Council of Women were informed yesterday morning by Miss Gaulick's report. "Let us attack it at a vital point," urged the special committee.

The report from British Columbia expresses fear that it is conducted there by Chinamen. In Winnipeg a campaign, also against Chinamen, is being conducted. In Toronto 700 fallen girls were cared for in the hospitals.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 4.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 2 were 2230 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 1500 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1075 cattle, 325 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 500 calves.

A weak feeling continues to prevail in the market for cattle, and prices have scored a further decline of ½c per lb. since this day week, which is attributed to the steady increase in the supply, the large percentage of half-finished stock, and the falling off in the demand from local butchers on account of the continued warm weather and the decrease in the consumption of beef.

Cables from Liverpool and London were stronger, and noted an advance in prices of ½c per lb., as compared with a week ago.

Choice steers sold at 6½c to 6¾c; good at 6c to 6¼c; fairly good at 5½c to 5¾c; fair at 5c to 5¼c, and common at 4½c to 4¾c per lb. The top figure for choice cows was 5c, and the lower grades sold at from that down to 3c per lb.

There was no change in the condition of the market for hogs to-day. Sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. Cables from Liverpool and London on Saturday were much stronger on Canadian bacon, and noted a further advance of 1s to 2s per cwt. A feature of the market for small meats was the stronger feeling in calves. Sales of choice, milk-fed ones were made at 5½c per lb., and the commoner grades at from $3 to $5 each. The market for sheep was steady, at 3½c to 4c per lb., and spring lambs sold at from $3.50 to $6 each.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 2 were 2037 cattle for export account, and 1300 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 900 calves, while the supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 400 cattle, 75 sheep and lambs, 75 hogs and 100 calves.

Fur-Bearing Animals Increase.

London, July 5.—At a Hudson Bay Co. meeting, Lord Strathcona said the report indicated continued increase in the fur-bearing animals of Canada, though the shortage of rabbits for food was against the hunt. He referred to the prospective increase in the price of agricultural land. Henry Clarke protested against the changes on the board, and said it looked as if the company was to be exploited by the Stock Exchange. The report was adopted and the meeting decided to present Lord Strathcona with his portrait in oils.

London Hasn't Heard It.

Seeley stated he had no official confirmation of the report that the United States Government authorized United States whalers to disregard Canadian jurisdiction in Hudson Bay Straits. Col. IT IS A HOT CAMPAIGN

Bitter Fight Being Waged Against Premier Roblin.

Chieftain of Conservative Party In a Statement to the Voters of the Province Says That Crisis Has Arrived In Affairs and If They Are Not Careful the Laurier Yoke Will Be Fixed—Points to Splendid Revenue.

Winnipeg, July 5.—They're off, officially, in the provincial election campaign, nominations having taken place yesterday. The Roblin Government, which goes to the country next Monday, assumed control in the province Oct. 29, 1900. The Legislature now dissolved (the twelfth) met for the first time Jan 2, 1908, and prorogued for the last time on March 16 last. The Legislature consists of 41 members, and at dissolution it was divided: Conservatives 28, Liberals 13.

The campaign is bitter, even for Manitoba campaigning. A dead set is being made against Premier Roblin in Dufferin, where Prof. Osborne is the Liberal candidate. The Liberal leader is T. C. Norris, a native of Brampton, Ont., who is member for Lansdowne. He is a farmer.

In an address to his constituents delivered at Carman, Premier Roblin said:

"There has been a surplus every year that we have been in office, until we have piled up an aggregate of between three and four millions of dollars. Contrast with ten years' government of the Liberals in this province, in which they piled up an aggregate of deficits of over one million dollars.

"This is a crisis in the history of Manitoba. If we are beaten Manitoba is crippled, dwarfed for ever, and she shall be an inferior and unimportant province that Sir Wilfrid apparently designs she shall be, because her revenues and resources are taken from her."

Collision on G.T.R.

Sherbrooke, Que., July 5.—In a collision between two freight trains near Waterville yesterday, on the G.T.R., two engineers and firemen and a conductor were injured and they are now in the hospital. The collision is said to have been the result of the operator failing to hand out orders to the westbound train.

Chief Justice Fuller Dead.

Bar Harbor, Me., July 5.—Chief Justice Melville E. Fuller of the U. S. Supreme Court, died of heart failure in his summer home in Sorrento, at three o'clock yesterday morning.

Judge Fuller was born in Augusta, Maine, Feb. 11, 1833. He was appointed Chief Justice of the United States April 30, 1888.

Habitants Go West.

For the first time in the history of Western settlement the "habitant" is going West. Recently a priest from Vanda, Sask., returned from the East with eleven carloads of French-Canadians most of them returning Canadians from the weaving towns of Maine. The priest who piloted the pilgrims over the Canadian Northern to the "Promised Land" says thousands will follow these as soon as the news of their first harvest goes back to New England.

This one train, which ran special all the way from Montreal by way of Chicago to Saskatoon, took 633 men, women, and children. The habitant is naturally a farmer. He entered the mills of New England mainly because the hills of Quebec were all occupied. He will make good in the West, where the open fields await him.

And though it may embarrass the mill managers of New England, the transplanting of these habitant men adds just so much to the world's output of wheat and postpones just so far the predicted time when we shall go supperless to bed. Only six per cent. of the wheat lands of the West have yet been broken in Canada.

And while these Easterners are plowing into Northern Saskatchewan an average of three hundred carloads a week are coming in from the South, breaking up at Saskatoon and scattering to the open lands north, east and west. The price of wheat lands in this immediate vicinity has gone up at the rate of $1 an acre a month for the last six months.

To Survey Big Water Route.

The Government has decided to make an immediate survey, with the idea of ascertaining the possibility of establishing a navigable water route between Winnipeg and Edmonton and the North Saskatchewan River and Lake Winnipeg. It is believed that a six or eight foot route can be established at a moderate cost.

L. R. Boliguy, one of the sub-chiefs on the Georgian Bay Canal survey, will be in charge of the survey, which will be made this summer by five parties, to be sent out from Ottawa.

FRENCH OPENED THE ROAD.

How the General Cleared the Way at Klipdrift, South Africa.

Many Canadians are probably unaware of how brilliant a soldier Gen. Sir John French, who is now in Canada on a mission to inspect the military forces of this Dominion, really is. By critics as disinterested as the German military attaches who accompanied the British forces in the South African campaign he is regarded as one of the most brilliant cavalry leaders who ever commanded men. The feat which impressed them, and which is described at length in their report on the tactics and strategy with which the war was conducted made for the German War Office, occurred at Klipdrift, on the road to Kimberley. Gen. French was in command of the force which sought to open the way to Kimberley then under siege. He advanced with a force of six thousand cavalry and a supporting force of artillery, and on arrival at Klipdrift it was found that the Boers had fortified every height on the other side of a deep valley and had, as they thought, absolutely blocked the road to Kimberley, since they could not be dislodged except at terrible loss of life and by an enormously superior force. Scanning the hills with his glasses Gen. French discerned what is known as a "saddle" or gap between two hills. The Boers had so fortified the slopes of these that on short notice they could annihilate any force that attempted to get through the gap. Quick as a flash an inspiration came to him. He at once gave orders for his artillery to open fire and thus draw on themselves the fire of the guns of the Boers on the opposite height. This was but a cover for his main scheme. His whole force of six thousand troopers was shot like a thunder bolt down the hills, across the valley and through the "saddle" before the Boers, who were busy in their artillery duel with the British gunners on the heights opposite, had a chance to realize what was happening. Within half an hour after the order was given the road to Kimberley was open. French lost less than twenty men, and these were the victims not of the Boers but of careless riding. They were thrown and trampled in the mad rush across the valley. The departure of the whole force was accomplished in sixteen minutes, and that six thousand men could be sent away so quickly was evidence of the general's capacity for organization as great as the plan itself, of his brilliant courage and resource. To the German critics this was the most brilliant episode of the war either on the side of Briton or Boer, and one of the most amazing achievements in the history of cavalry.

What She Wanted to Know.

She was a sweet-faced old lady, but with an expression which showed plainly that she possessed opinions of her own and the spirit to stick to them. Someone, with a mistaken idea of showing her a kindness, had taken her to the matinee to hear "Carmen" sung in a Toronto theatre, and it was obvious to those around her that she thought that in her case at least the afternoon of Victoria Day was being wasted. At the end of each act she asked the same question, "Is there any more of this?" and each time, when the answer came in the affirmative, her lips became a little straighter, her back a little stiffer, and her expression more disapproving. For her Carmen sang and danced and coaxed and intrigued in vain; it was not to such as her the cigarette girl's wiles appealed.

At last she could stand it no longer, and she made her decision clear: "Through three acts of this awful thing have I sat," she explained to the attentive young man who was her escort, "and not another minute will I endure it. I've seen troubles enough and wickedness enough to make your poor dear father turn in his grave if he knew I was here, and now I'm going home. Here have I wasted three mortal hours and, thank Heaven, I haven't understood enough to make a decent woman blush, though I've half a mind to let you stay, son, to see if that young hussy gets her deserts before the show's over."

Apple Exports.

Those who know say that Canada in the very near future will monopolize practically the whole trade in export winter apples from the continent of North America. It is estimated that we now produce 12,000,000 barrels a year. Our commercial orchards are confined principally to the three Provinces of Nova Scotia, Ontario and British Columbia. In 1908, besides furnishing our own home market, we supplied Great Britain with 59 per cent. of her imports of apples, and sent a considerable quantity to more than 22 other countries. In 1909, we sent Great Britain 49 per cent. of her requirements of apples. Our largest customers in 1909, besides the United Kingdom, were the United States, $37,695; British Africa, $22,689, and Newfoundland, $18,365. Our apples travel to such places as Fiji, China, and Japan. In addition our exports of evaporated apples are growing. In 1907 they were 3,718,372 pounds, in 1908, 6,939,088 pounds; and in 1909, 4,973,562 pounds. Our principal customers for evaporated apples are Holland, Germany, and the United States. The recent improvement in trade relations with Germany is expected to open a wide market for Canadian apples. In 1903, for instance, Canada's exports of evaporated apples to Germany amounted to 4,289,314 pounds, but in surtax times this went as low as 377,250 pounds.

Canada First In Cheese.

Canada is the greatest cheese exporting country in the world. Even though our exports for 1908-'09 dropped to 164,907,139 pounds, we are still ahead of Holland, our nearest competitor. Great Britain is the world's largest importer of cheese. Although she produces an estimated quantity of 300,000,000 pounds of cheese a year, yet her imports in 1906 were 289,371,824 pounds, and Canada supplied the bulk of this, or 214,877,077 pounds. Germany was the next largest importer to Great Britain, with 48,187,525 pounds; France third, with 44,714,973 pounds; the United States fourth, with 33,848,766 pounds, and Belgium fifth, with 30,333,690 pounds.

VOL. 43 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 6, 1910. NO. 257

WILL BEGIN FRIDAY.

Aviation Meeting In Toronto Starts a Day Later.

Toronto, July 6.—Owing to the unavoidable delay in securing the transportation of the unwieldly airships from Montreal, it has been found necessary to postpone the opening of the great international aviation meet at Toronto, from Thursday to Friday next.

The various machines, including the three Bleriot monoplanes belonging to Comte de Lesseps and the five Wright biplanes, were to have been shipped from Montreal this morning, but it was found impossible to have them prepared for shipment and to secure the large cars necessary for their transport, in time to have them ready for a flight on Thursday afternoon. The corps of aviators will reach here to-morrow morning and will go over the site selected on the Trethewey farm, near Weston.

All arrangements were practically completed yesterday for the handling of the crowds that are expected to witness the flights. A large staff of men were busily engaged in the erection of the grand stand, the fencing of the field and the construction of a restaurant on the grounds. The stands will be a new variety, there being three tiers of platforms, one above and behind the other. Each platform wil be 600 feet long, with three rows of seats, and the total capacity will be 6,000.

SIR WILFRID STARTS.

He Will Not Reach Winnipeg Till After the Elections.

Ottawa, July 6.—The capital promises to be a quiet place politically during the next two months. The last Cabinet meeting before the departure of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his two months' tour of the west has been held, and Hon. Charles Murphy, and the Printing Bureau irregularities, will have the centre of the stage during the dog days of summer.

The vanguard of the Premier's party started for the West at noon to-day, when the car, carrying the press representatives, left for Port Arthur, where the first meeting will be held on Saturday night. Sir Wilfrid, accompanied by L. M. MacDonald, M.P., also left at noon, and will be joined at North Bay by Hon. Geo. Graham, and Fred Pardee, chief Liberal whip. Mr. Graham left for Brockville last night, and will proceed to Toronto to-day.

The Winnipeg meeting will be held on Tuesday next, the day after the Manitoba elections, and on Thursday, July 14, the Premier will attend the formal opening of the St. Andrew's locks on the Red River. For this occasion the Laurier party will be joined by Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, who goes west early next week.

Unexpected Socialist Candidates.

Winnipeg, July 6.—Nominations passed off quietly in Manitoba, except that three unexpected Socialist candidates put in an appearance in Centre, West and North Winnipeg. In North Winnipeg it is expected that the foreign vote will prove an important factor for the Socialist. In Assiniboia, Aime Bernard, Conservative, R. A. Bonner and John Colvin contest the seat. The peculiarity in this is that although Colvin is contesting the seat on the same grounds that Prof. Osborne is opposing the Premier, as a straight Liberal and temperance candidate, until now the Liberal press has ignored his candidature. In this constituency Bonner declared that Bernard's nomination was irregular, and will protest it.

The Socialist candidates are: Edmund Fletcher in North, Wm. Cummings in Centre, and George Armstrong in West Winnipeg. In Gimli two Liberals, W. H. Pauson and John Folumbson, have been in active canvass, and up to midnight no positive information of their election had been received. Premier Roblin and Prof. Osborne opened a series of joint meetings in Dufferin, and as there is no love lost between them, there will probably be surprises. The Telegram prints an affidavit, accusing Horace Chevrier, Liberal, who is already charged with trying to sell a judgeship, with bribing a voter in Carillon with $5.

Reduced Passenger Rates.

Quebec, July 6.—The commission of public utilities met at half-past ten yesterday morning, at the Court House, and rendered judgment in the complaint against the Quebec & Lake St. John Railway, reducing considerably the rates between Quebec and St. Raymond.

Another decision was rendered against the merger of the electric and gas companies, maintaining the contracts passed between the old Quebec Gas Co. and the consumers in 1908 for five years.

Gouldthrite Had $1,056.

Windsor, July 6.—Upon taking the clothes from the body of James Gouldthrite the Detroit undertaker discovered $960, which with $96.68 already found in a pocketbook, made a total of $1,056.68 in money, with other valuables, discovered on the remains. The $960 was in a wallet next to the flesh, and also a note of identification with a request that the money be sent to his wife.

Big Fire In Lumber Yards.

Arnprior, July 6.—One of the most disastrous conflagrations in the history of Eastern Canada, outside of the City of Ottawa, occurred at Gillies Bros.' lumber yards at Braeside Monday night. A rough estimate is $100,000. In the yard there was about 60,000,000 feet of lumber, and this was completely destroyed.

Missionaries Are Besieged.

Baptists at Avellino, Italy, Have a Narrow Escape.

Infuriated Peasants Commit Serious Attack on Missionaries Who Have to be Guarded by Soldiers--Church in Which Fugitives Hide is Stoned For Six Hours--Will be No Further Affairs of the Kind.

Rome, July 6.—The U. S. Ambassador, John G. Leishman, has brought to the attention of the Premier and the Foreign Office the situation arising from recent attacks made upon Baptist missionaries in the Province of Avellino.

James P. Stuart of St. Louis, representative of the American Board of Baptist Missions in Italy, had a long conference with Ambassador Leishman yesterday, and he reported details of the occurrence.

Arriving at the outskirts of the village, near the town of Avellino, Mr. Stuart, accompanied by three other missionaries, was met by the chief of police, several constables and a dozen soldiers. A howling mob of natives quickly surrounded the carriage.

So demonstrative did they become that it was only with difficulty they could be restrained by force from doing the missionaries injury. On all sides arose the cry of "Down with the Baptists!" and a shower of stones fell about the carriage. Mr. Stuart was hit on the chest, the arm and the leg, while the chief of police was slightly wounded.

The soldiers, with fixed bayonets, formed a circle around the Americans and protected them to the entrance of the Baptist church. The mob, however, stoned the church from 4 to 10 o'clock at night, breaking all the windows, but doing no serious damage. Other soldiers were called to the scene, and, according to Mr. Stuart, prevented a massacre by the infuriated Catholics, who now numbered several thousand.

The besieged missionaries were obliged to remain in the church the whole night. Eventually Mr. Stuart succeeded in sending a telegram to the American Ambassador at Rome. The following day a detail of 400 soldiers were sent to the village, and the missionaries were released from their dangerous position.

Both Premier Luzzatti and the Foreign Minister, Marquis di San Guiliano, have given assurances that measures will be taken immediately to prevent such disturbances in the future and also that an investigation of the entire matter will be made.

De Lessep the Man.

Montreal, July 6.—Amid the welcoming whoops of Caughnawaga braves, Count Jacques de Lesseps was yesterday morning made a full fledged member of the Mohawk tribe of Indians, with all the ancient rites of the redmen. With the traditional feather and the pipe, emblematic of peace and good-fellowship, Great Chief Sakohentineha (Michael Mantour), received the scion of the ancient nobility of France into the tribe, and bestowed on him a new name, Tehanerahontsowaner, which, being interpreted into the white man's tongue, means "The man with the great wings."

Count de Lesseps will not admit that he is going to fly from Montreal to Toronto. He will return to France directly after the Toronto meet.

Both Legs Cut Off.

North Bay, July 6.—Archie McGinnes, an employe of the Cleveland Sarnia Lumber Co. at Diver, on his way home to Tedford, fell under the wheels of the G.T.R. Toronto express at North Bay and received injuries requiring the amputation of both legs. He is still living, but very weak, and his recovery is doubtful.

Peter Kinseale, one of the old residents of North Bay, died yesterday, aged 78, leaving a wife and four children.

George Treman, agod 67, shoe merchant, dropped dead on the street, leaving a wife and two children.

Struck by Engine.

Brockville, July 6.—A stonemason named Hugh Walker, passing through the Grand Trunk yards had a miraculous escape from being killed, when he was struck by a light engine and hurled to one side of the tracks. He was badly cut and bruised, but will recover.

A party of 92 girls arrived here yesterday from Scotland, to the Fairknowe Orphan Homes. They range in age from 7 to 21 years, and every one has been placed.

Montreal Builders Having Troubles.

Montreal, July 6.—There is evidently going to be a bitter struggle between the building employers and the 1,500 strikers. The point in dispute on the side of the builders is an open shop, first, last and always, while the men are fighting for the principles of the union.

All work is suspended on the large buildings. The strikers have organized a picket system, and will keep a sharp lookout for people crossing the lines.

RIGHTS IN LABRADOR.

But Treaty Gives U.S. No Newfoundland Fishing Privileges.

London, July 6.—Speaking before The Hague Fisheries Tribunal, Sir James S. Winter, on behalf of Newfoundland, endeavored to show the hollowness of ex-Senator Turner's argument for the United States that the legislation on the Newfoundland fisheries favored Newfoundland fishermen at the expense of Americans. With regard to the herring fishery regulations, counsel observed they could not affect American fishermen, because this kind of fishing is carried out on bays, harbors and creeks of territorial waters, which Americans are not allowed to enter by the treaty of 1818. In addition, he said, Newfoundland is not opposed to a modification of any regulations which might be deemed harsh towards Americans.

He argued that Newfoundland did not infringe on the treaty of 1818 by forbidding Americans in 1905 and 1906 to buy herring in Newfoundland as bait for codfishing, and from engaging the inhabitants of Newfoundland to catch herring there. These regulations are commercial in character, he said, and with regard to the other regulations, prohibiting the use of certain nets, etc., even if American criticism justified it, which the speaker denied, that is no proof that the United States had the right to veto Newfoundland fisheries legislation which affected vital interests, and, he said, Newfoundland intended to prevent Americans from abusing their privilege by destroying the fisheries.

He then showed that the treaty of 1818 granted Americans the right to fish only in the bays, harbors and creeks of Labrador, and not those of Newfoundland.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Officer Apologized.

Woodstock, July 6.—The promised departmental investigation into the charges preferred in an article published in a recent issue of The Sentinel-Review against an officer of the Canadian immigration department, for using insulting language and ordering W. J. Taylor, the well-known newspaper and magazine publisher of this city, off the train at Windsor, was held at The Sentinel-Review office, was conducted by Mr. H. G. Herbert, traveling inspector of the immigration department, the officer against whom the charges were laid being also present.

The offending official acknowledged that he had made a mistake in addressing Mr. Taylor in the way he did, and stated that he was under the impression that he was addressing another man with whom he had an altercation a few minutes before. He tendered a verbal and written apology to Mr. Taylor.

Shot His Chum.

Clinton, July 6.—Two boys, Albert Proctor, aged 17, and his nephew, J. Palmer, aged 13, were playing burglar and policeman at the former's house on Sunday, and as a result Proctor was shot in the heart and killed instantly.

One had a rifle, the other a shot gun.

There is no doubt that it was a mere accident, as the boys were good chums.

Body Taken From Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 6.—Yesterday the body of an unknown man, apparently in good circumstances, was taken from the river at the Maid of the Mist landing. The body was fully clothed, the garments bearing the name of a Buffalo maker. It had evidently been in the water over a week, as it was in a bad state of decomposition.

RIOTS FOLLOW FIGHT

Racial Disturbances Break Out in American Cities.

Almost Every Place With a Negro Population of Any Size Is Scene of Fatal Strife on Monday Night, Immediately After News Is Received of Result of Pugilistic Encounter at Reno—To Stop Pictures.

New York, July 6.—According to despatches, serious race riots broke out Monday night in many places, due to the prize fight result.

At Ualdia, Ga., three negroes are reported to have been killed; Omaha, Neb., one killed and many injured and arrested; Little Rock, Ark., two killed; Mounds, Ill., two negro policemen killed by colored rioters; Roanoke, Va., six negroes were critically beaten; many whites arrested and saloons closed; one white shot; Tallulah, La., a negro killed conductor who demanded railroad fare; Pittsburg, Pa., scores of race riots in "Black Belt." Thousands involved. Two policemen seriously hurt. One hundred arrests made; Philadelphia, whites pursued negroes along streets, throwing bricks. Several injured. Negro paraders in Germantown dispersed by whites; Wilmington, Del., negroes attacked white man and whites attempted a lynching bee; St. Louis, Mo., riots in negro quarters; Macon, Ga., many slightly injured; Atlanta, Ga., negro ran amuck with knife, and mob tried to kill him; Cincinnati, O., negroes chased off streets for insulting remarks; Baltimore, Md., eighty arrests made. Several negroes badly cut up.

At Washington, D.C., two whites were perhaps fatally stabbed by negroes, two hospitals crowded with injured, and 236 arrests made. Riots continued all night. Clarksburg, W.V., angered by insolence of negroes, 1,000 whites drove negroes off the streets, using violence. One negro was led about the streets with a rope around his neck until saved by the police. Saloons are closed and state troops asked for. Norfolk, Va., sailors from battleships attacked all negroes on the streets. Kansas City, Mo., negroes were driven off the street cars. New York, one negro was beaten to death and scores injured in half a hundred race riots. Jacksonville, Fla., city jail is filled with rioters, the saloons all closed, and at least a dozen victims in hospitals. Columbus, O., rioting, marked a parade through the streets organized by hilarious negroes; the trouble was caused chiefly by drunken whites. New Orleans, La., James Lee and Emile Thomson, two negroes, were shot and seriously wounded by two unknown white men, who approached them with the declaration "Johnson won, but we will get even with all negroes." Chattanooga, Tenn., three white militiamen from Mississippi, charged with attempting to incite a riot with negroes were turned over to an officer of their regiment. Schenectady, N.Y., a white man propelling a wheelbarrow containing a colored man through the downtown streets precipitated a riot. It was in payment of a bet as to the result of the fight. Feeling ran high for several hours and ten negroes were badly handled.

May Prohibit Fight Pictures.

Baltimore, Md., July 6.—Backed by the authority of the board of police commissioners, Marshal Farman will request Mayor Mahool to prohibit the proposed exhibition in Baltimore of the moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight. The mayor says that, with formal complaint before him, he will stop the pictures.

Action by the police commissioners was taken yesterday morning, following the submission by Marshal Farman of reports showing the widespread rioting all over the country, including Baltimore, during Monday night, and the frequent clashes between whites and blacks.

Marshal Farnam said: "I am strongly opposed to having moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight shown in Baltimore. We have a large colored population here, and the exhibition of the pictures might cause racial troubles."

As Bad as a Prize Fight.

Boston, July 6.—Denouncing college football as a combination of pure brutality and pugilism, David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford University, led in the discussion that followed the report made yesterday by the committee on moral education in public schools to the National Education Association in convention here.

The game, he said, arouses the same love of the sordid that focussed the interest of the country in "a ring away out in far Nevada, where a black man and a white man were pounding each other yesterday."

President Jordan favored the substitution of the English game of Rugby.

Same Trouble in Washington.

Washington, July 6.—Moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight may be barred from the District of Columbia. Police Chief Sylvester has announced that he will do his utmost to prevent the films being shown here. He fears a repetition of the race riots which took place on the streets Monday when it became known that the negro had won.

The three commissioners who are the heads of the local Government in the district have the police chief's recommendation under consideration, and expect to announce a decision to-day.

A good many people seem to think there is some personal glory, some wonderful show of independence in being what the slang phrase terms a "knocker." No matter what appears above the horizon of success, no matter how true and honest a thing may be, these people take a delight in wielding the club of criticism and attempting to knock out for good and all enterprises of which they know nothing.

◆ ◆ ◆

We find the knocker in all walks of life. He even infests the house of God and gets in his rap at the pastor who may not exactly satisfy every one of his ideals. We find him in politics to an alarming extent. Generally he is what used to be known as mugwump, seeing good in no party but that which he constitutes by himself, always abusing the successful statesman and never giving any one credit for honesty of purpose or uprightness of life.

◆ ◆ ◆

We find him in fine arts, criticizing with bitterness whatever he does not understand and appears to him to be heresy. We find him in the liberal professions, always bilious and ever striving to batter the head of the man in front of him in order that he may have a better view of the landscape.

◆ ◆ ◆

The chief of all, perhaps, we find the knocker in finance and the conducting of great enterprises. The knocker proceeds to bang the integrity of its sponsors.

◆ ◆ ◆

The knocker has a theory that the dividends are not earned and are being distributed from the sales of stock. You cannot convince him that things are on the level, and even if he is shown the actual fact, he is generally not man enough to admit it.

◆ ◆ ◆

Don't be a knocker whatever you are. You can have our own beliefs and your own ideas about things, and when you know that enterprises are wrong, it is all right to say so, but to knock and insinuate, when you have no evidence whatever that your charges are based on truth is a pretty poor pastime for any man to engage in.

◆ ◆ ◆

And in addition, it may be said, that nobody ever got rich by knocking. The knockers are the fellows who always turn down the profitable propositions.

Wedding Bells.

BROWN—JOHNSON

An exceedingly pretty wedding took place at half past twelve, on June 29th, at the residence of Mrs. J. Johnson, Frankford, when her youngest daughter Jean was united in marriage to Mr. Albert J. Brown, of Duluth, Minn. The bridal procession passed to the drawing room through an aisle formed of white ribbons to their places under a floral arch, banked with palms and marguerites, which practically decorated the entire home. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J.S. McMullen, and the bride, who was given away by her mother, was unattended. She wore a beautiful, hand-embroidered gown over white silk, with wedding veil and orange blossoms, and carried a sheaf of white roses. An orchestra played the wedding march and continued in attendance during the afternoon. The dinner was served on small tables, surrounding the bride's table, under a canopy on the lawn. The many handsome gifts received by the bride show the appreciation in which she is held by her wide circle of friends. She travelled in a smart North Pole blue tailored suit with becoming hat to match. Mr and Mrs. Brown left on the afternoon train for Montreal, Quebec and Pennsylvania, after which they will return by the Great Lakes to their home in Duluth

Wilson--Pringle

OLD BOYS' REUNION NOTES.

One final appeal also for unpaid subscriptions. $200 are still needed for absolutely necessary expenses. Gentlemen will you not respond?

The girls of the High School have organized. Well done true Daughters of Belleville! Now let us have volunteers for the Children's floats, and volunteers to make the welcome badges. What nicer attention than for the children to pin on the coat of every visitor a little token of welcome. Let each school girl try the experiment at home and have the badges ready when they meet and greet the home comers. They will appreciate the delicate compliment, the dainty thoughtfulness of Belleville's little ladies!

It is such letters as the following that make the re-union "worth while" and should stimulate our working together so that the four official days may be numbered to our guests among the pleasures and treasures of memory:

New York, June 1910.

My Dear Colonel,—On my return to business today after a somewhat prolonged absence, I find upon my desk an invitation to be present on the occasion of the "Old Boys" Reunion at Belleville late in July and for which I desire, through you, to thank your committee most heartily.

In reply, I regret more than I can express that circumstances over which I have no control prevent my acceptance, and this feeling is accentuated by the fact, learning sometime since that it was intended to hold a reunion this year. I have been keenly anticipating participation in its pleasures and the renewal of old associations hallowed by memories of Belleville which have followed me throughout my somewhat strenuous life away from the old home extending now over more than a quarter of a century.

The beautiful "City of the Bay" has been and always will remain "home" to me; and while with the years many of the old familiar faces have departed, some to seek homes in that great Canadian Empire of the West, others, like myself, to maintain themselves and families under a foreign flag, and still others have gone to that mysterious realm where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death, yet my frequent visits to Belleville have always been fraught with pleasure, mingled with sadness as I have realized the changes which time has wrought; but from those who are left it has been my privilege always to receive a most hearty welcome and that warm handclasp and greeting which bespeaks the meeting again of old-time friends and the renewal of friendships, the memory of which will remain with me to the last.

As I write, I recall again with pleasure the old days of No. 4, the Belleville grammar school with Mr. Burden at its head, the momentous occasion when yourself, Will Northrup, Frank and Alex. Campbell, Jack Bell, Bob Gordon and myself departed for Upper Canada College, and I picture to myself the midnight oil you burned to foster your budding poetic genius which effervesced through the columns of the "College Times" in memorable couplets such as "The nox was lit by lux of luna,

"And on that night did sweet fortune
"Favere fortibus most opportuna."

I also recall with pleasure my sailing days under the auspices of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club, of which there are very few charter members remaining.

I wish you would assure the members of your committee and any of the "Old Boys" who recall me, that while absent in person I shall be with you in spirit during the reunion and I wish you success far beyond your most sanguine expectations.

CHARLES CORBY.

Fort William, June 1910.

With very great pleasure I accept the Committee's kind invitation for the Old Boys' Reunion. It was only today that I found my daughter and I could attend.

Gladly will we revisit the dear old home town, and though the one corner blessed by my dear mother's presence is, like her, no more, our good friends are expecting us, and we will spend the old home week with them. With best wishes for the success of what has, I am sure, taken much time and thought from you all.

GERTRUDE M. CUDDY.

One final appeal to all our citizens! 4400 invitations have been sent out by the Secretary. Is the name of your absent relative on the list?

Red is the Most Frequent, and After That Comes Blue.

It is entirely appropriate, of course, that red, the war color, should appear so frequently in the flags of the various nations. Of the flags of the countries of the eastern hemisphere there is only one—that of Greece—which does not show the martial color. In the western hemisphere, however, we find several standards not showing red. The flags of the Argentine Republic, Brazil, Nicaragua, Guatemala, Uruguay and Honduras contain no red.

In this country there is no red in the union jack or in the flags of the secretary of the navy, the admiral of the navy, the rear admiral senior in rank and the rear admiral junior in rank. Red appears in the pennant of the rear admiral second in rank and the pennant of the revenue marine. The United States mail flag also shows red, and that color is also found in the pennants for the vessels of the lighthouse service, the yacht ensign, the ensign of the revenue marine, the president's and the secretary of war's standards.

The flags that are almost entirely red, except for the devices shown thereon, are those of Austria-Hungary, Egypt, Morocco and Japan. The flag of Turkey is practically of a solid red.

Bows and Smiles and Flattery All Used In Business.

"Bon jour, madame." This in a cordial tone and accompanied by a ready smile is the welcome of your French tradesman or tradeswoman. With lowly bows and widespreading smiles he shows himself delighted to serve you. If you look over everything in the shop and buy only the wing of a chicken, yet he will just as smilingly bow you out and hope to see you again.

Once I entered my milkman's speckless shop and was met by Monsieur Jean himself. "Oh, Monsieur Jean," I smiled, "I am so sorry! Your milk is so delicious, but I find that I cannot use all of 4 cents' worth a day." Monsieur Jean was all sympathy, understanding at once, and answered, "But, madame, let me send you half that quantity, 2 cents' worth—1 cent's worth—what you will." And with a shrug and a smile, as if to say: "What is 2 cents' worth of milk compared with the honor of your patronage?" he put my fears to rest.

This subtle flattery of the tradesman is really good business. One is only human, and it is so pleasant to be a person of consequence! I resolved on the spot to buy all my butter and cheese from Monsieur Jean, as well as the milk.—New Idea Woman's Magazine.

The Langelier and Other Judgeships.

The Manitoba $10,000 Judgeship transaction revives the memory, and carries it back to the election contest of 1896, when the Liberals were fighting the Tupper Government. At that time Francis Langelier was a member of the Commons for Centre Quebec, and had been promised the Lieut. Governorship of his Province, a Judgeship or a seat in the Cabinet in the event of the party being successful. To assist in carrying the elections in Quebec, Langelier involved himself financially by mortgaging his property to raise election funds. The elections were won by the Liberal party, but when the Government was formed there was no place for Langelier in the Cabinet, although he had been elected. He complained bitterly, and that to publicly of the treatment accorded him. Sir Wilfrid thereupon wrote him a letter in which he pledged Mr. Langelier the Lieutenant-Governorship of the province, or, if he preferred it, the first judgeship that should become vacant. With this promise in his pocket, the holder sat in Parliament and voted, of course, independently, for an entire session. Trouble arose in the party on the questions of the Lieut-Governorship, and there being a vacancy on the Bench, Langelier became furious and began to let the public know how he had been treated publishing letters to that effect. To solve the difficulty Sir Wilfrid appointed Judge Jette to the Lieut.-Governorship, of Quebec, thus creating a vacancy on the Bench which was filled by the appointment of Langelier.

This is not all. Trafficking in Judgeships has characterized the Laurier reign. There was the Choquette and Peltier, manipulation from the Senate to the Bench, from the Bench to the Lieutenant-Governorship, and the Choquette appointment and descent from the Bench to the political organizationship of Quebec, then to the Senate. All this and more has been the work of Sir Wilfrid, hence his assumed indignation, and the Globe's venomous attack upon the Hon. Robt. Rodgers, are the veriest bosh, and is so received by those who have given any attention to the political history of his country. Pretense, hypocrisy and violations of pledges, so far as principle is concerned is the reward of the Laurier Cabinet.

Such is, has been, and will continue to be, its history to the end, which the sooner reached the better for the country.

Alfonso's First Encounter With a Small Railway Lunch Room.

Xavier Paoli in McClure's tells of King Alfonso's first encounter with the lunch room of a small railway station. Alfonso had been out motoring and was ravenously hungry.

"Give us some lunch, please," said the king to the lady at the bar.

The refreshment room unfortunately was very meagerly supplied. When the two traveling companions had eaten up the sorry fare represented by a few eggs and sandwiches, which had probably been waiting for more than a month for a traveler to arrive, the king, whose appetite was far from being satisfied, called the barmaid, a fat and matronly Bearnaise with an upper lip adorned with a pair of thick mustachios.

"Have you nothing else to give us?" he asked.

"I have a pate de foie gras, but—it's very expensive," said the decent creature, who did not see a serious customer in this famished and dusty young man.

AT GRIFFIN'S

Family Theatre the first three days of this week will be three big acts of Vaudeville, including James Wise, Cartoonist, who is one of the cleverest in his line, amusing and surprising. Also May Fulton, Character Comedienne, the girl from home, will introduce some very clever character changes. Must be seen to be appreciated. The management has also secured as a Special Feature John and Brady, in their own original success, Cohan the Cop, a laugh from start to finish. Don't fail to hear Mr. Brady's own original parodies on Old Grey Bonnet and Rings on My Fingers, and all other popular songs; without doubt the best act of its kind ever put before the Theatre going public of Belleville; also three illustrated pictures and Joe Carr in illustrated song. 4-3d

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature R.V. Pierce M.D.

TO PRESERVE CASTLE

RICHMOND KEEP IN YORKSHIRE TAKEN OVER BY THE CROWN.

Funds Provided For In Harcourt's Ancient Monuments Bill Will Probably Be Applied Toward the Support of Famous Norman Castle—Curfew Bell Has Been Rung at 8 o'Clock Every Night.

Richmond Castle, in Yorkshire, Eng., has recently been taken over by the Office of Works, and it is probable that before long further provision will be made for its maintenance by Mr. Harcourt's Ancient Monuments Protection Bill.

The castle, once the strongest and largest Norman keep in that country, was founded by Alan Rufus, a son of Hoel, Count of Brittany, who came over with his kinsman, the Conqueror, and fought at Hastings. During the early Scottish invasions and in the Wars of the Roses Richmond Castle held its own; indeed, was famous as being impregnable.

At a later date it passed into the possession of the Tudor family, and Edmund, who married Margaret Beaufort, and became the father of Henry VII. (who was born Earl of Richmond), had a special preference for the place. Gradually, through neglect, it fell into decay, and has remained so for centuries. One part, however, was preserved and is now converted into a storehouse for the North York Militia.

RICHMOND CASTLE

The principal portion remaining, as here depicted, is an immense square tower on the north side, a structure of twelfth century date. Nearly opposite, at the southeast corner, are the remains of a smaller tower, beneath which is a dungeon fourteen feet deep. A third tower stands at the southwest corner, and is round and narrow, having now no entrance except from the top—some considerable height.

The ruins of the banqueting hall show that it was once a noble and imposing apartment, some 72 feet, in length, and 27 feet wide. The roof of this building has long since fallen away, but the corbels are preserved intact.

From the main tower the curfew bell is rung every evening at eight, a custom which has continued ever since the time of William the Conqueror."

Lost Votes.

A Parliamentary candidate lost quite a number of votes by making a generous promise to his own wife. He promised his better half that if he were successful at the poll he would buy her a new sealskin coat and hat to match. His wife was so pleased with this kindly offer that she at once went and told all her lady friends about it. Every lady to whom this piece of news was imparted, of course, said to the candidate's wife at once, "Oh, how very nice, dear!" but equally, of course, immediately went off home to her husband and said: "Take care you don't vote for Mr. A., dear. Fancy that stuck up Mrs. A. in a new sealskin while my old one is so shabby!"—London Express.

Natural Soap.

Natural soap is not heard of every day; yet it not only exists but is highly prized by Jack Tar in tropic regions when the purser reports that the ship's supply of soap has given out. Then all hands are sent ashore to gather a supply of "natural soap," which is found on the shore in the shape of whelks' eggs. The eggs are found in a light-yellowish mass which is composed of some five or six hundred capsules. One fish alone produces millions of these eggs in the course of the year. They are found on the shores of the Atlantic, but are very profuse on the inter-tropical coral reefs, where sailors take large quantities aboard for use as soap.

Unusual.

Corporal of the Guard—Sentry, port arms! Give up your orders!

Sentry proceeds to give over his orders until he comes to the hackneyed "in case of fire or any unusual occurrence immediately alarm the guard."

Officer of the Day (to sentry)—What would you call an unusual occurrence, my man?

Sentry—Well, sir, if I were to walk to the far end of my post and turned round and found the sentry box marking time I should call that an unusual occurrence.

Ended the Dispute.

Two ladies at a tea party got quarreling about their respective ages. At last to end the dispute one of them said in a conciliatory tone of voice:

"Don't let us quarrel over the matter any more, dear. I, at least, have not the heart to do it. I never knew who my mother was, for she deserted me when I was a baby, and who knows but that you may have been that heartless parent?"

Good For Evil.

"I trust you try to return good for evil," said the high-minded man.

"I not only try," said Mr. Sirius Barker, "but I succeed. Bliggins gave me one of his cigars yesterday, and I gave him one of mine this morning."

A BELIEF IN GHOSTS.

Finds Lodgment In Many Minds Despite Scientific Denials.

Are there such things as ghosts? The incredulity with which the question is often asked is paralleled by the passionate belief with which the affirmative answer is often stated. That there are apparitions is granted even by the most skeptical investigators. But whereas the impressionable seer of ghosts believes they are supernatural the colder scientist says they are nothing but hallucinations. Frank Podmore, the English "ghost hunter" has much to say of the attendant circumstances in most ghost seeing, circumstances which do much to weaken the value of the testimony of the seer. Almost invariably there are mysterious noises, by which the witness is put in a state of nervous alarm. Then comes the vision, which often takes terrifying form. Is the ghost seer viewing something objective and external or is he merely contemplating an image created by his own imagination? Of the good faith of many people who say they have seen ghosts there can be no question, but Mr. Podmore shakes his head as to their credibility.

And yet when the testimony of people who believe they have seen ghosts has been attenuated to the utmost people will still believe. Science may discredit evidence, but it cannot prove that ghosts do not exist. Throughout the ages there is a cumulative mass of testimony which, though it does not amount to proof, yet commands shuddering respect. The sternest materialism will not eliminate from people's minds that credence in the unknown and the undemonstrable which has been handed down to them from the beginnings of time.

Plato himself accepted the existence of ghosts, and he makes Socrates explain their frequenting of graveyards. These ghosts, says the great Athenian, long to re-enter the body in which they could gratify their desires. It is hopeless, but memory tortures them with vain affection for the fleshly abode in which they formerly dwelt. Shakespeare is full of allusions to the dwellers in the realm of shadows. But he, too, knows the meaning of philosophic doubt, for he makes Hamlet wonder whether the image of his father may not be some coinage of his fancy. He hesitates between contrary opinions, but inclines toward belief in the supernatural. He says to his friend:

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in thy philosophy.

From Shakespeare's day to now we have advanced in one particular. We know more of the composition of the brain and the susceptibilities of nervous tissue. We are assured to-day that a man may honestly believe he sees a ghost and yet see nothing but the projection of an image within his own brain. But as to the existence or non-existence of ghosts we are as ignorant as the ancient Egyptian or the modern redskin. Reason learnedly as we may, we cannot eradicate from our mind that vague feeling, half fear, half hope, that ghosts may be. Sir Thomas Browne touches on this matter with characteristic quaintness. Some people, he says, hope to see a ghost that they may be persuaded of the immortality of the soul. But he adds that the devil will never let them see one, for that would be to turn them away from himself.

DENTED HIS DIGNITY.

The Cook's Familiarity With the Captain Was Ill Timed.

Enos Silsbee and Ethan Knight came from the same little town on the coast of Maine. As boys they had grown up together, and now as men they were sailing together on the same schooner. Ethan was captain, and Enos was the cook. Their positions might well have been reversed, for Ethan was better with the skillet than Enos, and Enos probably knew as much about navigation as his friend. Still, they maintained their respective places, and neither thought of a shift.

Usually on board the Maria there was little formality between the captain and the crew. In port, however, and on certain occasions it was thought necessary to maintain the dignity of office.

One day a naval officer came on board on some business. Captain Knight received him in his best manner, thanking his stars that he happened to have his good coat on when the officer arrived unexpectedly.

In the midst of their interview in the captain's cabin Enos, apron tied behind, as was his wont when not very busy, poked his head in at the door.

"Ethan," he said, "where's the saucepan?"

Captain Knight frowned, and the officer looked at once surprised and indifferent.

"Your conduct is amazing, sir," the captain said in his most dignified manner. "Your saucepan must be where you left it."

"You had it last," protested Enos. "You said you could fry"—

But the captain had slammed the door.—Youth's Companion.

Young at Seventy-Two.

A wonderful woman is Miss Genevieve Ward, the veteran actress, who, although she recently celebrated her seventy-second birthday, will take part this month in the Shakespeare Birthday Festivals at His Majesty's Theatre. It is fifty-four years ago since she made her debut at Milan in opera. Later she completely lost her voice, and adopting a dramatic career, became one of the most popular of tragedy queens. To-day she is as energetic as ever, and attributes her good health to simple life and cheerfulness. Live moderately and take plenty of exercise. That is the secret of long life, she says; and every morning she takes a regular Sandow course and walks a few miles each day.

KEPT TAB ON THE FLIES.

The Way Those Germ Carriers Travel Long Distances.

In the summer of 1908, as chairman of the New York Merchants' association committee on water pollution (which carries on a warfare against flies as a nuisance growing out of water pollution), I was engaged in an effort to induce two of the railroads entering New York to remove the huge manure heaps which they maintained on the Newark meadows near the tracks.

I visited the place one day with an inspector, and after we had looked it over we boarded a street car which passed it, bound for Newark, about five miles away. A woman wearing a new alpaca dress got on it at the same time; so did forty-two flies, which my companion and I counted after they had settled on the new dress, which seemed to attract them. They had the fresh, silvery look of the newly hatched fly and the fly instinct which moved them to start on their travels at the earliest possible moment and thus keep the species from dying out in any given locality.

We both watched those flies carefully. Eight left the car when we reached the outskirts of Newark, three miles away. About half a mile farther on seven more got off. Others left at intervals until nearly all of those left got out with the majority of the passengers in front of a church. Four remained on the dress until the wearer left the car at the end of the route, five miles from the point from which they had started, and I suppose they went home to dinner with her.

One summer morning last year I took a seat in a Delaware and Hudson dining car as it started from Albany for Lake Champlain. Several Albany flies were fellow passengers. I observed two of them resting on the shoulder of the woman who sat opposite me at table. Evidently it was not yet their breakfast time, for they kept their places all through the meal.

Those flies didn't shift their positions materially until we reached Saratoga. There, as the train stopped, they were visited by a local delegation, as it seemed to me, the members of which apparently conversed with them in fly language, if that is what the rubbing together of their probosces means. Perhaps they were a reception committee recommending the Saratoga hotels, but if so they were disappointed, for the Albanians shook them off as if assuring them that they were satisfied with their accommodations.

Other flies drifted in and tried to interest their traveling brethren as we stopped at various stations, but with no more success, for when the train reached Bluff Point, which happened to be the destination of my unknown fellow passenger as well as myself, the faithful two were still with her. So they were when she registered at the hotel desk, and for all I know they lived happily with her ever after. Certainly their attachment up to that point was striking enough. It had lasted for a journey of 165 miles, and if they had any disease germs about them they succeeded in delivering them with more expedition than if they had sent them by express.—Edward Hatch, Jr., in Suburban Life.

"Not murder!" he said to himself.

He did not mean that; but she must be got rid of. She must go where she could never annoy him more.

Even as he thought a cold, mortal chill seized him. What if she had already betrayed him—if she had talked to the Westerne's of him?

Yet, no; she had promised, and for one whole month he knew she would keep her word.

Was he losing heart and spirit, now that he was so near success? What was the matter with him? Why did he dream again through the long nights of those most terrible words, "The wages of sin is death?"

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Picture.

The day came when Edith's search was rewarded, and the sketch so long looked for lay in her hands.

It was a small square picture, painted by the wish of Edgar Wayne. She remembered the day and the hour vividly. A warm, bright evening when the sky was wonderfully clear and blue, without clouds, and flushed with the gold of the sun. The tall, luxuriant tree with the scarlet berries stood alone, raising its crimson head to the clear, deep sky. It was a picture in itself—the beauty of which was enhanced by the two children playing under its shade. She remembered the bright, agile, brown squirrel they were trying to tame; how it leaped between them, and Edgar Wayne, standing by talking to Paul Westerne, had said to him:

"If I were rich, Westerne, I should give you a commission to paint that picture for me."

'I will do it without that," replied the artist, and she distinctly remembered how rapidly her father had made the sketch, and how Alan Wayne sat to him several times afterward in order that his face might be accurately painted.

Then, with the hurry of leaving Wabash, the picture was thrown aside—and forgotten by all save herself.

After long search she found it hidden among a heap of dusty old papers, carefully wrapped up, and not in the least faded or spoiled.

Alan Wayne's face was very different from that of the baronet who came so often to her father's house; there was no one single point of resemblance; the features were dissimilar in ever respect.

Looking at it, Edith felt her first suspicion was correct—the man bearing Alan's name and filling Alan's place was no more the true Alan than she was.

The thought came to her like the point of a sharp sword.

Where was Alan Wayne? Had foul wrong been done to him? Had he been slain in the far-off land, or had he sickened and died there? Did those eyes, looking so appealingly at her ask her to discover a wicked deed? or were they saying he could not rest in peace?

"It will be found out," said Edith, speaking half to the picture, half to herself. "If no other voice is raised on earth to ask where you are, Alan, mine shall be. I will never rest again until I know if you are living or dead—and if dead, how you died!"

She carried the little picture to the artist's studio, where he stood busily at work, and laid it down before him.

"God is just, papa," she said, gravely; "evil deeds always come to light. This is the face of Alan Wayne. Do you see any resemblance here to the man who calls himself Alan Aynsley?"

Mr. Westerne bent anxiously over the picture.

"Dear me, Edith! How well I remember it! I thought the scarlet-berried tree stood out in such bold relief against the blue sky. Alan's face rises before me again—how could I have forgotten it? This is it—calm, clear cut. Why, Edith, child, this is not the face of Sir Alan Aynsley!"

The artist spoke in a voice of absolute terror.

"I told you so from the first," his daughter replied, gravely. "Now, papa, do not say it is my fancy, but look at the pictured eyes of the boy you loved. Are they not appealing to you, as though he would ask you to see justice done to him?"

"You startle me—you frighten me!" cried Paul Westerne. "How could I ever have forgotten that face? But what can we do, Edith? What can we do?"

"We must think it over," she said. "Where is Alan, should you imagine Is he alive or dead? Has the man who usurped his place slain him, or has he imprisoned him? We have that to discover first!"

But Paul Weterne's face had grown very white and anxious. He was a strong man, but this discovery had unnerved him. Could it be that deadly wrong had been done to his old friend's son? Could the seemingly generous young man who had loaded him with favors and benefits be a thief—an imposter? Nay, perhaps worse."

"I—I believe you are right, Edith," he stammered at last. "God help us. I know no more than a child what to do. Shall we tell Sir Alan of this picture?"

"Sir Alan!" she cried, "certainly not! You must fight a rogue with his own weapons. He is a clever man—how clever we know not yet. I believe this much of him, papa, that if you were to tell him of our discovery, he would find some way of moving us, and the picture, too, from the face of the earth!"

Paul Westerne's face turned even whiter.

"What are we to do! I cannot see my way?"

"The first thing to do," said Edith, resolutely, "is to recover yourself; forget everything except that you are the man appointed by God, as I believe, to redress a wrong; think only of that and you will be brave enough, papa."

The artist began to feel stronger; the sight of the fair, brave face nerved him.

"If Alan should be alive, we will find him and restore Carsdale to him, papa. If he be dead, it must go to the righful heir. This man has so claim to it—every moment he calls it his own is another injustice."

"Who would the rightful heir be," asked the artist, "supposing all is as we fear?"

"I have thought of it all," said Edith, calmly. "I felt sure you would be convinced in the end, papa. The rightful heir is a gentleman named Captain Vivian Chandos, an officer in the army, one of the most popular men in London, I believe, and, strange to say, he was once a lover of Lady Blanche Damar, whom this man says he is to marry. You should go to him and tell him of our discovery; it concerns him most should poor Alan be dead, and let what has to be done be done quickly. If this man should hear even the faintest rumor, he is capable of selling everything and running away with the money. You can no longer have any doubt. The tree test failed: the man is as different from Alan Wayne as light from darkness; let justice be done speedily, without weak relenting—this very evening let us find out the address of Captain Chandos, and go to him!"

The artist looked up breathlessly. Such rapidity of thought and action bewildered him. And in the secret depths of his heart, hidden carefully from his daughter, there lingered deep pity for the wretched man he was called upon to punish.

* * * * * *

Time had dragged on wearily with Captain Chandos. He had made several ineffectual attempts at exchanging into some regiment going abroad, but there came no opportunity, and as his own troop was stationed in the Regents Park barracks, he was obliged to remain in London.

Time had brought no healing to his wound; his sorrow was with him still. He came of a race who knew how to die and make no sign—of a race whose men bore torture and death without a murmur, and his pain extorted no sign from him.

His life and every hope that once brightened it seemed dead. Only one wish lived with him to put the breadth of the world between himself and the woman he loved so dearly.

The fair, dauntless face had grown haggard and worn; the tone of his voice had changed; all the music had gone out of his laugh; there were mornings when he looked as though the long nights had been spent in fighting with sorrow. No one knew his secret; and with the iron will that distinguishes a brave man he had controlled all sorrow.

He was leaving his club one evening when he heard his name mentioned by the porter.

"Captain Chandos, sir?" the man was saying to a gentleman. "Yes, he was here some time since. I will see."

"I am Captain Chandos," he said, coming forward. "Do you want me?"

The face into which he looked was quite unknown to him.

"I wish to see you very particularly," was the reply. "And, as my busi-

QUESTIONS IN COURT

A Series That Moved an Observer to Turn Critic.

SOME GEMS HE PRESERVED.

The Lawyers Didn't Seem to See the Ridiculous Phase of the Inquiry, but It Loomed Large to the Man With an Idea That the Law Is Solemn.

A man who spent several days in a courtroom listening to the examination of veniremen was struck with the reflection that some shining legal minds would not be unduly dimmed by the infusion of a few of the principles of logic. The time taken up by attorneys in drawing the conclusion that a juror who lives at a given address makes his home there and then referring the conclusion to the juror for confirmation has not been computed, but any one mathematically inclined may figure it out by multiplying the following examples by any handy large round number:

"What is your occupation?"

"I am a switchman."

"On a railroad?"

The obvious answer which the juror's awe of his surroundings prevents him from making would be, of course, "No, in an ice cream parlor."

"Judge," said a juror, "I would like to be excused from service. When summoned I was making arrangements for my brother-in-law's funeral."

"Is your brother-in-law dead?" inquired the court.

It developed that he was.

"Now, Mr. Juror," came another question, "what is your age?"

"Forty-four."

"Forty-four years old?"

That is exactly what the juror meant. The lawyer guessed right the very first time.

Here is another flash that came to one of the attorneys. "Where do you live?" he asked.

"At 4416 Blank street."

"You reside there, do you?"

Once in awhile there is a funny answer which isn't to be wondered at considering the power of suggestion.

"Are you married?"

"Yes."

"Any family?"

"Two."

But the balance is well on the lawyers' side. Witness this: The questioner had asked if a juror was related in any way to any of the principals or witnesses in the case.

"I am a brother-in-law of Mr. Blank, one of the witnesses," was the reply.

"You married his sister, then?"

He had.

"Let me ask you now, Mr. Juror, have you formed any opinion about the guilt or innocence of this defendant?"

"I have."

"Is it a fixed opinion or is it one that could be changed by evidence?"

"It could be changed if the evidence were strong enough."

"Then you would not call it a definite opinion?"

"No."

"It is a vague opinion, then?"

"Yes."

"Now, Mr. Juror, follow me closely, if you please. You say your opinion is a vague one and not definitely fixed. Now, then, if that is the case and you went into that jury box and listened to the evidence adduced from that witness stand and heard the law expounded by the judge from that bench, would it not be possible for you to lay aside that opinion and concur in a verdict warranted by the evidence and the instructions of the court?"

"Yes."

The attorney, having received the same answer to his long question as to his short one, is perfectly satisfied and throws a triumphant look at his colleague, which says, "I knew I could get it out of him if I kept at him long enough."

Here is another astonishing deduction: A juror took the stand dressed in a blue uniform with brass buttons. Around his belt was strapped a money changer. The examining attorney looked at him long and searchingly and then said in a tone which admitted of no trifling:

"You are a street car conductor?"

It was the same attorney who forced this confession from another juror:

"What is your occupation?"

"I'm a bookkeeper for Blank & Co."

"You keep books in the office?"

Unmasked, the bookkeeper broke down and made a clean breast of it.

"Now, Mr. Juror, be good enough to state how old you are."

"Fifty-six years."

"How long have you resided in this state?"

"Fifteen years."

"Then you were not born here?"

The trapped man admitted the truth.

Here is another:

"Were you born in Missouri?"

"No, sir."

"Oh, I see. Then you moved here from some other state." And then in a "come-come-don't-delay-the-court" tone of voice, "Where did you come from?"

"Chicago."

"Chicago, Ill.?"—Kansas City Times.

Unhappy Man!

"Yes, my old friend, I have been the victim of misfortune in all my love affairs. My first sweetheart died, the second jilted me, and the third became my wife!"

Miss Alice Henry, president of the West Side Equal Suffrage association of Chicago, is a native of Melbourne, Australia. For thirteen years she was attached to the staff of the Australasian. She spent six months in Great Britain investigating social conditions before coming to this country a few years ago.

Flour Without Gluten Is Like Powdered Chalk

Being a keen observer in matters culinary, no doubt you have observed this fact.

In your mixing bowl some flours seem sticky, elastic, almost "rubbery".

Often using the usual quantities of liquids and things, you were simply forced to add a lot more water, for your dough seemed "overtight". Doing this you obtained a surprising number of loaves.

Such is STRONG flour, Madam, giving you much more for your efforts and money—Thirsty flour—Economical flour. Once you know and use a flour like FIVE ROSES, Madam, cheapness has lost its charm: All others seem weak and soft, flabby and flaccid.

Cheap flours take up just as much time and trouble—more, in fact. And somehow your good things don't seem so good, so palatable, so dainty, light, toothsome.

It's the difference in GLUTEN that causes all this, Madam.

For Gluten is the Sticky Substance in flour which holds your dough together in bowl, and pan, and oven—causing your breadstuffs to rise so beautifully and stay risen—keeping your bread moist and fresh over so long, even in the dog days hot and dry.

Now, FIVE ROSES is milled purely from vigorous, fully matured Manitoba wheat—the wheat with the most gluten, the best gluten.

And gluten is everything in flour, and flour is everything in the kitchen—isn't that so?

FIVE ROSES, Madam, is simply "saturated" with this Rich Gluten.

Buy a flour that has strength, health, flavor — with the most gluten.

Buy FIVE ROSES.

Hardly Changed Since the Days of the Early Metal Workers.

As the first fireplace was a circle of stones at the mouth of a cave, so the first poker was a piece of green stick. It was necessary to have something to knock the logs together when they began to burn through the middle, and as primitive man did not wear boots he could not use them to kick the hot embers into place, as some of us do to this day. That was a refinement, if it can be so called, which came later. The green stick lasted until the age of iron and was then superseded by a handy piece of metal which possessed the advantage of being stronger and of not burning away. But since the days of the early workers in metal we have made no advance.

The poker has hardly, if at all, changed through the ages. It is, as it always has been, simple and severe of outline. It lends itself to no vagaries and to little ornamentation. It is one of the few things which no one has ever patented, because it may be said to have leaped from the first foundry perfect and complete in every respect. The only notable attempt at improvement has been to make the poker of brass with a twisted column, but even then the iron poker lurks at the side and is known as the curate, because it does all the rough work. The ornamental poker is not a poker at all, but a sham, an upstart masquerading under an ancient and honored name and gaining credit for duties which it is unable to perform.—London Globe.

It's Playing Ball That Counts.

"Young men," said the college coach to the assembling team, "culture counts in the national game."

THE DANDELIONS.

Low hidden by the springtime grass
'Till April's chilly rains shall pass,
Sleep the dandelions.
Their tender forms—as by a shield—
By green cloaks' close-drawn folds concealed,
'Till May-bells' gladsome note has pealed.
Prudent dandelions!

Then, when the southern breeze has stirred
By welcome tinkle—long deferred,
Happy dandelions!
Awake, alert, with smiling face,
Each smooths her robe with dainty grace,
Each tiny petal turns in place.
Lovely dandelions!

I greet your advent with delight,
From first brave scout to last small wight
Of dandelions.
What joy those walks with you insure!
You beauties! tipped with gold dust's lure,
Gleaming as suns in miniature,
Fair dandelions!

Some call you common—just a weed!
E'en be it so—'tis true, indeed,
My dandelions!
But why their scorn? The sun's clear ray
Is common, too; but can they say
'Tis not most precious, priceless? Nay,
Dear dandelions!

Does this old world a surplus hold
Of beauty, brightness, joy enrolled—
Think dandelions!—
That it should frown on any flower
Whose mission brings such gracious dower
As thine—of sunshine-spreading power?
Loved dandelions!

"We love to share our sunshine-wealth.
Take as you will, nor offer pelf
For dandelions.
We bloom for beggar maid and thee
Alike, proud connoisseur, and we Care not which plucks more lavishly."
Say dandelions!

Haultain and the Easterners.

Thanks to the bad tangle in Alberta provincial politics, the name of Mr. F. W. G. Haultain is once more coming to the front, and a movement is reported to be on foot to find a seat for him in the Alberta Legislature with a view to securing his assistance for the Opposition in the present crisis. An Alberta member of the House of Commons the other day related a story which illustrates a conspicuous feature of Mr. Haultain's disposition.

Some years ago three eastern men crossed the continent together. One is a lawyer who has held high public office, one an Ottawa business man, and the third a newspaper man of national reputation. The Pullman was almost empty on that trip with the exception of a couple of ladies. The only other passenger was a quiet young fellow, apparently an educated and traveled Englishman. They got acquainted with him, and the long days were passed in cards and conversation. Politics formed a solid basis of discussion. The stranger asked one or two shrewd questions, and the lawyer of the party set out to give him a thorough outline of Canadian politics, the others lending occasional assistance. For two days the the easterners instructed that young man on the science, practice, unwritten law, and incidents of Canadian politics, particularly on that part relating to the Northwest. The political requirements of that part of the Dominion were dwelt upon at length. Nothing was omitted. And all the while the young man listened carefully and with apparent interest and gratitude. At Winnipeg he left the car. The last thing before he departed he thanked the eastern men for their kind instruction. He then handed his card over and swiftly departed. They looked at the card and sank speechless into the velvet seats of the smoker. For the young man was Mr. Haultain, who was, and had been for ten years previous, Prime Minister of the Northwest Territories.

A Fascinating Drama.

The peopling of the great Canadian West is a fascinating drama, whether we view it from the large or the small end of the telescope—i.e., from the point of the great railroad builder throwing a steel spine across the continent, or from the point of one little family unit finding its tree farm under the aegis of this transportation line. The line of the Grand Trunk Pacific across Canada is essentially the belt of homes. Who is it that answers the call of the wheat? The young, the brave, the hopeful, the helpful, says Miss Agnes Deans Cameron in the March issue of The Magazine of Commerce." The writing tools to write the drama are the strong arms of men and of faith-possessed women. It is a goodly play for the world to watch. The first scene is enacted on the prairie farm where the virgin sod is turned under to a crop of wheat for the first time since creation's dawn. The second scene is the grain elevator, red against the setting sun, and the waiting wheat train of Grand Trunk cars. Our drama closes with the loaf of bread clutched in the eager grasp of the little child in some crowded city of the Old World. —Manchester (Eng.) City News.

Countess of Aberdeen's Romance.

A pretty romance is attached to the Countess of Aberdeen, who recently received congratulation upon her birthday anniversary. The Earl of Aberdeen, then about twenty-two, once lost his way when riding on his pony in the Highlands. Coming suddenly upon the Scottish home of the late Lord Tweedmouth, he asked that the pony, which had become lame, might be stabled for the night. Sir Dudley Marjoribanks, who was then staying there, gave the traveler a cordial welcome, and Sir Dudley's daughter, Isabel, helped to entertain the unexpected guest. A great friendship sprang up between the two, which ripened, nine years later, into marriage.

When You are Sick.

It doesn't take a good doctor to tell you that, almost anybody could do that much; but to tell exactly the nature of the disease sometimes calls for the utmost skill of the physician. Almost anybody by a few simple tests could tell that your eyesight was defective and that you needed glasses of some kind, but to diagnose the exact trouble and fit the right glasses calls for more than ordinary skill. We have given years of study to that one thing, and we are in business to bring wrong eyes and right glasses together.

She was charged with sending a letter threatening to poison cattle trespassing upon her husband's property and also with burning a bridge across Scoutamatta Creek, which adjoins Sedore's property. It was proven that no poison was set out and the cattle were not injured. The accused pleaded guilty however, to sending the letter and with setting fire to the bridge. A scene of activity presented itself at the dock this morning owing to the arrival and departure of a large number of boats.

The steamers, Brockville, Quinte Queen and Aletha conveyed large excursion parties to Twelve O'Clock Point.

The steamer Varuna took an excursion party to Glen Island. The excursionists were from various bay ports.

The steamer Belleville called here on her eastward trip. She had on board many passengers and a large cargo of freight. She took on board here 2000 boxes of cheese in addition to other freight.

The steamer Madge was on the Brockville route to-day from Picton up the bay.

The steamer Dack had a private picnic party up the bay this afternoon.

On a Tour of Inspection

A number of the members of the Board of Education this afternoon visited Trenton to inspect a new school which has recently been erected in that town. The party were conveyed to Trenton in Mr. O'Flynn's steam yacht.

County Court

CROWE vs. GRAHAM

This was an action brought by a resident of Trenton, against a resident of Manitoba, formerly owner of the Trenton Advocate, to recover the amount of three Division Court judgments dated about 19 years ago. After witnesses had been heard and points law argued the action was dismissed with costs. A. Abbott for Plaintiff; Northrup & Ponton for Defendant.

COSBY vs. DETLOR

In our report of this action tried at the last County Court, it should have been stated that the plaintiff claimed damages for trespass, which claim was not allowed, and that the plaintiff was ordered to pay her own costs of the action under the special circumstances brought out in evidence. The case will probably be appealed.

Dundas Street Sewer

FOLLOWING IS A REPORT BY THE CITY ENGINEER IN REGARD TO THE DUNDAS STREET SEWER.

City Engineer's Office, Belleville, Ont., July 4th, 1910.

PROGRESS REPORT NO. 1
DUNDAS STREET SEWER

To the Mayor and Council of the City of Belleville:—

Gentlemen.—I beg to make my first progress report on above:—

Steady progress is now being made on this work. Starting at the outall, about 800 feet of 20 inch tile has been laid including the necessary junction for house and street connectons and the intermediate manholes and street gullies. (These connections will be afterwards carried to each lot.)

Progress through rock is necesosarily slow, but even at this stage it would appear the contractors will complete within their contract, and I should here state the work executed so far is to my entire satisfaction, the depths of trenches in all cases being strictly to profiles and the quality of material to the specification. The jointing of the pipe which many engineers consider the most essential feature of a successful sewerage scheme, is being very thoroughly performed.

I should state, however, in this connection, that the engineer, while giving all the time possible as inspector, cannot of necessity be on this particular work all the time.

It might be well to state that I am preparing a few extra blue prints from the contract plans, which can be inspected from time to time by any responsible citizen interested in this work. Too much publicity, I feel cannot be given to a work of this nature in which all citizens are interested.

Respectfully submitted,
JAMES G. LINDSAY,
City Engineer.

OBITUARY.

In the passing away of Mr. Wm. S. Clarke, the harvest of full age removed one who was widely respected by a wide circle of friends for his kindly sincerity, his fine intelligence and his quiet dignity.

He was born on October 19, 1825, in the village of Sconten, Norfolk, England, and died at Stirling on June 22nd, 1910. In early life he came with his father's family to Canada. They settled on a farm on the Oak Hills, near Holloway in the 9th con. of Sidney. The sons and daughters all became well-known residents of Belleville and vicinity, the only one now living being Mrs. Abraham Frost of the Kingston Road.

He took a keen interest in all public affairs and was a Conservative in politics, but had no desire for public life or honors. In religion he was a Methodist, a member of the church for many years, a diligent reader of the Holy Scriptures in which exercise he found instruction and delight.

Mr. Clarke was twice married. His first wife was Ann, daughter of Wm. Roe of Rawdon, and to them came a family of eight, but all have died except one son, Mr. George Clarke of Madoc Junction. In 1879 he married Miss Elizabeth Tweedie of Huntingdon, with whom about three years ago he retired from the active work of the farm, and who now survives him.

The funeral service was held at his residence on June 24th, and his body laid in the Clarke cemetery in Sidney, to rest amid the scenes associated with his long and useful life.

SHOULD INSPECT TANKS

Result of Inquest Into The Herald Building Disaster.

Jury at Montreal Decides That No One Can Be Held Responsible, But Suggests That a Bylaw Should Be Passed Providing for Frequent Inspection of Tanks — One Engineer Says Floor Was Faulty.

Montreal, July 6.—The following verdict was reached yesterday by the coroner's jury chosen to judge the case of the thirty-two victims of The Herald fire and its attending casualties.

"We find that the deceased (thirty-two victims) in The Herald disaster on June 13 came to their death as the result of the collapse of The Herald Building. We consider that no one can be held responsible, but we suggest that a bylaw be passed calling for the inspection of these water tanks every few months."

All the evidence went to show that everything had been done to avoid such accidents, and the city inspector said that he would have given the permit to erect the tank had he been asked for one. This has been the exact verdict reached in two previous cases where several people were killed by falling tanks. The friends of Mr. Brierly are well satisfied at the outcome, as it will prevent those interesting lawyers from pouncing down upon the proprietor of The Herald with all kinds of accusations, but the question remains, where will this tank business end?

Some of the most important testimony of the inquest was that of W. J. Francis, civil engineer, of Toronto University, with membership in the Canadian and American societies of civil engineers. He was of the opinion that faulty floor construction was responsible for the disaster.

General Benson a Knight.

St. Catharines, July 6.—Major-Gen. Frederick William Benson has been made a K.C.B.

Gen. Benson is shortly leaving the old country for Canada, where, with Gen. Cook, he will establish a ranch in the vicinity of Calgary for the raising of remounts for the British army.

The new knight was born at St. Catharines in 1849. He is the third son of the late Hon. J. R. Benson of the Canadian Senate. Educated in Upper Canada College, Toronto, he afterwards went over to England and became a soldier. He served as a volunteer during the Fenian raids in Canada in 1866. He joined the 21st Hussars in 1869, exchanged to 12th Royal Lancers 1876, passed on to 17th Lancers in 1881, and became A.D.C. to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Northwest Provinces of India. He served during the South African war, and was mentioned in despatches. From 1903 to 1907 he acted as director of transports and remounts.

Technical Education.

Ottawa, July 6.—The organization meeting of the commission on technical education recently appointed by the Government, will be held here on Wednesday. Arrangements will be made for a preliminary tour of Canada and the United States, which will occupy the next three or four months.

During the coming winter the commission will travel in Great Britain and the continent. Particular attention will be given to Germany, which leads all other countries in the matter of technical education. The commission will frame its report during the summer of 1911, and it will probably be ready for the consideration of Parliament when the House opens in November, 1912.

The Bisley Meet.

Bisley Camp, July 6.—Earl Crewe will distribute the prizes won at the meet here on the 16th.

The King is paying a visit to Aldershot next Monday. The colonial teams will go to Aldershot, on Tuesday, to be inspected, in all probability.

Await Will of Colonies.

A Fine New Ship.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 6.—The splendid new freight carrier Thomas J. Drummond, the latest addition to the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Steamship Co.'s fleet, arrived at the docks of the Lake Superior Corporation yesterday with a cargo of pig-iron from Glasgow from the Algoma Steel Co. The event was marked by a reception and luncheon to Mayor Simpson and the Town Council. She is 256 feet long, 43 feet 10 inches beam, with a capacity of 3,400 tons, and is equipped with the latest appliances in marine architecture for handling cargo and comfort of the crew.

Thrown Down Stairs.

Windsor, July 6.—The condition of Wm. B. Malloy in Hotel Dieu Hospital remains unchanged. Malloy was thrown down a flight of stairs from the second storey of the Iroquois Hotel building late Monday night as the result of a row with a stranger. He may die. His skull is fractured, his collar bone is broken, and two ribs are fractured. The man mixed up in the deal made their escape.

Zeppelin Up Against It.

Berlin, July 6.—Count Zeppelin's prestige has suffered considerably by the wrecking of the Deutschland, the big passenger airship, on the tree tops of a forest last week, and it will be hard for him to maintain that the rigid type of airship is the best. He is still tremendously popular with the great mass of the people.

Dead Now Number Twenty-One.

Middleton, Ohio, July 6.—Three victims of the wreck of the Big Four New York flyer here Monday died from their injuries during the night, bringing the total number of dead up to 21. Reports from the hospitals in Dayton and Hamilton, where many of the 37 injured were taken, indicate that a number of these will die soon. Some of them are frightfully injured.

Officials are now engaged in trying to place the responsibility for the wreck. It is known that a misunderstanding of orders caused the catastrophe, but which train crew was at fault has not yet been learned.

It is almost certain that in addition to the coroner's inquest an investigation of the disaster will be made by the Railroad Commission.

Galt Saves Money.

Galt, July 6.—The contracts for the Hydro-Electric distributing station have been let to the Packard Electric Co. and the Canadian General Electric Co. The commission will bring the line in from the transforming station at Hespeler. The incandescent system for street lighting, adopted, with the amount paid for poles and wires to the local electric company, will make the total cost to Galt for installing a service under Hydro-Electric auspices only $25,000.

The town declined to purchase the entire plant of the existing company, and thus saved a large amount which other municipalites have spent in buying out the private equipment, most of which is found unavailable.

Stuck to Post With Broken Skull.

Buffalo, July 6.—By sheer force of will power, George S. Whitney, 50, an American express messenger, running between Cleveland and Buffalo, on the Lake Shore road, stuck to his post Monday night after his skull had been fractured in two places by the heavy door of the car closing on it as the train pulled out of Dunkirk, N.Y. The car contained a valuable consignment of express matter, including $10,000 in currency, consigned to Buffalo, and this Whitney appeared to worry over more than his injury.

Monk on the Naval Policy.

Quebec, July 6.—It is announced that F. D. Monk will hold a grand meeting on Sunday next at Beauport, near Quebec, where he will speak on the naval policy of the Canadian Government.

Life Imprisonment for Hyde.

HER MUSICAL TASTE.

[Professor Louis Wilson says that each color harmonizes with a corresponding note in music.]

I cannot wear the old songs
  I wore a year ago.
My last year's hat was in B flat
  And sounds like "Old Black Joe."
My husband says to change it
  And pitch it new in F.
I tell him that a last year's hat
  Appeals but to the deaf.

I cannot wear the old tunes,
  Although they're not worn out.
My dinner gown would make you frown
  Without the slightest doubt.
It's too accelerando.
  The higher notes are slurred.
The scherzo skirt I used to flirt
  No longer can be heard.

I dote on modern music.
  To me it is sublime.
In last year's waist there can be traced
  "The Good Old Summer Time."
And so I will not wear it,
  Though it's as good as new.
I know you'd mock a ragtime frock
  If one dawned on your view.

My new hat's a cadenza
  Of wondrous tones and trills.
My husband swears in minor airs
  When he looks at the bills.
There is a charm in music
  To soothe the savage breast,
But men have hearts which music's darts
  Find armor plate at best.

Still, I've made out my program
  From overture to end.
For sleeve duets I've made some debts,
  But all the chords must blend.
I cannot wear the old songs
  I wore a year gone by.
They're now as old as "Threads of Gold"
  Or "Comin' Thro' the Rye."

AN EASY VICTORY.

How an Obstinate English Lord Was Outwitted in Naples.

Lord Charles Hamilton used to go about Naples attended by a large, ferocious bulldog. Having decided upon going to Rome, he proceeded to the station and took his place in a first class carriage, the "dawg" taking up a position on a seat opposite his master. The platform inspector, with many gesticulations, declared that the bulldog should not travel in a passenger carriage.

"Very well, then; take him out," was Lord Charles' rejoinder.

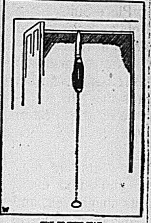
In vain the official expostulated. He merely reiterated his former reply, a piece of advice it is needless to say which was not followed, and Lord Charles, apparently master of the situation, threw himself back in his seat and calmly lighted a cigar.

But the Italians were not to be outdone, and, quietly detaching the carriage in which the English "milor" was seated, they made up the train with another compartment and started it off.

Lord Charles sat quietly smoking for about a quarter of an hour and then, surprised at the delay, thrust his head out of the window and demanded when the train was going to start. His feelings when the situation was described to him may be imagined.—London Tit-Bits.

For the Children

How to Crack a Nut Without Touching It.



TRY IT THIS WAY.

A sharply pointed knife with a heavy handle is stuck very lightly into the lintel of a door, and the nut that is to be cracked is placed under it, so that when the knife is released by a touch the nut is cracked.

What simple and certain plan can you suggest for making sure that the knife shall hit the nut exactly in the middle without fail? Here it is:

Hold a cup of water so that it will wet the handle of the knife, then remove it and place the nut exactly on the spot where the drop of water falls from the handle.

The Surprise.

All the players but one must stand in a circle, but not with hands joined. Their hands must be held behind their backs with the palms turned outward, and they must all keep their eyes on the ground. If any one looks up he or she must pay a forfeit. The one left out takes a handkerchief and dances lightly around the circle and slips the handkerchief into any one's hand she chooses. No one will know to whom it is given, for all eyes are looking at the floor. Then suddenly the one to whom the handkerchief is given will whisk it up at one of the others. The person touched will be surprised, of course, but she must dart off instantly, for the one outside is on the watch and will strive to catch her. If she succeeds the captive becomes "handkerchief bearer," but if the one pursued gets around the circle and back to her place then the first bearer pays a forfeit and continues in the office.

Spoons—A Game.

This game is a variety of the old time favorite, "blind man's buff." The players form a circle. One stands in the center, blindfolded, with his hands extended before him, holding a spoon in each hand. The other players march round him, clapping their hands in time to a tune that may be sung or played on the piano in marching time. When the blind man calls out "Spoons!" the others stop, and he finds his way to any player he can reach and tries to find out who he or she is by touching with the spoons only. He may use them as he likes, but it is usually only a lucky guess if he is right. If wrong he must try again and continue blind till he finds a successor by means of the spoons. The one rightly guessed is then blindfolded and takes his place.

Why John Was Late.

Father—How is it, John, that you come home late to dinner every evening?

John—That's 'cause the town clock's so big.

Father—What's the clock got to do with it?

John—It's so big it takes the hands an awful long time to get around it. If you'd buy me a little watch like yours I'd get home a great deal quicker.

Conundrums.

What is the difference between a spendthrift and a feather bed? One is hard up and the other soft down.

Why is love like a canalboat? Because it is an internal transport.

Why did not Eve have the measles? Because she'd Adam (had 'em).

Why are little birds always sad in the morning? Because their little bills are all over dew (due).

Master Robin.

Of all the chaps who come with spring
  I love dear robin best.
He is the first to sing his song,
  The first to build his nest.
He greets you, too, as you pass by
  With such a note of joy,
I do believe he has a heart
  Exactly like a boy.

He's not a coward—no, not he.
  He never takes a dare,
But if there's any fun around
  He's sure to take his share.
Besides, he is a gentleman
  Who's always nicely dressed
In quite a stylish swallowtail
  And very handsome vest.

He steps quite like a dandy when
  He's out on dress parade,
And, though Jack Frost is watching him,
  He's not a bit afraid.
But, independent as you please,
  He heeds nobody's call
And sings just when he has a mind
  In springtime or in fall.

He's good friends, too, with all the flowers
  And wakes them from their sleep.
'Tis at the sound of his dear voice
  That they begin to peep.
I love him and his song, and when
  I hear it sweet and clear
I shout, "Now hurry up, Miss Spring,
  For Master Robin's here!"

RAISE FOR OPERATORS

G.T.P. Men Awarded Better Conditions by Conciliation Board.

Decision of the Committee Is That the Telegraphers on the New National Transcontinental Should Get at Least as Good Terms as Men on Other Lines—Get More Money and Have Labors Lightened.

Toronto, July 7.—Better conditions, better pay and better hours were granted the Grand Trunk Pacific telegraphers by the conciliation board, whose report was made public yesterday. The telegraphers applied for a schedule similar to the one in force on the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern. Heretofore there has been no schedule on the G.T.P. There were 30 articles considered and there was a disagreement in the board over three or four. The duties of the board were to define the regular duties and classifications of the employes and the rates of wages to be paid telegraphers, station agents, track despatchers and agents at terminal points and the wages of linemen. The new schedule will take effect as from May 1 last.

The three main branches of the dispute were these: The hours of labor, the question of track despatchers, linemen and agents at terminal points being brought within the schedule of rates, and the rates of wages of telegraph despatchers. One of the great victories won by the men was on the second point, on which the chairman disagreed. But the result of that victory is that all three have been brought within the schedule.

Telegraphers who are agents on main lines will receive $80 per month; on branch lines $66 per month. This is a large increase on what they have received in former years. Relieving agents will receive $66 a month on both main and branch lines. Telegraphers who are train despatchers will receive $131 a month the first year, $136 a month the second year, and $148 a month the third year. Relieving despatchers receive $119 a month. After one year's accumulative service they will receive $131 a month. Linemen will receive $75 a month. There can be no change in these rules without 30 days' notice.

There are several clauses such as provision of free transportation for telegraphers traveling on boards of adjustment; that no telegrapher is required to teach telegraphy; telegraphers working at wrecks or washouts provided with shelter; telegraphers exempt from shoveling snow, sifting ashes or scrubbing stations; and relating to Sunday labor.

Will Not Stay Act.

Vancouver, July 7.—Notwithstanding local and the wired criticism from the east, the Provincial Government will not stay the operation of the Companies' Act, Premier McBride transmitting to the Victoria Board of Trade his reply to their representations adverse to its enforcement, so far as it applies to the registration or license of all companies doing extra-provincial business.

It is understood that the Premier's reply affords no consolation to the objectors. There will be no suspension of enforcement of the act, nor is it anticipated by the Government that the far-drawn cases of possible special injury to trade in the working out of this statute will be realized in practice.

Schoolboy Hanged.

Boston, July 7.—Before the investigating committee of the Legislature Tuesday two physicians swore positively that John Newman, the Lyman School inmate, had been hanged by someone at the school. They pointed out that it was impossible for the boy to tie the rope into the knot by which he was killed. Further, they swore that the bruises and wounds on the boy's body must have been received at least a day or so before death.

Murdered at Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., July 7.—The first clue to the brutal murder about two months ago was found yesterday when the body of a woman was taken from the big intake to the power house of the Niagara Falls Power Co. on the upper river above the falls.

The fact that the woman wore an automobile veil over her head leads to the belief that she was taken for an auto ride, murdered, and her body tossed into the river.

Afloat All Night In Small Boat.

New York, July 7.—Four men in a small boat, survivors of the wreck of the two-masted schooner Garfield White from Nova Scotia, which sunk seven miles east of the Ambrose Channel Lightship, were rescued yesterday by the Rockaway Beach life savers. The men, who had drifted about all night in their small craft, were exhausted.

A Daring Dash.

Pittsburg, July 7.—While firemen poured powerful streams of water upon him, W. A. Weaver, superintendent of the Atlantic refining plant of the Standard Oil Co., dashed through flames and smoke early yesterday and shut a valve which prevented fire spreading from a burning still of benzine to great tanks of oil nearby.

Ho, for the North.

Quebec, July 7.—The steamer Arctic, under command of Capt. Bernier, is at the King's Wharf here, under steam ready to sail according to orders from Ottawa on Friday, the 8th instant.

Hurt In An Explosion.

Eight Employes of Factory at Langford Mills Injured.

Escaping Gas at the Plant of the Standard Chemical Co. Is Believed to Be Responsible For an Explosion Which Blows Off Part of Roof--John McCauley is so Badly Hurt That His Life is Despaired Of.

Orillia, July 7.—Longford Mills, near this town, was the scene of a serious explosion at 3.30 yesterday afternoon, which wrecked one of the buildings of the Standard Chemical Co., and injured every one of the eight persons who were in at the time, one of them fatally.

The cause of the disaster is somewhat in doubt, but it is suggested that some of the gases were escaping, and the workman, in opening one of the tanks to ascertain the cause, let more gas out. One of the men was working repairing some tools at a fire just outside the door, and the gases may have become ignited from this, causing the explosion.

The building, which was used for the manufacturer of acetone, was badly wrecked by the explosion. The roof was partly blown off, and fire broke out, completing the work of destruction. There was not much chance of saving the structure, owing to the lack of efficient fire-fighting apparatus.

John McCauley, one of the workmen, was too severely injured to be move, and no hopes are held out for his recovery. Messrs. Coulbrough and McNaught, two of the managers, were quite severely burned, but will recover. Rev. W. H. Smith, Presbyterian minister at Longford Mills, who happened to be in the building at the time, was burned about the hands and face, but his injuries are not considered serious. The others injured, Jack and Ed. Smith, William Heslin and Jack Hynes, were all workmen, employed in the building. They will recover.

Four doctors and a number of hospital nurses were rushed over from Orillia and some of the injured were brought to the hospital here by the evening train.

Sarcastic About Fight.

Paris, July 7.—Under the caption of "civilized savages," Henri Rochefort, the noted political writer and satirist, in yesterday's La Patrie blames the white race in America for the negro riots following the Reno fight. In ironical vein, Rochefort suggests that "since the fight was made largely a race question, nations henceforth adopt the prize fight method of settling their disputes."

"Let each nation choose its champion pugilist," he suggests, "and pit him against other champions whenever international disputes arise. In this we can avoid the maintenance of armies and navies and save millions of dollars and thousands of lives."

Contest Thickens.

Winnipeg, July 7.—The declaration of the returning officer for Beautiful Plains that, owing to irregularities in the Liberal nomination papers, Hon. J. H. Howden is elected by acclamation, promises to be followed by bitter litigation.

The latest sensation in Manitoba elections is the attack by the Conservative paper at Brandon, The Times, on Hon. G. R. Coldwell, Minister of Education, and candidate for Brandon. It has for years been the Conservative organ, and its shift has created a sensation.

It is claimed that Donald Ross, Liberal candidate of Springfield, grafted while a member of the Winnipeg Parks Board, in the sale of sites, getting $500 for his influence.

Rescued Boy From Drowning.

Cornwall, July 7.—Wm. S. Hollister, butcher and quartermaster sergeant of the 56th Regiment, earned a Royal Humane Society's medal yesterday afternoon. A seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jerome fell into the canal and would have been drowned but for the efforts of Hollister, who, by the way, cannot swim a stroke. He waded into the canal and collared young Jerome with a boat hook.

Engineer Cut to Pieces.

Brockville, July 7.—Yesterday morning Alex. Menzies, G.T.R. engineer, was instantly killed here. After oiling his engine he stepped out on to the down main line and was run over. He was cut in two.

Some time ago Menzies used to live in Toronto, but of recent years had been living in Brockville. He was unmarried.

Auto Driver Killed.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 7.—Thomas Kincade, a well-known automobile driver, was killed at the Indianapolis motor speedway yesterday afternoon. He was on the track in trial practice when the car, a National, ran off the high embankment at the southeast corner of the course. He was caught beneath the wreck.

Yacht Owner's Narrow Escape.

London, Ont., July 7.—The yacht Diah went down in very deep water on Long Point, and her owner, R. J. Watt of this city, his skipper, Alex. Harvey, Robt. Watt and a lad named Downing had a narrow escape from drowning, and only reached shore after a long and perilous swim in the darkness.

Storm Wrecked Circus.

St. Paul, Minn., July 7.—A special from Watertown, S.D., says: One dead and a score more or less injured, the main tent and menagerie tent of a big circus in ruins, and two horses killed, is the result of a cyclonic storm here Tuesday night.

Plans Will Be Sent Out.

Ottawa, July 7.—The British Admiralty has given its consent to have the plans for the Canadian naval vessels sent to Canada under guard. The successful negotiations were conducted through Lord Strathcona.

A Gruesome Discovery.

Chatham, July 7.—The lifeless body of Mrs. John Illingsworth, aged 65, was found huddled behind a bed in her home, 238 Lacroix street, by a policeman at 10.45 yesterday morning. Dr. Bray, coroner, who was hurriedly summoned to the scene, pronounced death as resulting from heart failure. The investigation that led to this discovery was caused by a rumor on the street yesterday morning that Mrs. Illingsworth had not been seen since Monday night. She had evidently fallen out of bed after an attack of heart failure. The body was badly decomposed.

She had been living alone for some time, her husband living in Detroit. She was a sister of Andrew R. Coltart of this city, whose wife died in the public General Hospital Tuesday.

Wounds of Honor.

Oyster Bay, L.I., July 7.—To beat up a wife beater is an honorable act, according to Col. Theodore Roosevelt, former President of the United States. A newspaper man who went out yesterday to Sagamore Hill to interview the colonel, wore bandages on one of his hands. The colonel asked how the member had been injured, and was told that the reporter had severely sprained his hand whipping a foreigner who had struck his wife at the Oyster Bay depot.

"Fine, just fine," shouted Col. Roosevelt, "that's an honorable wound. I'm proud of you. American men will not permit wife-beating."

Spain Will Catch Up.

Madrid, July 7.—Religious debates are raging in both Houses of Parliament. The Bishop of Madrid, leading the attack in the Senate, claimed that the laws of the church are the laws of the country, because the constitution makes Catholicism the state religion.

Canalejas, in reply, declared that the invasion of state sovereignty by the church was no longer tolerable. "I know that a conspiracy exists to accomplish my downfall," he said. "Whether it succeeds or not does not matter, as the time has come when Spain will place herself abreast of modern nations."

Dam a Mile Long.

Detroit, July 7.—To prevent a possible reduction of levels in the upper lakes and rivers, resulting from enlarging the outlet of the Detroit River by the construction of the new Livingstone channel, the United States Government will build a dam nearly a mile long, from Bois Blanc Island, a point near the edge of the new Rock Cut channel. Permission has been asked from the Government for the erection of the dam.

$30,000 Blaze at Berlin.

Berlin, July 7.—About four o'clock yesterday morning fire broke out in the furniture factory of Baetz Bros & Co., and the plant was completely destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to have started in the finishing room and spread very rapidly. The loss is estimated at $30,000, with insurance of $27,000 on the building and contents.

Changed Their Plans.

Windsor, Ont., July 7.—Promoters of the Windsor Steam Laundry Co. have abandoned their original plans, and will instead start a shirt factory. The company will erect a $40,000 plant, for which ground will be broken within a few days. Between 25 and 50 people will be employed at the start.

Found Dead on Tracks.

Colborne, July 7.—The body of an unknown man, weighing about 150 pounds, 5 feet 7 to 8 inches in height, with brown hair, blue eyes and clean-shaven face, was found alongside the G.T.R. tracks, three miles west of here. The supposition is that he fell from a passing train.

Two children from Chicago, who were visiting at Guelph, were stopped at Port Huron by an American immigration official on their way home and sent back to Guelph.

Scarcity of Paper.

Saratoga, N.Y., June 7.—The increased price and diminished supply of news print paper was the principal subject of discussion before the representatives of the associated dailies of New York State, who met here yesterday in connection with the annual meeting of the New York State Press Association, which opened its annual convention yesterday. Discussion was led by John Norris of New York City, of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. Mr. Norris said in part:

"Within three years we have had three print paper famines. In twenty months the print paper makers of the country have kept the stock of paper on hand for all the newspapers of the country to an average supply of less than eight days.

"The mill owners admit that they have produced only 92 per cent. of their capacity."

Electrical Convention.

Royal Muskoka Hotel, July 7.—Canadian electrical men, gathered from all parts, are in session here for a three days' convention. The question of satisfactory power at systems for central stations to adopt was entered into fully and many suggestions offered. Further action will be taken in this matter before the convention is finished. Prominent among the day's speakers were: Frederick Nicholls, R. G. Bloch, R. E. Pack, W. A. Bucke, A. F. Mudge, Toronto; Mr. Doane, Cleveland; C A. Littlefield, A. T. Holbrook, New York.

In the afternoon a canoeing regatta was held. Frederick Nicholls of Toronto presented cups for competition.

A Sane and Sober People.

London, July 7.—Earl Grey, in this week's Standard of Empire, gives a statement of his hopes and convictions regarding Canada. He says the Canadians are a sane, sober, strenuous, earnest people, a patriotic and invincibly industrious people, worshipping no false gods, following no will-o'-the-wisps, but steadily and surely with their eyes wide open alike to opportunity and dangers are building up between the Atlantic and Pacific the greatest nation that has ever been within the greatest Empire that has ever been.

Permanent Arbitration Board.

Montreal, July 7.—A permanent board of arbitration has been appointed for five years to deal with disputes raised by the longshoremen here. The Shipping Federation is represented by Secretary J. H. Lauer of the Builders' exchange, the men by G. H. Brunet, and these two yesterday selected ex-President Farquhar Robertson of the Board of Trade as third member and chairman. They will meet at once and continue until all present disputes are cleared up.

Details Practically Decided.

Montreal, July 7.—The conference between the officials of the C.P.R. and the representatives of the trainmen on the eastern portion of the system, are still continuing, and the details of the final agreement were practically decided upon yesterday. The announcement of a final settlement is expected to be made this week.

Big Jobs Still Tied Up.

Montreal, July 7.—P. Lyall & Sons received an offer of 200 bricklayers yesterday from outside points, while other builders claim that they have men. This does not alter the fact that all the big jobs are tied up. The builders all refused to sign individual contracts with the union.

Surprise Party.

A very pleasant evening not soon to be forgotten was spent at the Methodist parsonage, West Huntingdon, on Tuesday evening, June 28th, when about six hundred people old and young met together for the purpose of expressing their love and esteem to our pastor, wife and children, and to express our appreciation of his great help in the past four years.

Mr. Henry Mullet acted as chairman. He called order and Mr. and Mrs. Rose and family took their chairs. The first on the programme was the address and presentation by Moira choir. The address was read by Mrs. Ben Morton and a gold jewell case presented by Mrs. Archie Emerson.

Mrs. Ross ,who seemed thoroughly surprised replied in a few well-chosen words, and in conclusion wished them every success in their work in the future. The next Mr Mullet called upon was Mrs. Dickens, of West Huntingdon, who read an address.

The next was the address from West Huntingdon circuit, read by Mr. C. F. Sharpe.

Rev. Mr. Ross made a brief but pointed address in reply So taken was he and embarrassed,, his thought was easily expressed He spoke of the kindness ,reverence and respect given him and he hoped to have our people often visit him in his new field of labor.

An address was given by Mr. L. Burke and refreshments were served.

Sir Frederick Treves, the celebrated English physician, upsets another tradition by asserting that colds are never produced by air draughts, and that nearly all cases are caused by stuffy rooms. Other distinguished London doctors sustain Sir Frederick's contention.—With apologies to Sir Frederick we think colds are caused by too copious "draughts."

The Kingston Standard is urging the City Council to get the city out of the mud so to speak. It says:

"Mud roads are all right when there's nothing else to be had; and we suppose they're all right also for a 2x4 village, But they are not all right for Kingston.

The above is Belleville's plight exactly, and in our humble opinion our Council should look to our streets and cease sidewalk building. A block at a time would soon have Front and Bridge streets "out of the mud."

Fell Down Elevator Shaft

Mr. Fred Deacon, an employee of the Stafford Hardware company, yesterday met with an accident which fortunately was not of a seroius nature. Unnoticed by him the elevator trap was opened and he stepped into it falling a distance of 8 to 10 feet. His injuries consisted of a sprained wrist and bruises about the body. Mr. Deacon's escape from receiving serious or fatal injuries was almost miraculous.

Mr. Mountain, engineer of the Railway Commission, came to the city today and n company with Mr. Wickitead one of the chief engineers of the C. N. GRAND TRUNK BUREAU IN LONDON

A part of the magnificent Headquarter's Building recently built by the Grand Trunk System on Cockspur Street, London, is to be devoted to the Bureau, through which is to be distributed information concerning Canada. The Standard of Empire calls it "A new Canadian Commercial Embassy."

Above the main offices of the Grand Trunk are spacious rooms set apart for this work. Here visitors may rest and read the news of the Empire, ask questions and receive expert advice about the Dominion of Canada.

Upon the walls of these rooms are splendid pictures showing the progress being made by men who are building the new nation of the north.

Y. M. C. A. Building Campaign

At the noon luncheon today of the Y. M. C. A. building campaign there was a large attendance and considerable enthusiasm was manifested. Of the 40 one hundred dollars subscriptions which were assumed yesterday by the various captains of teams a goodly number of some have already been secured. The team's report today showed that $4,051 was collected since yesterday and Mr. Walter Alford has given an equivalent to $1,000 towards overseeing the erection of the proposed new building. This announcement was received with much applause. The amounts reported by the various teams as the result of canvas since yesterday noon were as follows:

Red Hot Campaign Notes.

Boost! Boost! Boost! Boost! Boost!

Our clock is one of the most valuable of its kind. Just now it is costing us $40,000. Valuable works are behind and out of sight. The hands are turned by a crank. At the end of the crank is marked "Dollars."

"Charlie" Greenleaf drew a great cartoon yesterday. The artist portrayed the scene of the interior of a bedroom. The occupant is aroused from deep slumber by a persistent alarm clock going off. It won't be stopped. It keeps yelling "Wake up", "Get up", "Pay up." On the foot of the bed Charlie has legibly inscribed the name of the occcupant "Belleville."

Prominent business men who have never been known to take part in Y. M. C. A. work have come forward and are tendering their services in the campaign.

This $40,000 campaign is now known all over the Dominion. Other places are watching Belleville. Some say this won't go this time. But nearly ever one we meet are sanguine that it will go. It's got to go. Our slogan is "A Bigger and a Better Belleville."

Drop in and see the big wall schedule. It looks like the wall of the Stock Exchange. At the top of the schedule appears in large words "Every Man Something Every Day." There are ten teams. The first day Team No. 2, captained by J. J. B. Flint, led. Yesterday Team No. 4, captained by R. J. Graham, led. There is a splendid rivalry. Team No. 9, captained by W. B. Riggs, has however secured the largest number of subscriptions.

The Y. M. C. A. rooms are headquarters for the teams. At 12.15 they are entertained at lunch by the Ladies' Auxiliary. The members of each team sit together and during the dinner hour are engaged in animated discussion. Rev. Mr. Kerr dropped in yesterday to lunch with the workers.

Yesterday there forty workers at dinner. W. B. Deacon, the Chairman of the teams, at the close of the lunch calls for the team leaders to rise and give their daily reports. Then is when the excitement commences. People remark how much the affair resembles the headquarters of a political campaign on election day. The enthusiasm grows with each day.

The building prospectus has brought forth many favorable comments.

It is very interesting. You should see a copy.

To-day all the Chinese sent in their subscriptions, amounting to $24.00.

Colorado Puts Ban On Long Dresses.

Boulder, Col., July 6. — No more will the lurking germ intent on insidiously spreading disease be allowed full sway in skirtdom in this State university town if the plans of the city council, mothered by the Woman's Club, do not 'gang agley.' Nor can the sweet girl graduate with her carefully prepared "beyond the Alps lies Italy" essay ready to spring on the fond relatives, wear the long trained gown that has been her dream for years, for the august fathers are bent on declaring that long skirts are pernicious and threatening to health, long life and happiness.

Hereafter only the oh-you-kid skirts will be allowed, unless the wives of the Councilmen, who have a few hang over long trained gowns get busy with the sunburned Aldermanic ear and whisper to the effect that "curfew must not ring" for long clothes for women.

An ordinance was introduced in the council to prohibit the wearing of long skirts on the sidewalks of Boulder.

Nothing is said about wearing a train on the streets, so that should the ordinance pass, a woman who insists on wearing germ absorbing apparel may walk down the middle of the road in such attire without violating the law. She may walk about or ride in an auto.

Hon. J. C. Patterson Laurier's Favorite.

Wonders will never cease The. Hon. D. C. Patterson, formerly Tory representative in Parliament for Essex and Minister of Militia in the Conservative Government, ending with the Lieutenant Governorship of Manitoba, has become a servant of the Laurier Government, at least so says a telegram from Ottawa to the Mail and Empire. This telegram says he has been appointed a Commissioner to investigate the title of ownership by Canada, to lands in the "Far North."

Interesting it would be, to learn what services this erstwhile Tory has rendered the Laurier Government to merit this favor. It is evident he has ingratiated himself into the good graces of Sir Wilfrid. What will the scores of hungry Grit lawyers, who are constantly buzzing about his ears say to this move of the Premier? Probably Mr. Patterson was chosen for the job for the reason that Sir Wilfrid could find no legal mind, Aylesworth being engaged at the Hague Conference, fitted for the job, hence he had to fall back on a Tory. The world moves.

Dangerous Dandruff.

WILL MAKE CANADA A BALD-HEADED NATION IF NOT CHECKED.

M. Pasteur, the great French Physician, of Paris, once said; "I believe we shall one day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back.

J. S. McKeown guarantees it. It will stop itching scalp falling hair, and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray.

It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease and stickiness. It is the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of fascinating hair.

A large bottle costs only 50 cents at leading drug stores everywhere, and in Belleville by J. S. McKeown. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package.

The Department of Agriculture has demonstrated that bamboos from Japan and China can be profitably grown in the United States.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Chicago, Ill., July 7. — With a string of automobiles waiting at the station to meet him, and with his pathway from the curb to the door of his mother's home, strewn and arched with flowers, champion Jack Johnson will be given a never-equalled celebration by the colored quarter when he arrives from the scene of the great victory to-day. By order of the police chief, no bands or other noise makers may turn out, but the celebration will be big.

Johnson is being boomed for Alderman.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS

Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the most beautiful woman on the operatic stage, attributes her success to those old fashioned beauty doctors, sleep and rest.

Miss Mary N. Potts at her wedding in St. Johnsbury, Vt., wore the same dress that had been worn on similar occasions by her grandmother, her mother and her mother's two sisters.

The recent prominence in the suffrage discussion of Dr. Mary Walker recalls one of the cleverest remarks that the lamented Bill Nye ever uttered. He described Dr. Mary as "the only self made man in America."

Miss Helen Taft, who is a student of Bryn Mawr, has been subjected to so much annoyance by curious people trying to get a look at the president's daughter that her location has been taken out of the college directory.

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, who is known the country over as the president of the Society For the Suppression of Noise, has two very talented daughters, Miss Muriel Rice, who is interested in keeping alive an interest in American poetry, and Miss Dorothy Rice, who has appeared as a painter of life in the sweatshops of New York city.

ABOUT SIR THOMAS.

How the Great Irish Yachtsman Made His Money.

Sir Thomas Johnstone Lipton, Bart., K.C.V.O., one of Britain's most noted merchant princes, is widely known also as a practical philanthropist. But most of all is Sir Thomas popular and famous for his plucky attempts to win that much coveted of yachting trophies, the America Cup.

So far, success has not rewarded his ambitious and costly endeavors in that direction, but the many admirers of Sir Thomas join with him in the hope that he may yet experience the joy of "lifting that cup" for which he has hitherto challenged in vain. His victory would be indeed popular on both sides of the Atlantic. No man has displayed greater enterprise and ardor combined in the fascinating pursuit of yachtsmanship; no truer sportsman ever trod deck or stood at the helm than the man who owned the Erin and the Shamrocks, and who belongs to most of the crack yacht clubs in his native isles, as well as to that of New York.

Interested in aviation and keen on motoring, the chief recreation of Sir Thomas Lipton's strenuous business life has been sailing under "white wings." For the sea and yachting he has a perfect passion.

But first he earned the right and the wherewithal to engage to his heart's delight in his aquatic hobby by diligence in business.

For Sir Thomas has been the architect and builder of the huge fortune which he now enjoys.

Born in Glasgow in 1850, of parents who had migrated thither from the North of Ireland, with but little of worldly gear, he quite early in life created a thriving business out of nothing in a "mean street" of the city of good St. Mungo.

A glutton for work from the first, he displayed a perfect genius for shopkeeping. His motto was to get the best only of everything he had to sell, and to force it under the eyes of buyers. A born advertiser, the people who passed his stores were attracted by the goods cunningly displayed, in the beginning by his own hands, and later on under his watchful oversight. They became purchasers in steadily increasing numbers, and young Lipton prospered exceedingly.

His business, in course of time, expanded enormously; and then to supply his ever-lengthening provision counters Thomas Lipton became breeder, planter, and manufacturer. To and fro he went to America, and to and fro again, to make sure of steady and sufficient streams of trading-stock, raised under his own control.

Then he made Ceylon his tea-garden; soon thereafter transferring his commercial headquarters to London.

He started biscuit factories in Scotland, fruit farms down in Kent, mammoth meat stores in the United States, and markets in many different towns all over the British Isles.

Sir Thomas Lipton is, in his modest way, proud of being a self-made man, and often gloried in his great central warehouses in the City Road, London, in recalling the time when he, perforce, had to toil something like seventeen hours a day. From the London centre he and his staff are directly in communication with the main branches of the business in Liverpool, Glasgow, and Dublin.

Cheery and full of humor always, Sir Thomas is instinct with kindly charity. One outcome of this was his founding of the Alexandra Trust for providing the poor with cheap wholesome meals.

Peculiarities of the Baronetage.

One of the peculiarities of the baronetage is that while the precedence of a baronet is before all knights save Knights of the Garter, that of his wife is before the wives of all knights; and his eldest son and daughters rank before the children of all knights. So that if there were another instance of a K.G. who had no higher title, all baronets' wives would precede his wife and the eldest sons and all the daughters of baronets would precede his children.

Another curious thing is that a baronet's patent virtually creates his wife a baronetess in her own right. She is a lady "for and during her natural life," whereas the style and precedence of peers' wives continues only during their widowhood.

A baronet's wife's style title is "lady, madame, or dame"; and I think that the strict consequence of the terms of a baronet's patent is that the widow of Sir A.B. marrying Mr. C. could call herself Lady C. with perfect legal impunity—that is, instead of calling themselves Mr. C. and Lady B. she and her second husband could be announced as Mr. and Lady C. This curious departure from invariable custom has passed almost without notice, but there is no doubt that every baronet's patent creates two life-holders of the dignity.—The Graphic.

Narrow Escapes.

Before entering the 13th Light Dragoons in 1855, Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., who kept his seventy-second birthday the other day, spent three years in the navy. He served in the Crimea with the Naval Brigade, and was severely wounded while carrying a scaling ladder at the Redan. On another occasion, in the same campaign, his cap was removed from his head by a chip from a shell; while once he was nearly frozen to death when trying to snatch a few hours' sleep. His V.C. was the reward for personal bravery displayed while hunting down the rebels in the Sironga jungles in 1859.

Royal Lady Doctors.

Seeing that the Queen of the Belgians is the only royal lady who can boast of the degree of M.D. we are proud to think that Queen Alexandra has not escaped doctorial distinction. As far back as 1885 the Queen-Mother received the degree in music from the Royal University of Ireland. Queen Mary, too, has a similar degree, but appropriately enough from the University of Wales. Perhaps the most curious doctorate in the royal family is the Duke of Connaught's diploma in literature, which his Royal Highness received from the University of the Punjab.

BIRTH OF A VOLCANO.

Nature's Process In Forming a Mountain of Lava.

THE FORCE OF AN ERUPTION.

Upheaval That Destroyed the East Indian Island of Krakatoa in 1883 Propelled an Air Wave Three and a Half Times Round the Earth.

Though volcanoes are often spoken of as burning mountains, they do not burn at all, nor, in the proper sense of the word, are they mountains at all. A volcano is really a flaw in the crust of the earth through which the fierce glowing heat lying below the crust has managed to burst a hole. Through this hole great floods of melted rock spout up. Some volcanoes work at intervals; some are in eruption all the time.

As the melted rock jets up into the air and falls it naturally builds itself into a mountain round the hole. The next eruption has to burst its way through the heart of that mountain. The chimney it spouts through is usually called "the pipe."

Sometimes an eruption is so fierce that when the lava (another name for melted rock) spouts out it is burst into bits. When it falls it is sometimes as fine as dust, sometimes the size of cinders. Most volcanoes, indeed, are simply gigantic cinder heaps.

When the force is not so great the lava in the pipe simply bubbles over and flows down the sides of the mountain, exactly as porridge boils over the edge of a pot. As lava is liquid, the slope of a lava volcano (or lava cone, as it is usually called) is always very gentle. Falling cinders, on the other hand, pile themselves up quite steeply. A lava cone, then, is always less steep than a cinder cone.

And a volcano never burns. What looks like flame is only the glow of the white hot lava on the clouds of steam. The more steam there is forcing its way up the pipe the more the lava bubbles, just as in the case of the porridge. If the pressure of steam is very great, then you have the lava blown to bits and falling as cinders, while the mighty clouds of steam rise high above the mountain. It is this steam that is mistaken for smoke.

Sometimes a cone sends out lava and cinders alternately, so that you have a great mountain of cinders bound together by layers and walls of lava.

These walls of lava are due to the fact that sometimes more lava wants to come up the pipe than the pipe will hold, so the lava bursts its way out through weak spots in the sides of the mountain. Etna has no fewer than 700 of these cones on its slopes. One of them, Monte Rossi, is a hill in itself, being 450 feet high. Indeed, a model of Etna looks as if it were covered with pimples.

When Etna is really roused it is far more dangerous than Vesuvius. In 1169 it nearly destroyed the city of Catania, killing 15,000 people. In 1669 it found its pipe so inconveniently small that it had to crack one of its sides. This crack was no less than twelve miles long. At the bottom white hot lava could dimly be seen through the clouds of steam. In 1755 millions of gallons of boiling water were shot out of the Val del Bove, which is a great circular pit on the slope of the mountain, four or five miles in diameter, its sides being cliffs nearly a mile high in places.

The greatest volcanic eruption ever known took place in the East Indies in 1883. The story makes almost incredible reading. The volcanic island of Krakatoa commenced proceedings by blowing half of itself into thin air. From the opening no less than a cubic mile of rock was shot out.

A column of steam and lava dust rose into the air to a height six times as great as that of Mount Everest. It spread and spread till for hundreds of miles around the air was black as midnight. Sounds as of distant cannonading were heard 2,000 miles off.

Sea waves fifty feet high killed 35,000 people and were felt as far off as California. Instead of an island half a mile high there was now a hole a quarter of a mile deep. The shock of the eruption sent air waves three and a half times around the earth. The fine dust in the upper atmosphere added for months afterward a strange glow to the sunsets in England and did not vanish completely for three years.

The exact cause of the eruptions is not known for certain. A popular theory is that they are caused by water getting in to the white hot mass which is supposed to lie under the outer crust of the earth. And it is certainly a fact that practically all volcanoes are close to the edge of the sea.

Some lava flows slowly, some quickly. Vesuvius in 1805 sent out a lava stream that in four minutes had reached a spot four miles off. The size of a lava stream is sometimes gigantic. In 1783 Skaptar Jokull in Iceland emitted two streams at one time. One was forty miles long by seven miles broad, the other fifty miles by fifteen. The average depth of both was about a hundred feet.

Lava cools very, very slowly, except on the surface, which cools at once. It is an extremely bad conductor of heat. Twenty years after a stream of lava was sent out from Jorullo, in Mexico, tourists could light their cigars through chinks in the surface, and the surface had been cold for twenty years. In 1828 a layer of snow many feet thick was found under a layer of Vesuvian lava. It was still unmelted and is probably there still. — Pearson's Weekly.

A WESTERN FAMILY.

Chief Justice Sifton Is One of a Pioneer Stock on Prairies.

The Hon. Arthur Lewis Sifton, Chief Justice of Alberta, who, it is stated, has the refusal of the Premiership of the province if he cares to leave the safe seclusion of the Bench for the uncertain honors of active political life, is the elder brother of the Hon. Clifford Sifton and son of Mr. John Wright Sifton, of Brandon, who many years ago had the honor of being Speaker of the Manitoba Legislature. Judge Sifton, who is a B.A. of Victoria University, Cobourg, studied law in Manitoba, was admitted to practice at the Bar of that province in 1882, and practiced for some time at Prince Albert. He possesses one valuable quality which his brother does not have in any conspicuous degree, that of great platform and personal magnetism, and it is probably on this quality, as well as on his natural ability, that the Alberta Liberals are reckoning in inviting him to be their leader. The father of these well-known brothers has been an active pioneer in various fields of national activity. He in 1860 organized the first big company to exploit Canadian petroleum, remaining connected with that industry in Lambton County until 1874, when he went to Manitoba to undertake some telegraph and railway construction work.

With two other gentlemen whose interests he soon after bought out, he was awarded the contracts for building and maintaining for five years a telegraph line from the city of Winnipeg to Fort Pelly, and for the clearing of the right of way, a hundred feet wide for a distance of about three hundred miles, for the then contemplated Canadian Pacific Railway. The natural obstacles encountered were appalling. The fearful wet seasons of 1876, 1877 and 1878 flooded the country along the line for forty miles east of Lake Manitoba and sixty miles west, to a depth, in some places, of six feet, making it impossible to keep the line up. As the Government refused to make any allowance for this, the loss was very great. Some idea may be formed of the difficulty of performing work of that character in Manitoba at that time when it is stated that one winter, provisions having run out at one of Mr. Sifton's camps, he had to send supplies by dog-trains one hundred and sixty miles, and then have it carried on men's backs sixty miles further, making the cost of freight from Winnipeg to the camp twelve cents per pound. At no time during the best part of the season, could the same goods be transported over the route at less than five cents per pound freight. In the early eighties Mr. Sifton removed to Brandon and went in for wheat raising, being one of the pioneers of the district, and raising from 10,000 to 18,000 bushels of grain a year.

Mr. Sifton, senior, came to Canada from Tipperary, Ireland, in 1832, his ancestry on both sides, however, being purely English.

Prizes For Alfalfa Fields.

Saskatchewan is clearing the floor for a great contest. The event will not be spectacular, but its effect will be greater than that of any previous movement that has taken place in the agricultural competition in the growing of alfalfa. This movement was inaugurated at the Agricultral Societies' Convention held at Regina in January last when it was decided that a prize of $1,000 would be awarded for the best ten-acre field of alfalfa in Saskatchewan in 1914. Since then others have volunteered assistance. But the competition has outgrown the first plan; ten times $1,000 would not be more than sufficient to finance the competition as it is now planned to conduct it.

The Agricultural Societies' Convention favored the plan of having the competition conducted by a committee appointed by the Minister of Agriculture. The committee named by the Minister consists of the Dean of the College of Agriculture for Saskatchewan, the superintendent of the Experimental Farm, Indian Head, and the president of the Grenfell Agricultural Society, with the director of extension work in the College of Agriculture as secretary. The convener of the committee, Dean Rutherford, asked for a meeting of the committee to prepare rules to govern the contest, and this was held at Indian Head. The approved plan provides for a division of the province into four parts. Prizes will be offered for the six best fields of alfalfa in each of the districts. The prizes will be as follows:—First, $500; second, $400; third, $300; fourth, $200; fifth, $100; sixth, $75. The first prize field will be scored for the championship, which will consist of a magnificent silver trophy.

Crops of 1909.

Of the total production of wheat in the Western provinces last year, 96.48 per cent. was merchantable, of oats 95.13 per cent., and of barley 95.44 per cent. Manitoba shows the highest percentage of merchantable wheat, oats and barley, being 98.83 for wheat, 97.59 for oats and 98.13 for barley. In Ontario there was at the end of March 3,017,000 bushels of wheat as against 4,550,000 bushels last year, of oats 37,780,000 as against 44,715,000 bushels, of barley 4,920,000 as against 7,144,000 bushels, of potatoes 13,224,000 as against 10,926,000 bushels, of turnips and other roots 11,658,000 as against 32,757,000 bushels in 1909. In Quebec at the same date there was on hand of oats 13,677,000 as against 14,000,000 bushels in 1909, of potatoes 14,671,000 as against 7,042,000 bushels, of turnips and other roots 2,161,000 as against 3,673,000 bushels last year. In the Maritime Provinces there was on hand of oats 3,788,000 as against 6,089,000 bushels last year, of potatoes 10,907,000 as against 12,488,000 bushels, of turnips and other roots 2,837,000 as against 3,673,000 bushels in 1909.

N. B. Log Season.

With all the logs out on Bay Du Vin Nappan, Black River, Bartibogue, Tabusintac and Tracadia waters, and the logs in the northwest branch of the Miramichi running into the booms at the rate 7,000,000 feet daily, the driving season is coming to an end, with a new record for almost a complete cleanout and quick driving.

ness is most important, I should like to see you alone. My daughter is with me; I left her in a cab at the door."

Captain Chandos looked as he felt, much surprised.

"I have not the pleasure of knowing you," he said, courteously.

Mr. Westerne gave him his card.

"I must introduce myself," he said. "I am Paul Westerne, the artist. You may have heard of my name?"

With the ready and graceful tact that never deserted him, Captain Chados said:

"I know your pictures and through them may claim acquaintance with you. I cannot well see you here, if your business is private and important. My chambers are only in the next street. If you will drive there I will join you in a few minutes."

CHAPTER XXX.

A Pair of Blue Eyes.

A few minutes afterwards Paul Westerne and his daughter found themselves in the cozy bachelor chambers of Captain Chandos. Paul had only time for a few words with Edith.

"He is a splendid man, Edith," he said, "a perfect gentleman, with a fair, frank, brave face. I am sure you will like him."

Then the subject of his words entered the room.

He bowed courteously on seeing a lady, and placed a chair for her.

Mr. Westerne introduced his daughter, and Edith, raising her thick veil, looked intently at Captain Chandos, who looked slightly surprised at the beauty of that most fair face. Then he turned to the artist, and asked if it were upon the subject of pictures he wished to see him.

He could not help noticing how constrained and uncomfortable the artist looked—like a man who has a disagreeable task, and does not like fulfilling it.

Like many nervous men he came to the point at once.

"You are not, perhaps aware, Captain Chandos, that for several years of my life I resided at Wabash, in Australia, and that my dearest friend was Edgar Wayne?"

Captain Chandos bowed again, quite at a loss to imagine what was coming.

"I knew Edgar Wayne and his son, Alan, intimately. We were upon the most confidential terms. Our children—Edith and Alan—were like brother and sister. Next to his own father, Alan Wayne loved my daughter better than any one in the world. I left Wabash some short time before Edgar Wayne died. I have been abroad for many years. Almost the first news I heard on returning to London was that my old friend's son Alan had become Sir Alan Aynsley and had succeeded to Carsdale."

"It is true. I know the gentleman well," replied Captain Chandos, cheerfully.

"May I ask if it is also true that you would have been heir had Edgar Wayne's son died?"

"Yes," said the soldier, simply, with a smile on his brave face. "But God willed it otherwise, and I am content."

"Have you ever entertained the least doubt as to the identity of the man calling himself Sir Alan Aynsley with my friend's son? Do you believe the present master of Carsdale to be the true Alan Wayne?"

"Most certainly I do!" cried the captain, startled by the words. "I have never heard a doubt expressed. I do not think one exists."

"There is more than a doubt in my mind," said Mr. Westerne solemnly; "there is a certainty. That man is not the Alan Wayne we knew at Wabash!"

"My God!" cried the captain, "do you know what you are saying, Mr. Westerne?"

"My father is right," said Edith, speaking for the first time; "there is no doubt upon the matter—it is a certainty! I knew Alan Wayne. The moment my eyes rested upon this man's face I said he was a stranger to me. Who he is, I do not know; but he is not Alan Wayne."

Captain Chandose had gown very pale as she spoke; there was so much at stake for him.

"But what proofs have you?" he cried. "Your belief, though evidently sincere, would not be sufficient of itself."

"I have brought one proof with me," said the artist, unfolding the paper wrapped round the picture. "Years ago I sketched Alan Wayne's face; here it is. You know Alan Aynsley; compare the two and see if there is the slightest resemblance between them."

Captain Chandos took the picture in his trembling hands.

"There is not the faintest shade of likeness," he said; "but, though that may be proof sufficient to you, it would be but a trifle in the eyes of the law. He may have altered; you may have mistaken the picture; many excuses might make the proof of little worth."

Then Paul told him of the three tests.

"He could not answer one word," said Edith; "he was frightened and uneasy—the strongest proof to me is that I who loved Alan Wayyne, dislike and mistrust this man."

"I am too astonished to be able to speak or think," said Captain Chandos. "I am incapable of forming a clear idea. If he be the right man we are doing him a shameful wrong, in even entertaining the suspicion; if he be an imposter, he deserves punishment!"

His face flushed and his eyes flamed with anger at the thought. If he were an imposter, if a thief and usurper had parted him from Blanche—he cared less for Carsdale—that he should have been defrauded of a rich inheritance troubled him less than he should have lost his love; that he should have suffered so much, and all without cause.

"When did the suspicions first occur to you?" he asked. And then Paul Westerne told him the story of his daughter's doubts, and his disbelief in them.

"I changed my mind the first moment I saw this picture. Poor Alan's face rose up before me vividly, as

THE COAL OF NOVA SCOTIA.

T. J. Brown Says There Is Still Untold Wealth In the Ground.

At the recent annual meeting of the Mining Society of Nova Scotia, an address was delivered by Mr. T. J. Brown, president of the society, in which he pointed out that little had been done to increase the stock of knowledge respecting the coal deposits of the province. Mr. Brown's remarks on this point are interesting.

"To my knowledge," said Mr. Brown, "not one seam of commercial value has been discovered in Cape Breton, or indeed, with perhaps one exception, in the Province of Nova Scotia, since the year of Confederation. Mr. Richard Brown left us in book form the story of his work in prospecting the whole of Cape Breton.

"In this book, Mr. Brown has given geological information in connection with our coal seams in Cape Breton, and nothing of much importance has been added to this information, and nothing contained therein of any importance has been found in error.

"When we come to consider that the work this man did in Cape Breton was done through the wilderness on horseback, or around the shores in a small open boat, we get an idea of the thoroughness with which the engineers of the old school did their work, and the accuracy and the method with which they left us the benefit of their experience.

"Are we to believe that there is nothing more to discover in the way of coal seams? Or, are we to believe that no geologist of his experience and knowledge has devoted the time to it since? He was unaided at the time. He was the only mining engineer—or nearly so—on the Island. What have the host of modern, so-called, mining engineers now in Nova Scotia added in any way to the knowledge of our mineral possibilities, and where can their results be found?

"I believe that coal seams, as yet unknown, will be found in Cape Breton; and in Cumberland and Pictou counties, where the coal measures are not so regular as in Cape Breton, the possibilities are even greater. We have every facility offered in the way of Government boring machines. What do we lack? Is it men? Is it capital? Or is it knowledge? Let us think it over.

"Is it possible that the present miner is but a scavenger of coal, content to make the best of what he finds already staked out for him! Is it possible that the present generation are content to take the fruits of what previous giants of the province fought for and obtained for them—responsible Government, confederation, discovery of all the coal seams of the province—all previous to 1897.

"Nothing doing since except enjoying or depleting our legacy."

The Original Rough Rider.

A man who accomplished much for Canada, as one of the original band of bustlers connected with the Canadian Pacific Railway, passed away in Virginia recently in the person of General Rosser, who was selected as chief engineer by the Smith-Stephen-Angus syndicate when they obtained the contract for building Canada's first Transcontinental Railway. Gen. Rosser, as chief engineer, had charge of the final selection of the route and also of the work of construction and was very popular in the West, where he appeared to feel much more at home than in the East. He is well and affectionately remembered by many of the old-timers. Before coming to Canada, he had been engaged on similar work in connection with the Northern Pacific and had already made a reputation for track-making in the prairie country. Gen. Rosser was one of the war heroes of the Southern Confederacy, having been one of the dashing, irregular cavalry leaders who accomplished much wonders for the Southern cause by raids and by brilliant intelligence work. He was af riend and favorite of both Gen. Lee and Stonewall Jackson and entrusted by both commanders with many important duties. Such success did he and his command of gallant mounted rifles and scouts attain during the war that it has become customary for United States military writers to describe him as the original American rough rider. It is said that when Theodore Roosevelt organized his corps of irregulars during the Cuban war, he used Rosser's standards for selecting his men, and his methods for training and equipping them. Gen. Rosser's death passed almost unnoticed in Canada, but in Manitoba there is a town which perpetuates his name.

Western Speed.

A story of the surprising agricultural possibilities of the Peace River Valley, 700 miles north of Edmonton, is told by Robt. Jones, superintendent of the experimental farm at Fort Vermilion, who was recently in Edmonton on a trip for supplies. To prove what he says of the fertility of the north country from which he comes he brought with him, as gifts to the Edmonton Board of Trade, samples of grains and vegetables grown on the five-acre farm at the outpost of civilization that would do credit to any market garden or farm in the central or southern portion of the province. The farm lies in the river flats at Fort Vermilion, a plot of five acres, and for its area one of the most productive pieces of ground in all Canada.

Half a dozen varieties of wheat were grown on it last year; Preston, Ladago, Red Fife, Bishop, Early Reager, all spring wheat.

Tomatoes ripened on the vine; potatoes, turnips, mangols, sugar beets and carrots grew in field crops. Radishes, lettuce, onions, celery, asparagus, parsnips and cauliflowers grew in this Peace River Eden. One of the cauliflowers weighed 11 1-2 pounds.

His Manly Spirit.

A sturdy Scotchman had been having a dispute with his wife, which resulted in his taking refuge under the bed. As she stood on guard with a good sized stick in her hand he called lustily from his retreat: "Ye can lamb me and ye can bate me, but ye canna break ma manly spirit. I'll na come oot."

NAMES OF THE PROVINCES.

Four of Canada's Great Subdivisions Bear Indian Names.

The Abenaki and Micmac Indians who inhabited Prince Edward Island before its discovery by Europeans called it Abegweit (resting on the wave), a beautiful and descriptive name. Early Europeans who visited the Island (tradition says Cabot on St. John's Day, June 24, 1497) named it the Island of St. John. In 1799, the Legislature decided to change the name to Prince Edward Island, in honor of the Duke of Kent, Queen Victoria's father, who was then in command of the British forces at Halifax.

Nova Scotia formed a part of the early Acadie. Sir William Alexander, the Earl of Stirling, received from King James in 1621, a charter granting him an immense tract of land in North America including Acadie. This was called Nova Scotia, a name which afterwards was confined to the peninsula or province now so called. The "Baronets of Nova Scotia" were entitled to a grant of land three miles broad on payment of £150 sterling each. The difficulty of infeoffing (investing with a freehold estate) the Knights in their distant possessions was overcome by the mandate of King Charles, whereby a part of the soil of Castle Hill, Edinburgh, magically became the soil of Nova Scotia.

When New Brunswick formed a part of the grant of Sir William Alexander, it received the name of Alexandria in his honor. New Brunswick, its present name, was given in 1784, in honor of the reigning dynasty of the House of Brunswick.

Since 1867 the name of Quebec has been given to the province formerly called Lower Canada.

According to tradition the promontory of Quebec was known to the Indians as Kebec, meaning a narrow channel. The early missionaries, who best understood the Indian language, said that the word Kebec means a narrowing.

Ontario is an Indian word, "O-no-ta-ri-o," meaning "Beautiful Lake." The province formerly called Upper Canada, was name after Lake Ontario.

Like Ontario, Manitoba is named from a lake. The name Manitoba (Manitou, the great spirit and ba passing), is from the Cree language and is said to mean the "Passing of the Great Spirit."

At one point in the lake, the shores of which are generally low and marshy, there is a limestone bluff at which the Indians in paddling past found a strong echo, which they thought the voice of the Great Spirit, and hence called it Manitou-ba. The name of this locality became attached to the lake and afterward to the province.

Saskatchewan comes from a Cree word meaning "Swiftly Flowing River."

Alberta takes its name from Her Royal Highness, Princess Louise Caroline Alberta, wife of the Duke of Argyll and sixth child of the late Queen Victoria.

The old provisional district of Alberta was created in 1882, during the Marquis of Lorne's administration as Governor-General of Canada. During his term of office Their Excellencies visited the Northwest, and were entertained by Lieutenant-Governor Laid, at Battleford, which was then the territorial seat of the Government. —The Educational Review.

Plays Golf at Seventy-Six.

His Grace Archbishop Hamilton, of Ottawa, Metropolitan of the Church of England in the Ecclesiastical Province of Canada, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his consecration and the fourteenth of his translation to his present diocese recently. The archbishop is now seventy-six years of age, but certainly does not look it, for he is still very active and enjoys a game or two over the full course at the links of the Ottawa Golf Club as much as any of the younger members. Belonging to a family long established and well-known in Canada, and having a pastoral experience extending over three dioceses, there are few clergymen in Canada who are as widely known intimately as is His Grace. He was the fourth and youngest son of the late Lieut.-Col. George Hamilton, of Quebec and Hawkesbury, and a brother of the late Hon. John Hamilton of Montreal, who in his lifetime was a member of the Senate of Canada. The firm of Hamilton Brothers was for years one of the most extensive engaged in the Canadian lumber trade, and the archbishop's share in the Hamilton wealth has enabled him to render, unostentatiously, much financial assistance to the poorer parishes of his extensive diocese and to the various diocesan funds requiring it. The founder of the original Hamilton lumber firm was from Hamwood, County Meath, Ireland, but claimed descent from Hugh Hamilton, a son of Sir James Hamilton, of Evandale, in the Kingdom of Scotland, who settled in Ireland in 1616.

Canada and Argentina.

The fields of "The Last Best West" are not the only fertile areas that are being tapped to supply the needs of the great markets of Britain. The Canada of the south is Argentina, and the development of the world's trade is bringing these two into keener competition. Last year Argentina delivered more wheat to Great Britain, but Canada had a tremendous lead in flour.

Argentina was the greatest contributor of wheat to the British market excepting Russia, and the lead of the latter was by only a quarter of a million hundred weight. Canada stood third, with the British east Indies (15,423,600 cwt.) fourth. In exports of flour, Argentina was a small competitor, while Russia and India did not appear in the contest at all. The greatest exporter of flour to Britain is the United States, which sent 6,739,051 cwt., or three times as much as Canada. But Canada far outdistanced the others, for the next competitors are Germany, with 605,960 cwt.; France, with 575,380 cwt.; and Australia, with 507,100 cwt.

A Record Catch.

REGARDING THE BABY.

Nephew Asks His Aunt to Explain the New Arrival's Words.

Skeewatckie, Wis., May 2.—Dear Aunt Eleanor—Am somewhat worried about Ruth Carr today.

She raised the first rumpus incident to her young life this morning when nurse bathed her before she (the baby) had her breakfast.

Knowing, as we do, that from time immemorial it has been held by all savants as almost fatal to health to breakfast first and then bathe immediately afterward, this tendency on the part of our daughter is a source of the greatest anxiety to Margaret and myself.

I wish, dear aunt, you would kindly advise us.

Is it not altogether likely, however, that, being, as she is, an unprecedentedly remarkable baby, an absolute reversal of the ordinary and accepted usages may be the very thing necessary to her successful rearing?

Any advice from you on this point will be thankfully received.

I know that you are the merest heretic in anything savoring of—I can't just now recall what that bunch calls itself, but it's a cult, and they imagine they have been on earth before in the guise of Emperor Constantine or Julius Caesar or Napoleon or Guy Fawkes or chipmunks or rabbits and things of that sort. But when a baby aged ten days and weight eleven pounds comes across at you with such remarks as "wuggdidgy" and "weegogdy" how can one help speculating as to whether she may not in some former incarnation have acquired quite a little smattering of Volapuk or Esperanto?

Far be it from me, however, to judge. Y'r af. nephew,

Engagement Put In Danger.

She was the lady of his choice, and he took no pains to conceal it. "I'll bet you don't know what day tomorrow is," she announced suddenly. "Why, Tuesday, of course," he answered, in a puzzled tone. "Oh, I don't mean that kind of a day. I knew you didn't know." "What do you mean?" he replied helplessly. She pretended to be hurt. "It will be my birthday." "Congratulations, Alice! Congratulations!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "And how old may you"— "That's for you to find out," she answered, laughing. "Well, I'll bet you I know." "You do?" "Yes, and I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll send you a rose for every year of your life. How will that do?" At the florist's he found the assistant unoccupied. "Send Miss Casey eighteen of your best roses tomorrow morning. You know the address. Eighteen. Your best. Understand?" The boy understood. Half an hour later the proprietor was looking over the order book. "What did Mr. Graham order today?" "Eighteen roses, sir," answered Willie. "Eighteen? He's a pretty good customer. Throw in a dozen more."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Soon to Be.

The old lawn mower has been hauled from the shed
And painted and oiled for the fray.
Ere long at the dawn will pa leap from his bed,

But not without plenty of noise,
And some will exclaim as they listen, "Alas,
Late napping has lost all its joys!"

STRUCK A SNAG.

A Painful Jolt For the Good Roads Ambassador.

I'll never forget the night I called on the Widow Yarn. She owned forty acres on the main road, which I hoped to have improved. In practically every house in the county I had been hospitably received because I was a human being. A pioneer citizen, member of the Good Roads club, took me in a carriage to see the widow. "I'll watch the horses," this wise old citizen said.

"I don't know what would frighten them," I suggested, but he seemed to expect a brass band or some other unusual sight, although it was 8 o'clock at night. I soon knew why he preferred to sit out there in the cold.

"Mrs. Yarn, I believe?" I began ingratiatingly when the door was opened.

"Well," the person who stood there observed, "I've been here forty years. You ought to believe it."

"This," thinks I to myself, "is a strange place for curbstone humor." And then aloud: "I have been talking for good roads, madam. We have decided to run a rock road by here, and as"—

"Who has decided?" This in the voice of a conductor when he asks you how old your little boy is.

"Why," I stammered, "the Good Roads club, and"—

"I don't belong to it, do I? They wouldn't have a woman member, would they?"

"I'm sure I don't know. I have been chiefly"—

"Sure you don't!" the Widow Yarn snapped. "You're chiefly concerned about taxing my forty acres into the county treasury without letting me vote on it. What right have you to come over here to build roads? Are you a road builder? Did you ever build a road or pay for one?"

"Madam," I said, "you really do have a vote on this question if a road district is organized. You have forty votes—one for every acre you own, and"—

Her face lighted up with a light that never was seen before on human face unless perhaps in riding on an old transfer or getting rid of a bad nickel. She opened the door wider—I had not been admitted up to that moment—and asked me to enter.

"You say I have forty votes?" she inquired.

"You have," I assured her, feeling like the bearer of good news.

"Well, glory be!" the Widow Yarn sighed, rocking herself comfortably. "Glory be, say I! I'll cast them all against your old rock road. Now I must be getting ready for prayer meeting."—Charles Dillon in Harper's Weekly.

The Terrors of Frankness.

"There is no worse vice than frankness," said a playwright. "How should I feel, for example, if I asked you for your opinion of my plays and you answered me frankly, quite frankly? Why, I should feel like the poor lady at the bridge drive who said to her hostess' little daughter:

"'Your eyes are such a heavenly blue. And what color are my eyes, darling?'

Ruskin and the Turners.

How closely famous pictures can be imitated by skillful artists was proved by an exhibition by Ruskin in 1875 of a series of facsimiles of Turner's pictures in the National gallery, London. The collection was accompanied by a characteristic note from Ruskin, in which he said, "I have given my best attention during upward of ten years to train a copyist to perfect fidelity in rendering the works of Turner and have now succeeded in enabling him to produce facsimiles so close as to look like replicas—facsimiles which I must sign with my own name to prevent their being sold for real Turners."

Kith and Kin.

"Very interesting conversation in here?" asked papa, suddenly thrusting his head through the conservatory window, where Ethel, Mr. Tomkins and little Eva sat very quietly.

"Yes, indeed," said Ethel, ready on the instant with a reply. "Mr. Tomkins and I were discussing our kith and kin, weren't we, Eva?"

"Yeth, you wath," replied little Eva. "Mr. Tomkins said, 'May I have a kith?' and Ethel said, 'You kin.'"—London Tit-Bits.

ELEPHANTS AS LABORERS.

They Work In Forests and Mills Preparing Teakwood for Market.

In the lumber yards and saw mills of India, elephants are employed to aid in preparing teakwood for shipment. In the forests and at the ports also these big creatures handle the timber. They drag the logs to the streams and arrange the booms; they stack the planks, and they carry all sorts of lumber at the direction of their masters. Every saw mill has its elephants and there are some companies which employ several hundred. The average institution, however, can afford but few, for the animals are costly, a green one bringing $800 and a prize worker often as much as $2,000.

The elephants come from the forests of Upper Burma. The wild ones are all owned by the Government, which has an elephant department to catch and care for them. The elephant commissioner keeps track of the wild herds and annually sends out men to hunt them and catch the young bulls, which are trained and are finally disposed of to the lumbermen.

These huge beasts handle logs of great weight, writes F. G. Carpenter, writing of scenes he has visited. "An elephant would kneel down before the middle of a log, crowd his tusks under it and then, throwing his great trunk over the top, would raise it bodily and carry it to the truck upon which it was to be pushed to the buzz saw. If the log proved very heavy he would rest one end on the ground and drag it. An elephant piling lumber would lift the timbers up and lay them down on the others as evenly as though it had measured each piece. In some cases where it was necessary to carry two logs at a time the men tied a rope around them and the elephant would pick up the end of the rope with his trunk and place it over his tusk and then, raising his head, walk off with it. The elephants gather up the scraps of lumber and lay them so that the workmen can rope them into bundles. They also work at piling the boards and loading for the steamers.

At the lumber camps they not only carry the logs to the streams, but aid in forming the rafts and booms. They wade or swim about, according to the depth of the water, towing the logs this way and that. When the logs come to the ports they break the booms by pushing out the key log. They then take the timbers out of the water and put them on the cars, which carry them to the mill. In some places the elephants work together, and there are boss elephants who keep the others up to their work and pound them with their trunks when they lag. They have to be carefully fed, and each must have his bath twice a day. During this operation they sit down while buckets of water are thrown over them. After that their masters scrub them with rough brushes and curry them, as it were, all over. As the water is dashed upon them they wag their tails and flap their ears and grunt in joy.

Lord Rothschild's Influence.

A pleasing story is told apropos of the prestige of the great house of Rothschild and its influence in City circles of London. A young scion of a noble house was given a letter of introduction to Lord Rothschild. In this it was stated that the young man, though undoubtedly talented, had had the misfortune to be wholly thrown upon his beam-ends owing to the death of his father, who had succumbed to grief on account of his bankruptcy. The letter wound up asking Lord Rothschild to do his very utmost for a deserving case. After having read the note, Lord Rothschild took the young man by the arm, and walked with him from the Rothschilds' offices in St. Swithin's Lane, past the Bank of England, through Throgmorton street, and past the Stock Exchange, introducing him on the way to several well-known brokers and financiers. Then, shaking hands with him, he wished him "good-day" and "good luck." "But," said the young man in astonishment, "are you not going to do anything for me?" "My dear fellow," replied Lord Rothschild, "if you are one half as clever as I am assured you are, you yourself will know what to do." The young man was bright enough to take the hint, and not only obtained unlimited credit in the City through the prestige of the great financier's friendship, but soon made the headway which has since led to success.

Three Distinguished Brothers.

Although he probably had high hopes for his sons, it is doubtful if John Dewar, the Perth distiller, imagined for one moment that they would attain the high positions they at present occupy. One, Sir John, was made a baronet three years ago, Sir Thomas was knighted in 1902, and now Arthur Dewar, K.C. M.P., Solicitor-General for Scotland since 1909, has been appointed a Scottish judge. There are few more popular members of the House than Mr. Dewar, and it is interesting to note that when he first entered the field of politics as candidate for South Edinburgh in 1899 his opponent was the late Gen. Wauchope. The contest was a sharp and exciting one, and, notwithstanding the popularity of the general, Mr. Dewar was returned with a handsome majority of 881.

Wealthy Man, Unlucky Sportsman.

Though the world has treated him well enough in most respects, Lord Ellesmere has the reputation of being one of the unluckiest of sportsmen. It would be hard to count the number of times that he has just failed to bring off important events. His horses have come in second in the Derby, the Oaks, the Goodwood Cup, the One Thousand Guineas, and the Doncaster Cup, so that the superstitious might well see the interposition of some malignant destiny in his persistent ill-fortune.

A BUSINESS TRAINING

The Methods That Are Used In the Schools of Germany.

CLASS ROOMS AS OFFICES.

The Pupils Are Divided Into Firms That Carry on an Imaginary Trade With Each Other—The Course From Office Boy to Director.

No one will deny the fact that Germans are among the keenest business men in the world. And undoubtedly one of the secrets of their success lies in the fact that in German schools boys are taught the practical details of business. The writer recently returned from Hamburg after a year's course of education, and an outline of the system of training boys in business may be interesting.

On my first day's attendance I was handed a time table on which appeared, set out in formidable array, such subjects as commercial correspondence, laws of bills of exchange, currency, political economy and commercial law, none of which at the time conveyed much to me and raised serious doubts in my mind as to whether I should be able to understand and appreciate what appeared to be most abstruse subjects.

At 9 a. m. sharp on the following day the course began, prefaced by a couple of hours' hard study, for the Germans are gluttons to work and think nothing of a twelve hour day. The first course was called "business training." We worked in two spacious rooms furnished as offices, each room representing a different business house. These two firms carried on an imaginary trade with each other, and the routine adhered to was modeled exactly on the lines of a first class business establishment.

Each firm had a director, and these two were the most eminent students in the academy. They had subject to their management and control a complete staff of correspondents, shorthand writers, typists, bookkeepers, etc. The whole was supervised by a master, to whom reference was made in case of dispute or difficulty.

On making my appearance I was informed that my services were in request as an office boy. I was somewhat taken back, not to say a little humiliated, by the lowly position assigned to me, and I gave the master to understand that I considered I was qualified to occupy a much better post than that which he had chosen for me. He did not seem in the least perturbed by my remarks, but said: "You have already made a mistake—a mistake of diplomacy. One of the great maxims of business as taught here is to do what you are told, to do it at once and do it well."

With that he handed me a pile of envelopes and a long list of addresses and told me to set to work addressing them. I did so, but not with a very good grace, the master coming round from time to time to inspect my work. For two solid hours I plodded on until 11 a. m., when the course came to an end. Then I took the opportunity of going up to the master again and asking him if he did not really think I had been wasting my time in what I had been doing.

"Not in the least," said he. "In everything, no matter how simple or how difficult, there is always a good deal to learn. If you have paid attention while you were working you will have learned something about the geography of the German empire, for each address contains the name of some important town and province in which it is situated and the name of some firm celebrated for some particular class of goods."

This gave me food for reflection. As a matter of fact, I had not paid the least attention to what I had been writing; consequently I had failed to derive the benefit which it was the master's intention I should obtain from what seemed to me at the outset a most senseless task. On the following day I resolved to follow out the master's instructions to the letter, and I was surprised to find how interesting the work became.

I continued addressing envelopes for two hours a day for a whole week, and the next week I received promotion. In this way I went through the whole routine, from office boy to director, and the experience which I obtained in the various capacities has proved invaluable to me in business.

As director I had to sign checks, dictate letters, enter into agreements with the other firm with reference to the sale and purchase of goods, keep an eye on the money market, work out arbitrage calculations, draw up and indorse bills of exchange and bills of lading, make out periodical statements of affairs, allow or dispute amounts placed to the debit of the firm on account of general average losses and generally supervise everything.

While we were thus drilled in practical work the theoretical side of business was not neglected. Lectures were given at fixed hours, bookkeeping and mercantile law. Thus we enjoyed the inestimable advantage of acquiring the theory and practice of business at the same time.—Detroit Free Press.

A RAILWAY PROPOSITION

What has really been advanced in behalf of United States Railways' claims to an increase in their freight charges has been illustrated in the case of the Canadian roads in connection with the late award of the board acting under the conciliation law. From the nature of things wages enter more largely into the cost of operating the railways than in connection with any other industry. When to wages is added the cost of fuel and material, in the production of which the cost of labor is the main factor, it may be said that there is no business which pays out so large a proportion of its gross receipts to the actual worker as the railway. Some statements just issued illustrate the point. In the year ending with June 30, 1909, the gross earnings of Canadian railways amounted to $145,056,000. Of this sum 43 1-2 per cent. was paid to the men who work and manage the lines. In the United States the percentage of gross earnings paid in wages during the same time was only 41 per cent. The difference of 2 1-2 per cent. is not the result of divergencies in the rate of pay, but is to be ascribed to the fact that in large sections of the United States the population is much denser than it is in Canada; the trains there as a rule carry more passengers, more freight offers according to the length of line and the same operating force takes care of a heavier volume of business. When it is remembered that the state of New York has a population as large as all Canada the situation in this regard may be realized. When it is urged that the pay on Canadian roads should be as high as on those in the neighboring parts of the United States some things are forgotten. That, however, is aside. Canadian roads must pay approximately the same as those over the border or they will not retain good men. When, however, they have to increase the rates of pay for their men, and for their supplies faster than they can increase their traffic and traffic earnings, they find their financial position growing weaker. The estimate is that in twelve years up to 1910 the cost of labor on the Canadian railways increased by 30 per cent., that of supplies, material and equipment, exclusive of lumber, 44 per cent., and that of lumber by 65 per cent. The companies have been able to maintain their standing by the large and effective expenditure of money and track and rolling stock equipment. Tracks have been straightened and doubled, the grades on them reduced, and the lines laid with heavier rails. Bridges have been strengthened. The power of locomotives and the capacity of cars increased until a train's freight tonnage is almost or quite double what it was a score of years ago. The benefit has not all been to the railway share and bond holders. Rates have been reduced by some fractions of a cent a ton a mile. That seems nothing stated by itself, but that multiplied by the tens of millions of tons carried a mile means a large saving to those who pay transportation charges. The roads, however, cannot continuously go on spending money on improvements and increasing wages and operating outlays and maintain their financial standing unless they can also increase their earnings in proportion near to that of the growing demands upon them. The calculation is made that the increase to the trainmen just recommended to the board of conciliation, when conceded, and made the basis of concessions to other branches of labor will raise the percentage of the cost of wages on Canadian roads as a whole from 43 1-2 to about 54 1-2 per cent. of the gross earnings. Business men will appreciate what that will mean in its effect on the net earnings A large increase in the cost of working the roads cannot be considered alone. If the companies are to meet their responsibilities, maintain their credit and keep themselves in a position to meet greater demands on their facilities, they must get more for services that cost them more.

THE TORONTO "FLY"

Arrangements have been completed for the big International Aviation Meet to be held on the Trethewey Model Farm, Weston, just outside of Toronto, from July 8th to 16th. The outstanding figure will be the noted aeronaut Count de Lesseps, who will appear twice daily in his famous Bleriot monoplane La Scarabee, in which he crossed the English Channel and on Saturday last made a flight of thirty-five miles in 49 minutes, encircling the city of Montreal. The Count will bring two smaller machines with him.

The Wright Brothers are sending five of their famous biplanes and there promises to be some very intereseting contests between Count de Lesseps and the representatives of the Wright Brothers, as the Wrights are sending specially for this meet one of their very fastest machines. There promises to be a number of records broken at this meet, as the very liberal prizes offered are attracting the attention of the leading aviators.

ONE REASON WHY

The Canadian National Can Put on the Best Performance on the Continent

Why can the Canadian National put on a finer grand stand performance than any other exhibition on earth? One reason is that it can accommodate a bigger grand stand crowd than any other. One night last year there were 28,000 people in the grand stand and on the lawn in front of it. Just imagine—as many people as there are men, women and children in Galt and Guelph combined.

When You are Sick.

It doesn't take a good doctor to tell you that, almost anybody could do that much, but to tell exactly the nature of the disease sometimes calls for the utmost skill of the physician. Almost anybody by a few simple tests could tell that your eyesight was defective and that you needed glasses of some kind, but to diagnose the exact trouble and fit the right glasses calls for more than ordinary skill. We have given years of study to that one thing, and we are in business to bring wrong eyes and right glasses together.

OLD BOYS' REUNION NOTES.

A goodly number of ladies met Mr. Flint of the Parade committee and Mr. Hudson of the Reception committee at the Council chamber yesterday afternoon and organized for work. The co-operation of the young ladies of Belleville is earestly asked.

Milwaukee, July, 1910.

Your kind invitation was thankfully received. Will be home the 19th or 20th with best wishes for the Reunion in every particular.

Here's to thee and thy folks,
From me and my folks,
Sure there never was folks
Since folks was folks
Ever loved any folks
Half as much as me and my folks
Loved thee and thy folks

One of the Old Boys,
" G. D. WILDER."

It was with pleasure that I received the invitation to the "Old Boys Reunion in your city. Many years have passed since I served in the old 15th A.L.I., under Capt. Jim Clark and Col. Lazier and many happy days I spent there. Since that time over 30 years I think I have often lovingly looked back to dear old Quinte and wondered how all the old friends I knew were getting along Many we will never see again on this earth.

Yours in the spirit of fellowship,
F. C. ANGLISS.

Mr. E. Hayne who will be remembered as a Veteran citizen, writes that he will be here with eleven sons, daughters and grand sons. Well done and welcome!

A characteristic letter full of Irish good nature and wit, came yesterday from our most distant Old Boy, Sergeant Jack McNair, of Delagoa Bay, East Africa. His inspiring spirit will be with his Old comrades of the XV. during the Reunion.

Wedding Bells

WILSON-PRINGLE.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday morning at ten o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Cook, Charles street, when in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the family Miss Adelaide Pringle, sister of Mrs. Cook, was given in marriage to Dr. J. M. Wilson, of this city, Rev. W. D. P. Wilson, father of the groom, was the officiating clergyman, assisted by the Rev. J. P. Wilson of Lindsay. The bride was beautifully gowned in cream liberty satin, with trimmings of Crystal net and Venetian Point, and wore the conventional veil, clasped with a coronal of orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of lily-of-the-valley and bride's roses The matron of honor was Mrs. James Cook, who wore mauve silk mull over taffeta and carried pink carnations. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. H. B. Wilson, of this city. The wedding march was played by Mrs. G. H. Holton, sister of the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful whole pearl and diamond ring, to the matron of honor a jade brooch set with pearls and to the groomsman a handsome gold fob.

The bride's going away suit was of navy blue cloth with chantailer hat to match. After dejeuner Dr. and Mrs. Wilson left for a trip to Montreal, Quebec and other eastern places of interest.

Editor's note—The above was handed in too late for yesterday's issue.

Crop Conditions.

(Bradstreets.)

Late crop news from the West has been more reassuring than that of a week or two ago. The hot dry weather has been succeeded by plenty of rain and much cooler weather in most localities, and reports from authoritative sources state that the damage was overestimated. To just what extent this was so it is not now possible to say, but there seems to be a growing assurance to the effect that the total crop will show a substantial increase over that of last year. Unless the damage was really severe there is every reason this should be the case, as the area under seed is greater than that of last season by about 20 per cent. Doubtless, damage has been done in some localities, but Western Canada is now far too big a country to be set back in all directions by adverse climatic conditions.

A Boston sewerage pumping station utilizes for fuel the screenings from sewage, dried and compressed into briquettes.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

BASEBALL

One of the attractions for the half holiday yesterday afternoon was a city league baseball match between the Ontario and Grand Trunk Railway teams. It proved to be a fast and exciting game, resulting in a victory for the Grand Trunk boys. A large number of spectators were in attendance, not a few being ladies, and all took much interest in the game. As a result of the match the Grand Trunk team are now in the lead of the series, but a number of games are yet to be played. In the first innings yesterday the winners secured three runs, which gave them a decided lead. They failed to score again until the seventh innings, when they secured four more runs, which virtually clinched the game. The Ontarios were, however, not disheartened and played snappy ball. When the game was concluded the Grand Trunks had eight runs to their credit and the Ontarios seven. Sullivan for the winners pitched a fine game and played his position well. Moore for the Ontarios also pitched good ball and was given good support by members of the team. Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire and as usual gave entire satisfaction. Fortunately no mishap occurred during the progress of the game. The line up of the teams were as follows:—

ONTARIO		G. T. R.
	Pitcher
A. Moore		Sullivan

Trenton's New School Visited.

The members of the Board of Education who yesterday afternoon visited Trenton for the purpose of inspecting the new public school building recently erected there were delighted with what they saw. The party were conveyed to and from Trenton in Mr. O'Flynn's yacht, that gentleman accompanying them. The party were cordially received by Messrs. Young and McClung, members of the Trenton Board of Education and escorted by them through the new building, which is up-to-date in every respect. It is a 7-room school and cost $24,000.

After the Fight.

They're shoutin' down in Memphis,
A yellin' in Mobile,
And a tearin' things apart in New Orleans.
And the noise that comes from Texas
Makes a creepy feelin' steal
From our collar to the bottom of our jeans.

For a colored man named Johnson
Made a contract in the West
To teach an old time champion how to fight,
And the trick was turned at Reno,
(You likely know the rest.)
How the white man just got walloped cut of sight.

So we say again there's doin's
Down across the border line,
And they're killing off a thousand,
more or less,
Just to show there's no hard feelin's
"Golden rule" a workin' fine,
All the same it's put things in an awful mess.

MGR. LAFLAMME DEAD

Great Canadian Prelate and Scientist Passes Away.

Geologist, Who Ranks With Sir William Dawson, and Who Loved Research Better Than the Pomp of Position — Was Cardinal Taschereau's Adviser For Many Years After His Ordination In 1872.

Quebec, July 7.—The scientific world of America is in mourning today. One of its eminent and most justly appreciated members disappeared at noon yesterday, when Mgr. Joseph Clovis Kemner Laflamme, died in the Quebec Seminary, in the 61st year of his age. Mgr. Laflamme was a professor in Laval, Quebec, from 1892 up to two years ago, then he had to give up all work. He was a member of the Geological Society of France, of the Geological Society of America, of the French Society of Physics, and of the Royal Society of Canada.

He was born in Dorchester County in 1849, was ordained priest in 1872, and following that date was one of the faithful advisers of the late Cardinal Taschereau in all those troublesome questions, such as the division of the diocese of Three Rivers, the Laval University troubles at Montreal, and the famous Jesuit question.

He was a great geologist, standing on the same level as Sir William Dawson, and a narrow element at Quebec denounced him as scarcely orthodox, but he always had the confidence of his superiors. He refused the nomination as Bishop of Chicoutimi saying that he found more pleasure in looking for knowledge amongst the rocks of the Laurentians and the libraries of Laval than in even wearing a mitre of the mother church.

Mgr. Laflamme was one day asked what he thought of the future of the French-Canadian race, and he replied: "If the clergy of this province are properly educated, the future of the French race is assured, but if their education be neglected, as has been the case at certain periods, I can already see the beginning of the end."

"But is there not a great improvement, Monsigneur?"

"Yes." he replied, "there is an improvement, and I do hope it will be all right with my people."

Hotelkeeper Fined $500.

Port Stanley, July 7.—William Mahan, proprietor of the Invereria Hotel, was fined $500 and costs for selling on Sunday and other prohibited hours and has been asked to give bonds that he will not break the law in future.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 6.—(Special.)—A feature of the export live stock trade of late has been the decided improvement in the demand for ocean freight space from this port, and in consequence a stronger feeling has developed in the market, and rates have advanced 2s 6d to 5s per head to all ports, with the exception of Glasgow.

All the Liverpool freights for the month of July have been engaged at 22s 6d to 25s, and some for August at 30s per head. The London space for July has also been well booked up at 22s 6d to 23s, and agents are firm at 25s for August. Some engagements have been made to Manchester for this month at 25s. The demand for Glasgow freight is limited, and the rate is unchanged at 26s.

The exports of cattle from this port for the month of June were 8067 head, as against 10,243 for the same month last year, showing a decrease of 2176 head, while the total shipments for the season of 1910 amount to 15,033 head, as compared with 24,416 for the same period in 1909, showing a decrease of 9383.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings this morning were 600 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 750 hogs and 800 calves. Choice steers were sold at 6½c to 6¾c; good at 6¼c; fairly good at 5¾c to 5¾c; fair at 5c to 5¼c, and common at 4½c to 4¾c per lb.

The offerings of cows were not as large as they have been of late, and prices were unchanged at 5c to 6c, and bulls sold at 3c to 4c per lb.

Sales of yearling sheep were made at 3½c to 3¾c per lb., and spring lambs brought from $3.50 to $5 each, while calves sold at $3 to $10 each. The market for hogs was without any new feature, prices being steady. Sales of selected lots were made at $9 to $9.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Some Pessimism Exists.

Winnipeg, July 7.—Despite the assurance that present crop conditions warrant the uneasiness which appears to prevail among a certain section of the farming community, some pessimism will exist, notwithstanding the reports which have been issued by the railway companies regarding the weather and wheat fields along their respective lines. These reports show that the conditions generally are all that can be expected. And, providing favorable weather reigns, there is no reason, it is claimed, that the crop this year will be as big, if not bigger, than any previous year's season.

Gorst Will Remain.

London, July 7.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons, Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, stated that Sir Eldon Gorst would remain in Egypt as the British diplomatic agent and consul-general.

WORK AT HOME.

Paper Suggests That America Needs Roosevelt's Advice.

London, July 7.—While deploring the American race riots that followed the Jeffries-Johnson fight, London newspapers yesterday unexpectedly offered excuses for the disorders, and generally admitted that Europeans have little idea of the race situation in the United States.

The usually anti-American Evening Globe, referring to the attempts to lynch a negro in New York City, declares:

"Really our sympathy runs more to the men with the rope than to the blatant blacks. It is against human nature to expect the whites to accept the negroes' insolent assertion that Johnson's victory established the supremacy of the blacks without instant protest."

The Evening Star seizes the occasion to make fun of Col. Roosevelt and his Guild Hall speech. It recites Roosevelt's contention that the first duty of a civilized nation must be to preserve order, and then says that "his complacency must indeed be shaken."

"We wait to see whether he will apply his criticisms of England in her conduct of affairs in Egypt to his own country," The Star adds. "It is a pity that Americans are not cultivated in the art of taking defeat in sports in a dignified way, and of mind-

SKEEING IN THE ALPS.

Picturesque Sport on the Order of "Follow Your Leader."

The skeeing clubs form one of the most picturesque sights to be seen in the Alps in winter. With their bright colored blanket suits, tasseled caps or tam-o'-shanters and huge white mitts, they go through the snow covered woodlands across the white mountain slopes usually in single file, perhaps fifty sliding along after the leader in true Norwegian fashion. Indeed, it is a variety of the old game of "follow your leader," for what he does the others are expected to do. So if he comes to a ledge and jumps off all are supposed to leap.

But jumping with the skees is not so easy as it looks, and the end is often burial in the snow bank, for unless one is very sure of his footing the long, narrow wooden slats will twist or turn without warning, and over you go. With the skee one can go over hard snow at a very rapid rate, but when he strikes a patch of the newly fallen snow it is a case of slow to be sure, for any minute the bottom may sink away with him.

But it is healthful as well as invigorating, and the women have found that they need not look awkward even in this form of outdoor dress, with a ribbon here and a tassel there and some even adorning their skees.—St. Nicholas.

HE TOOK THE CASE.

The Lawyer Said He Would Attend to It, and He Did.

A Washington attorney is rather noted for the facility with which he forgets financial obligations. He has owed a certain grocer $8 for a year or two. The other day the merchant concluded to try a new course with him. Meeting him in his store, he said:

"Judge, I have a customer who owes me a small bill and has owed it for a long time. He makes plenty of money, but won't pay. What would you do?"

"I'd sue him," said the lawyer emphatically.

"Well, I will put the account in your hands." And the merchant presented a statement of the account against the lawyer himself.

"All right. I will attend to it," said the disciple of Blackstone.

A few days later the merchant received the following note from the lawyer:

"In the case of —— versus ——, I took judgment for the full amount of your claim. Execution was issued and returned 'no property found.' My fee for obtaining judgment is $10, for which amount please send check. Will be glad to serve you in any other matters in which you may need an attorney."—Washington Star.

NOVA SCOTIA'S AWAKENING.

Maritime Province Is Again Coming Into Her Own.

Is it not possible that a country regarded with a slightly contemptuous pity by reason of its inactivity may be all the while merely strengthening its fibres for future action?

Such at all events has been the experience of Nova Scotia. Previous to confederation no province of Canada exhibited a greater commercial activity. From her great shipbuilding yards staunch vessels slipped into the water by the hundred and sailed away with the fruits of her industry to distant marts and returned as heavily laden. Small shopkeepers grew into prosperous merchants, prosperous merchants developed into merchant princes. Work and money were plentiful, and the flag of prosperity flew high.

The flag of prosperity descended with the hoisting of the Canadian National ensign in Nova Scotia. Confederation, that splendid achievement in the making of Canadian destiny, wrought havoc with the Nova Scotian shipping trade by strangling the arteries of traffic with iron tariff bonds. The shipbuilding industry in Nova Scotia fed largely on foreign trade, and the sudden check placed on that trade killed the principal industry by a slow starvation. Isolated by her geographical position from the rest of Canada, cut off by artificial barriers from the outside world, the province was forced to rest content with a limited internal commerce. Yielding to the force of circumstances she rested from her labors, and so far as the outside world was concerned Nova Scotia slumbered.

It was a natural sleep, however, and not the coma that precedes death. The years of sleep were not wasted years. Slowly, but steadily, the province built up new tissue, strengthened its tendons and gathered fresh energy into its nerves for future endeavors. The public school system was developed and improved; increased facilities were provided for the encouragement of exact scholarship; and as a result Nova Scotia has given to the world perhaps more college professors and principals than any other province in Canada. The period of so-called slumber ripened the country and prepared it thoroughly for the present industrial advancement.

The exploitation of her rich coal measures by great moneyed interests finally aroused the province from her commercial lethargy. H. M. Whitney of Boston and his associates formed the Dominion Coal Company in 1893, took over vast areas of coal in the neighborhood of Glace Bay, Cape Breton, equipped splendid collieries with the most modern appliances for coal digging, and furnished fuel for Montreal furnaces. The energy exhibited by the Dominion Coal Company and the instantaneous success achieved, created a buoyant ozone throughout the commercial atmosphere. Other coal companies dug deeper and faster and shipped more swiftly. Coal measures in Cumberland, in Pictou, in Inverness and in Cape Breton counties were developed. Fully equipped collieries sprang up over the country. Submarine areas were exploited. Practically every known coal seam in the province was delved into by the modern magician who transmutes black diamonds into yellow gold.

The industrial impetus given the province by the coal interests was augmented by the establishment of the Dominion Steel works at Sydney. Eagle eyes had marked the south bank of Sydney harbor as an admirable location for the Steel industry, and the result was an expenditure of $25,000,000 which reared the mightiest steel making plant in Canada and transformed a straggling village into a hustling city. Other companies also found the smelting and refining of iron ore a profitable enterprise, and as a result the steel industry in Nova Scotia is on a thoroughly substantial footing and is assuming large proportions. These are only two of Nova Scotia's booming industries which will put her back in the forefront of the wealthy provinces.

Patents.

The Patent Office issued 6,395 patents in the fiscal year 1909. Of this number 903 were granted to Canadian citizens, and 72 per cent. of the whole issue to citizens of the United States. Besides those pictured, other provinces of the Dominion obtained the following patents: Saskatchewan 32, Alberta 28, Nova Scotia 24, New Brunswick 18, Yukon 4, and Prince Edward Island 3. The principal foreign countries to whose citizens patents were granted were: United States 4,602, Great Britain 346, Germany 215, France 59, Australia 58, Sweden 40, New Zealand 36, Austria 33, Transvaal 12. The ratio of population to each patent granted shows that Ontario secured one patent to every 4,769 residents; Quebec, one to every 8,575; British Columbia, one to every 5,095; Manitoba, one to every 5,535; while in New Brunswick the ratio was one to 18,746; Nova Scotia, one to 19,391, and Prince Edward Island, one to every 33,668. The total revenue of the Patent Office for the fiscal year was $176,692.05.

Strong on Conversation.

The Winnipeg city fathers followed with the closest interest Jim Conmee's legislation at Ottawa and even had representatives at Parliament Hill to see that the city's power privileges on the Winnipeg River were not interfered with. When word came that the bill was killed, one of the City Council framed a telegram to be sent to Hon. Clifford Sifton, congratulating him on his stand. This particular member, while a good councillor, like a good many Western oldtimers did not have educational opportunities in his youth. He had the telegram addressed, "Hon. Clifford Sifton, chairman of the conversation committee, Ottawa." A newspaperman, however, pointed out that there was a slight difference between "conversation" and "conservation," and the telegram was changed in time.

START VERY QUIET.

No Public Send-Off Given to Premier at Ottawa.

Ottawa, July 8.—The departure of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his two months' political trip to western Canada yesterday afternoon was a quiet affair, no attempt being made at a demonstration; that is reserved for the return to the capital early in September.

The party at the station was not a large one. It included Lady Laurier, who accompanied Sir Wilfrid to the station in their auto, the Ministers of the crown still in the city, a number of close personal friends of the Premier, and a group of press correspondents. Lady Laurier will go to Banff at a later date and return east with Sir Wilfrid in September.

Sir Wilfrid's habit of remembering everybody was quite in evidence. As he shook hands with the newspaper men present, he expressed to each a word of regret that they were unable to accompany him, and, just before boarding the car, he remembered that he had said good-bye to everybody but his chauffeur, so back he came off the steps of the car, and going up to the lad with the peaked cap he said, "Good-bye, Charlie, be a good boy until I come back."

Sir Wilfrid was accompanied by Senator Gibson and G. M. Macdonald, M.P. He will be joined at Port Arthur by Hon. Geo. P. Graham and Fred Pardee, chief Liberal whip.

Members of the technical education commission spent the day working out the details of their Canadian itinery. It was decided to make a start at Halifax on July 15. About 25 industrial centres in the Maritime Provinces will be covered, and the commission will jump to Toronto in order to be there during exhibition week.

Manitoba Elections.

Winnipeg, July 8.—The features of the past couple of days' campaign in Manitoba is the stumping tour of R. A. Bonnar, solicitor of the Grain Growers' Association and Independent candidate in Assiniboia, in the interests of the Liberals.

Bonnar claims that the Government is insincere in its policy of Government ownership of elevators, and at the close of the elections will abandon the scheme. Bonnar has always been a Conservative and was spoken of as a Conservative candidate for Winnipeg at the last Dominion elections. Bonnar says that he was offered a Conservative nomination, but refused.

Last night Hon. Robert Rogers vigorously denied this and said that Bonnar had come to him and offered himself, "body, soul and breeches," provided they would see that he was not defeated in Assiniboia.

Famous Paper Fails.

Boston, July 8.—On petition of the International Paper Co., Judge Colt, in the United States Circuit Court yesterday appointed John M. Morris of New York, an official of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and Charles F. Weed, an attorney of this city, receivers of The Boston Herald Co. Including a bond issue of $1,700,000, the indebtedness is about $2,200,000.

The court authorized the receivers to issue $50,000 in certificates, to enable the business to be continued.

For many years The Boston Herald was one of the best known newspapers in the country. It was established in 1846.

Air Line Will Continue.

Frankfort, July 8.—The directors of the Passenger Airship Co. has decided that the Zeppelin VI., now at Friedrickshafen, be transferred to Baden-Baden, to carry out the program for passenger trips during the summer. A substitute for the destroyed Deutschland will be constructed as quickly as possible.

Regiments Must Recruit.

Kingston, July 8.—Something will be doing next year in military circles if half-strength regiments are brought into Barriefield camp, as they were this year. Commanding officers must get busy and keep their regiments up to strength, or else they may be asked to turn their duties over to others.

Canadians Victorious.

Winnipeg Oarsmen Win Stewards' Cup At Henley.

The Four That Experts Said Broke All the Rules That Made For Good Rowing Easily Beats the Mainzer Crew--Western Metropolis Is Jubiliant and Plans a Big Reception to the Victors.

London, July 8.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the Henley Regatta yesterday, the crew of the Winnipeg Rowing Club defeated the Mayence, Germany, crew in the final for the Stewards' Plate by two lengths. The time was 7 minutes and 52 seconds.

Capt. Riley of the champion crew, in an interview said he was hopeful of a victory all along, and after a rest in England they will go back to Winnipeg with the Stewards' Cup. The foremost English rowers have showered congratulations on the crew.

In the final heat of the Diamond Sculls, Kinnear, Kensington, beat Lucas easily in 8 minutes 51 seconds.

The Pegs won their heat from the Thames' crew yesterday. It was windy and rough, but the westerners shot right to the front, and, taking no chances, won all the way.

At Henley yesterday morning there was much despondency in English rowing circles, arising from the fact that in all races wherein there were foreign entries the foreigners would contest in the finals. In one, viz., the Stewards' Cup, there were no English crew at all, and the home-bred oarsmen were taken to task for not training until 10 days or a fortnight before such an important event as Henley week. Altogether the critics, influenced perhaps by the depressing weather, prepared themselves for the worst. Fortunately, the worst did not happen, as Kinnear of Kensington easily beat Lucas of Germany in the Diamonds' final, and the Leander couple outpaced the Dutch crew for the silver Randolph goblets. In the Stewards' Cup race the English crew had no show, yet easily the next best thing happened, and the Winnipeg four quite outclassed their gigantic German rivals, and victory, at all events, rested within the Empire.

On starting the Canadians struck a stroke of 44 to the Germans 41, and were first to show ahead. Leaving Temple Island, they led by a quarter in the next furlong, but then steered a bit queerly and the Germans caught them at Fawley court, which they reached in three minutes 45 seconds. Just as the Germans were making another spurt the pace told on their number three, Corder, who "cracked" and the Canucks went home with swinging stroke, not in the least distressed, amid as much enthusiasm as the chilled rain bedraggled spectators could achieve.

It is interesting to note that the trophy leave England for the first time.

The press is immensely pleased at Winnipeg's success, pointing out that the race presented many features in addition to it being the first time that the cup will leave England.

The Germans were the heaviest crew that ever rowed in the event, and they previously had an unbesmirched record. Prior to the race they were very optimistic concerning their chances. They were twelve stone in the aggregate heavier than the Canadians. The difference between the crews is perhaps aptly described by the expression "fat" and "fit," but Mayence in form at Henley is certainly able to beat any other crew that entered.

The hearty congratulations which the victors received are consequently all the more cordial and deserved, and the hope is widely expressed that Canada will continue to send crews to Henley, where they may be assured of a warm welcome.

In respect to the criticism of Winnipegg's style, which proved woefully baseless by their crisp, clean action in the race, it is pointed out that instead of 21-inch slides, of which they only used 18 inches, they have a slide of 28 inches and use 24, probably more than any other crew which competed at Henley.

Seventy Thousand Quit Work.

New York, July 8.—Obeying the strike order issued by their leaders, thousands of women cloak and garment workers in this city struck yesterday afternoon for higher wages and improved working conditions. The strike order went into effect at two o'clock, and an hour later it was said at the union headquarters that the call to walk out was being generally observed. The prediction was made that 70,000 operators would have quit work.

New Duration Record.

Bethany Plains, Rheims, July 8.—M. Olieslagers yesterday broke the record for duration and distance at the aviation meeting in progress here. He remained in the air two hours thirty minutes and 39 seconds and covered a distance of 158 35-100 miles. During the speed contest Leon Morane, the French aviator, covered 20 kilometres (12.42 miles) in 12 minutes and 42 seconds.

Increase In Civil List.

Lond. July 8.—The select committee of Parliament to consider the civil list for King George V. recommends a provision of $3,170,000 yearly for the maintenance of the royal family. This is an increase of over $65,000 over the allowance made during the last reign.

Increased Film Fee.

Ottawa, July 8.—The license fee for moving picture shows was increased by the council from $20 to $200 per year. Provision was made that no child under fifteen should be admitted unless accompanied by parents. The chief of police was created censor of the films.

Accident at Barn Raising.

Lindsay, July 8.—At a barn raising on his brother's farm William Haselton, aged about 40, fell from a 30-foot scaffold. He now lies in a critical condition.

HIS WIFE RAN OFF.

Montreal Man Traced Her to Trenton—Shot Her and Her Lover.

Trenton, N.J., July 8—Aristide Cournoyer, a French-Canadian moving picture owner, who lives in Montreal, last night shot his wife, Marie, 32 years of age, and Charles Horn, aged 42 years, with whom she eloped last December. Horn will die, according to the physicians of St. Francis Hospital, where the couple were brought, and but little hope is held for the recovery of the woman. Mrs. Cournoyer is the mother of two boys, aged 8 and 9 years. Horn has a wife and family living in Montreal.

After the shooting Cournoyer declared: "I shot them because they broke up my pretty home. It was an act of justice and mercy. I am satisfied."

Cournoyer tells a pathetic story. He was married about ten years ago, and not until his wife eloped with her paramour last December did he suspect that anyone but he was in her affections.

Coffin Made From Pet Tree.

Muncie, Ind., July 8.—A giant oak tree that had been watched from a sapling 75 years ago to its present size, will encase the body of Cary Fenwick, aged 77. His sons yesterday cut down the great tree that grew in the dooryard of the family homestead, and they are fashioning it into a coffin. Upholsterers will smooth off the roughness of the interior, but the outside and the lid will be of the unfinished wood.

Fenwick, who was a prosperous farmer, had always loved the giant oak, and his will made the request that he be buried in a coffin made from the tree.

Small Boy Drowns.

Toronto, July 8.—Eleven-year-old Louis Howard, 278 Jones avenue, was drowned in a large pond in the Russell brick yards on Blake street at 7.30 last night. Coroner Pickering may hold an inquest.

The lad, with others, was bathing in the pond, which is caused by a spring in a disused clay diggings. When some distance from the end he cried out and sank. The other youngsters shouted for help. J. Lebarr, 436 Jones avenue, drew the body from the water, and with Mrs. Chapman, who lives nearby, worked on the lad, but could not revive him.

Approve Japanese Convention.

St. Petersburg, July 8.—The Nova Vremya, in a leading article, expresses great expectations from the Russo-Japanese convention. The Vremya considers it a foundation for durable peace in the Far East, serving as a barrier against encroachments of outsiders in that sphere. Russo-Japanese neighborly relations will relieve Russia and Japan of the burden of heavy armaments, enabling Russia to complete the Amur Railroad and continue colonization on a vast scale.

Will Pass Declaration Bill.

London, July 8.—In the Commons, Premier Asquith announced that the declaration bill would be passed before the House rose. The nonconformist members of the House, numbering one hundred, decided to present a memorial to Asquith, and to repeat their declaration that they think it sufficient that the King should declare his adherence to Protestantism, not to the Church of England.

Fleecing the Alien.

New York, July 8.—That extortionate fees were demanded of would-be citizens by so-called lawyers, and even by organizations supposedly formed to assist aliens in becoming citizens of the United States, was the purport of testimony given yesterday before a congressional committee.

LOST IN FOG.

Hubert Latham Has Thrilling Experience In Higher Air Levels.

Paris, July 8.—Paulhan's record for the highest flight, 4,250 feet, made at Los Angeles, was beaten yesterday at Bethany Plain, Rheims, by Hubert Latham, who attained a height registered by the barometer on his machine as more than 5,000 feet, and by officials on the ground, who were unable to see the aviator during long periods when he was hidden by clouds, as 1,384 metres (4,540 feet).

Latham announced his intention of reaching 1,500 metres. He made the attempt as the evening fell, rapidly ascending in a gusty wind. Another aviator, M. Morane, went after Latham to contest for a special prize of $1,000.

Morane's ascent was a remarkably quick one. He shot up on his Bleriot monoplane to a height of more than one thousands feet in two and a half minutes, and continued climbing steadily, though more slowly, till he was a tiny spot against the darkening sky. When his barometer showed that he had attained a height of 1,100 metres (3,600 feet) Morane came down in a long sweep.

Latham, meanwhile, continued circling high until he vanished, leaving the spectators without sight of him for fifteen minutes. The rocket announcing the close of the flying was exploded at 7 o'clock, but the sky was still invaded by a daring mortal. Then one man with glassed descried a dark object on the horizon. It was Latham, speeding from the direction of Rheims and gliding earthward like a bird seeking its nest.

On landing near his shed Latham said:

"I came down because I lost my way and all sense of the horizontal. It was all right when I was in the air above the clouds, because, seeing them beneath me, I was able to tell whether my planes were level, but when I got into a fog I had not an idea where the earth lay nor my position in relation to it, so I began to descend, and, emerging from the fog, I found the city of Rheims beneath me."

Another record made at Rheims yesterday was for the longest flight without a stop. This was achieved by M. Olieslagers, a Belgian, who flew 256 kilometres (158 miles) in three hours and twenty minutes. The previous record for an aeroplane flight without a stop was Henry Farman's 234 kilometres.

Olieslagers had a narrow escape from death or injury soon after completing his long flight. While starting a new flight one of the wheels of the machine broke and the aeroplane turned completely over, burying the aviator beneath it. A minute later he emerged, smiling and unscathed.

Disaster In Trail of Fires.

Port Arthur, July 8.—In spite of improved weather conditions, reports are still coming in that bush fires are burning. The total damage will run into hundreds of thousands for this district alone.

From Ombabika, on the line of the National Transcontinental Railway, Chief Fire Ranger Bliss reports the following damage by forest fires: Pembick Contracting Co. at Trout Lake, two camps destroyed, one powder houes with much powder and dynamite. Andersen & Mann, contractors, at Tunnel Lake, two camps burned, team horses suffocated, all supplies burned. Harvey & Bloomfield, contractors, powder house destroyed. Morris & McCaskill, contractors, storehouse and thirty thousand in supplies burned. Nepigon Construction Co., camp burned. At Camp Creek, camps of Simmons and of Murray & Co. destroyed.

Fire rangers in O'Connor and Conmee Townships have also compiled lists of losses by settlers. These number 25, individual losses running as high as $3,000.

Dies From Injuries.

Orillia, July 8.—John McAuley, who was injured in the explosion of the Standard Chemical Works at Longford Mills, died yesterday morning. He was too severely hurt to be taken to the hospital here.

A. G. Peuchen, president of the Standard Chemical Co., interviewed regarding the fire says: "We wish to state that there was no terrific explosion, and that the loss has been only $500 on the building, $700 on the machinery and one small tank of material, valued at less than $500. There was only one man seriously injured, and the rest are getting along nicely."

Try For Northwest Passage.

Montreal, July 8.—The Arctic will not sail until Saturday to allow Hon. L. P. Brodeur to say God speed to the northern adventurer. There is greater significance to the trip than is generally supposed. The Arctic is sailing under sealed orders from the Government. But enough is known to say tha among other things attempted will be the navigating of the northwest passage to find out if this channel from the Atlantic to the Pacific is possible for ships of any size.

First Blood for Strikers.

Montreal, July 8.—The striking masons and bricklayers won first blood yesterday, fifty small contractors having signed a two years' contract with the men, some 500 thus going back to work. The larger contractors declare their intention of holding out.

Will Enforce Act.

Victoria, July 8.—Hon. R. McBride yesterday transmitted the reply of the Government to the Vancouver and Victoria delegations seeking the nonenforcement of the companies' act. The Government declines to interfere with the enforcement of the act.

NAVAL REVIEW AT SPITHEAD

Noel and Elaborate Spectacle. at the Canadian National This Year

While the air is full of tales of nations adding to their fleets, what could make a more appropriate spectacle for this year's Canadian National Exhibition than a grand display of Britain's Naval power. "The Naval Review at Spithead" will do this splendidly. It shows the town with its twinkling lights as a background and the great guardians of the sea sail down in columns. The Royal Yacht comes down through the columns and as it comes the guns of each ship roar out the Royal Salute. It is an entirely novel spectacle and one not only calculated to compel the admiration of every spectator but to rouse the patriotism of every Briton.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Those indefatigable workers in the interest of the young men, and the building of a Y.M.C.A., which will be a credit to the citizens, are out to-day and to-morrow, to make that Big Clock strike $30,000 by Sunday. Help them, citizens, help them!

Hard blows were exchanged at beautiful Reno,

Important events are occurring daily. Joe Martin sailed for Canada on the 6th July, but before doing so he wrote a letter to the Morning Chronicle charging "the Asquith Ministry with making terms with the Opposition, which means that the Government will be kept in office and power by the connivance of the Tories for the rest of the natural life of this Parliament." Asquith must be trembling in his boots.

The Right Hon. John Burns, Labor Minister in the Asquith Ministry, has lost the confidence of the Suffragettes in England. Lady Frances Balfour denounces him thus: "We have one arch enemy. That enemy is John Burns, and although he is a personal friend of my own, in matters that concern our society, he is one of the most dangerous and revolutionary of the ministers. He is one of that vicious class of men who are always trying to do good to women."

The people in Charlestown, Mississippi celebrated the declaration in the U. S. Constitution that all men are free and equal by joyfully hanging two fellow citizens without trial, and with no little brutality. These free and equal people are of the Laurier type of politicians, all profession but no practice.

Mayor McCarthy, of San Francisco, in a statement regarding the moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight, said:—"Since prize-fighting is prohibited by law in the State of California, photographic reproductions of such contests would in my opinion be equally unlawful. I shall, therefore, prevent any pictures of the fight being exhibited in this city." The Mayor is right.

It has been intimated that the Ontario Government would issue an order prohibiting an exhibition of a like character in Ontario. Let them do so. Such brutality should not be countenanced.

United States finances for 1910 show a surplus of $9,409,000 over ordinary revenue. The outlay in the construction of the Panama Canal, if the $34,000,000 spent on that work were added to ordinary expenditure it would show a deficit of over $25,000,000 for the year. The receipts from all sources this year amount to $669,064,000, as against $603,500,000 last year. In other words, receipts have increased about $66,500,000, while the change from last year's deficit to the surplus of this year is about that amount.

Celebrated Their Wedding Anniversary.

On the 7th of July, in the year 1890, Mr. and Mrs. John Neate of this city, were united in marriage, and yesterday they commemorated the 20th anniversary of that event. A number of invited friends last evening assembled at their residence on Cedar street to unite with them in celebrating the anniversary. A number of tables tastefully decorated with flags and flowers and laden with good things, were placed upon the lawn, and it is needless to say that full justice was done. After supper a few brief addresses of a congratulatory nature were given and those present enjoyed themselves with games etc. Mrs. Neate was the recipient of many useful and beautiful gifts, including a Limoges China set. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Neate unite with The Intelligencer in wishing for them many more years of happy and prosperous wedded life.

The Y. M. C. A. clock is certainly not at a stand still, as every day sees the hands moving towards the $40,000 mark. At the luncheon at noon to-day there was a representative gathering and considerable enthusiasm was manifested. Magrath, of Edmonton, wishing every success to the undertaking and a subscription for $100. Cheers were given for the donor. Master Ernest Graham reported that of the 100 one dollar subscriptions he had pledged to secure he had obtained $46. The young and successful canvasser was loudly applauded in making his report. The $10,000 Judgeships

The Liberal Press is jubilent over the emphatic denial of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the charge made by the Hon. Robt. Rodgers, of Manitoba that judgesips were offered for $10,000 apiece to provide a campaign fund against the Roblin Government in Manitoba. In a statement to the press Sir Wilfrid said that ordinarily remarks of the kind from such sources would pass unnoticed, but this matter is too serious to be so treated. The Premier added that he did not believe there was a shadow of foundation for the story, and so far as the Government is concerned he gives it the most complete denial. A judge who would give a cent to secure such a position, he says, would not be worthy of filling it, and if such fact were established his commission would be revoked.

In the Premier's views that an applicant for a judgeship who would even suggest a monetary conisderation for the position would be unworthy of such an honor, every man having the least idea of right and wrong will concur. Sir John's Macdonald's declaration was much stronger, He declared that the Lawyer who applied for a seat on the Bench was evidence that he was unworthy of it. That the position should seek the man, not the man the position.

Sir Wilfrid's indignant denial of the Government's complicity in such a transaction, was altogether uncalled for unless it was deemed necessary to assume indignation to satisfy the unsophisticated. It is not at all likely that the political manipulators, who do the grafting work of the Liberal party, would go to the Premier and inform him of what he was promising in order to raise funds for election purposes. That is not the way the end aimed at, raising money for election purposes, is done.

There is no evidence, nor is it alleged that Mr. Rodgers charged the Government, as such, with offering to sell judgeships at $10,000 a piece, hence there was no necessity for the Premier, denying that his Government was a party to such a nefarious transaction, except it were done to satisfy the unsophisticated in political jugglery. What Mr. Rodgers is charged with saying is that Judgeships were offered for $10,000 apiece. If the statement was ever made, it is the duty of Mr. Rodgers to give the facts to the public in order to enable the public to show its disapproval of such nefarious transactions.

It is just possible that no such charge was ever made, Mr. Rodgers is not a favorite of the Liberals, and is often grossly misrepresented. If he made the charge we venture the opinion that he had ample reason for doing so. If he has grounds for making the statement, and if made, we doubt not he has, let him push it to the fullest extent. There should be no let up or delay in driving such villany home.

◆ ◆ ◆

Further develouments in this $10,000 job show that the Hon. Mr. Rodgers neither charged the Government with making the offer of a judgeship for $10,000 for election purposes, nor did he originate the scandal. What he did was to repeat what a Liberal had laid at the door of the most corrupt lot of politicians that ever governed or ruled a country.

Here are the facts: The charge that a price is asked for appointments to the bench is not made by a Conservative public man. It is from a Liberal source that the accusation comes. There was a vacancy last year in the Court of King's Bench in Manitoba, and County Judge Prudhomme wished to be appointed to the position.

The judge was not approached. But his brother, one of the old-time Liberal,s asserts that he was made the subject of an offer. A contribution of $10,000 to the campaign fund of the Liberal party, he alleges, would have resulted in the exercise of influence to secure the elevation of his brother Judge Prudhomme to the higher court. The appointment of Judge Prudhomme would have vacated a county judgeship. Mr. Prudhomme says he can prove that a Winnipeg barrister could have got this position for $3,000 had it become vacant.

The explanation of the Winnipeg Liberals of this buying and selling of Judgeships is that the Prudhomme who peached on his fellow Liberals, was disappointed in not securing a place for himself. He gratified his revenge on the party by letting a little light into the transaction of the "Rake-off-grafting" lot now in power.

Would it not be honest for Sir Wilfrid, who displayed so much indignation at Rodgers, to turn his attention to his Liberal friend who made the charge? And for the Globe to transfer its venomous remarks against Rodgers to Prudhomme, and to apologize to the former? Neither are honest enough, politically, to do so.

Sir Wilfrid cannot have forgotten the Langelier deal, in which he (Sir Wilfrid) recouped the Hon. Frs. Langelier for the debt he incurred in mortgaging his property to raise money for election purposes in 1896, by giving him a Judgeship. Why then so much simulated indignation at the $10,000 proposition in Manitoba: It is too transparent to deceive any one.

A return of torrid weather has dried wheat lands out again and the concensus of opinion is that while a few drops of rain will yield well the season will go on record as a most fickle and disappointing one.

Y. M. C. A Campaign Notes.

On Thursday the writer was invited to the Y. M. C. A. Rooms at 12.15 to eat and listen, and both propositions proved most enjoyable, with a slight emphasis on proposition No. 1.

Had an idea raising forty thousand was quite an undertaking until I met this aggregation of canvasers, but I honestly believe they could collect money to start another Post Office.

To listen to the captains o the different teams report collecting five, six and seven hundred dollars in a few hours, sounds like we were living in the Klondike.

The ease with which the collectors get money is like chloroforming the baby and robbing its toy bank.

Have you given your hundred dollars yet. They'll soon have all they need of that figure, then you won't be able to get yours accepted. "Do it now."

There is not one of these collectors who has any heart trouble to speak of, You could go up to any of them with a marked check for two hundred or so without any danger of the shock proving fatal.

It is an inspiraion to see fifty of the brightest business and professional men of the city so thoroughly interested in this Y. M. C. A. building movement. It argues for only one result. "SUCCESS."

D. V. Sinclair was taking the full current 400 volts right off the main wire of the Trenton Electric plant. He was acting as a sort of transformer, and in his spirited address charged the team captains and their assistants right up to a hundred and ten volts each, which put them in proper working order for the next 24 hours. It needs a 60 horse power man in a deal of such large proportions and that's the sort of a man D. V. is.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

My Double

A Girl Graduate Sees Herself In Another Body on Three Occasions.

By DONALD WALLACE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

I remember well the night I received my first shock. I received another later that affected me more than this one, but in a different way. The first was in the nature of a surprise; the second was a terror.

I was but eighteen at the time and was going home to my aunt, with whom I lived, having just finished my education. The journey was a long one, and I had somewhat broken down my nerves from hard study. I did not like to stay overnight at a hotel alone, but did not feel like taking a sleeping car. I was rather a timid girl anyway and had not been used to going about without a protector.

I reached the hotel about 9 o'clock and went immediately to bed and to sleep. I was awakened in the night by a noise in the hall. Several persons passed hurriedly and were talking rapidly. I have always been afraid of fire, especially in a hotel. I got out of bed, went to the door and opened it. At that moment I received my first shock.

Standing in the open door of the room directly opposite mine stood a girl in her nightdress peering out anxiously, just as I was doing. The corridor was lighted, and I could see her plainly. The marvelous feature was that she was myself. There was not the slightest difference between us. We were both in nightdresses, the hair of both was worn in a braid hanging down the back, and her face and figure were replicas of mine.

Both gave a little scream of surprise, and both drew back into our respective rooms. I shut my door and groped my way to my bed. All thought of danger was put out of my head in this remarkable apparition of my other self.

The physician in charge of the seminary I had attended had warned me that if I did not give up study I would break down. But, desirous of being graduated with the class as well as at the head of it, I had disregarded his warning. Now, it seemed to me, I was paying the penalty of my obstinacy. My mind must be giving way. It was long past midnight when I bethought myself that on opening my door I must have looked into a large mirror. I would have got out of bed and satisfied myself of this, but feared to find the contrary, and if I did I would not get any more sleep. So I comforted myself with the assurance that I would in the morning find a mirror opposite my door and dropped into slumber.

I was called early for the train, and when I left my room looked for the mirror. Alas, there was no mirror there, but a door just as I had seen it in the night. I had no time to make investigations, needing to go down to breakfast and to the station.

By the advice of my physician I spent July and August that summer at the seashore. By September I was much improved and spent the month in the mountains. This restored my health, but did not relieve me of an uncanny feeling at having seen myself or my other self at the hotel during my homeward journey. Two years passed during which I had gradually driven the matter out of my mind when I saw the vision again.

Singularly enough, I saw it under circumstances somewhat similar to those connected with its first appearance. It was the second summer after the one during which it had first appeared to me, when I was at —— Springs. I had a room in an extension of a hotel, facing another extension. One morning on arising I went to a window, and there at another window in the other extension stood my double. We were both, as before, in nightdresses and wore our hair plaited on our backs.

Nothing could have induced me to remain at that hotel for another day. I was with friends and surprised them by announcing that I would leave by the next train. They wondered, expostulated, pleaded, but to no purpose. One of them, a girl of my own age, with whom I was very intimate, begged me to tell her why I was leaving and what was the matter with me, for it was plain that I had received a shock of some kind. I would not have told her for the world. I declined to tell any one but my physician, and I wished to consult him as soon as possible. I was sure that I suffered from some kind of mental breakdown, and I only hoped that he would find means to arrest its progress.

On reaching the city I sent for him to come to me at once and told him of this second vision of myself. He tried to reassure me by telling me that I had seen some one who looked very like me. I refused to be comforted. I had seen myself or my exact counterpart. I told him that only one of my own flesh and blood could so closely resemble me and that I had no sister or even cousins so far as I knew. Besides, if this vision were a real person I would see her in a different dress from my own. The doctor explained this by saying that as I had seen her at night and in the early morning I would naturally see her in the dress I wore myself, both of us wearing nightgowns. I tried to consider this within the limit of coincidence, but it was impossible for me to believe that two persons could be so identical in appearance that they should meet twice and both times see each other in a nightdress. No; I had seen this vision first at a time when my physician had warned me that I was breaking down. I had been overstrained. What had I been straining? My mind; therefore it was my mind that had been giving way. This reappearance of the vision would naturally denote that my mind was again giving way. I shuddered. I saw myself confined in a lunatic asylum, a mental wreck.

My friends to whom my malady became known used every argument to disabuse my mind, some of them assuring me that my vision was a real person closely resembling me. Others averred that people in a disordered state of the system were liable to see all sorts of things. A theosophist declared that I had seen my spiritual self at moments when it had been lifted out of my bodily self. To this person I replied that when I had seen the vision I was very well fixed in my own body. I consulted two specialists in brain diseases, one of whom told me a great deal about the cerebrum, the cerebellum, the dura mater and other substances of which the brain is composed and their reciprocal relations, nothing of which I understood. The other told me that I was myself producing an image of myself. He admitted that the first vision might have been caused by a disordered system. His advice was for me to drive the matter out of my mind. Occupation and amusement would assist me to do this.

Young Dr. Penrose did more to reassure me than any one else. While he did not claim to explain my trouble, he told me that it was of no importance. He pronounced me in excellent health and assured me that a time would come when I would look back on my fears as entirely uncalled for. It was not so much his words that reassured me as his personality. He had such a cheerful and at the same time sympathetic manner. He evidently believed what he told me. Since he was the only person who could reassure me I made frequent visits to his office and found every excuse to call for him to come to my home. The result was a love affair. Whether his reassurances affected me because the little god had from the first wounded me or whether I loved him because he gave me comfort no one else could give I don't know.

I engaged myself to Dr. Penrose in the spring, and that autumn I came of age. I knew I was to be paid some money when I was twenty-one which had been in the hands of a trust company. Whether it had been left me by my father or my mother I did not know. I had no remembrance of either of my parents. I had lived with my aunt ever since I could remember anything and had understood from her that both my father and my mother had died when I was very young. I had arranged to be married as soon after I came of age as I could get possession of my property. My fiance was a struggling physician, with nothing but his income from his practice, and we needed my inheritance.

A few days before I was twenty-one I was notified by the trust company that any time I would call on or after that date, prepared to sign receipts, my property would be turned over to me, but they would like me to name a day and hour I would be there that they could have present such persons as might be necessary. I replied that I would call at the bank at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the day I came of age.

I had come to rely on Dr. Penrose for matters of importance, and as we were to be married within a few weeks after getting possession of my fortune I asked him to accompany me to the bank and see that nothing was done that should not be done. On the day appointed we went together to the trust company, were received by one of the officers connected with it and shown into a room where we were asked to wait a few minutes. Presently we were ushered into an apartment in the center of which was a long table. There, standing on the opposite side of the table, was the apparition I had seen twice before. I staggered. Dr. Penrose caught me and steadied me.

"My double!" I moaned, shutting out the apparition.

The doctor saw what I saw—a girl the exact image of myself, but dressed differently.

"Good!" he cried. "If that is your double you have been frightened at a real person."

A gentleman present said:

"I am told that you two young ladies need to be introduced. You are twin sisters and inherit share and share alike in the estate of Wilbur Langford, both being his daughters and heirs."

My sister on seeing me had shown the same evidence of shock as myself. We looked at each other for some moments; then both started with one accord around the table and met in an embrace.

Of that domestic trouble which separated our parents, one taking my sister, the other myself, of their subsequent early death—our mother of a broken heart—it is not necessary that I should give an account here. My sister and myself having been brought up separately, the trustees were instructed to bring us together when we came of age and received our inheritance.

It was some time before my twin and myself could be torn apart in order that we might sign papers spread out on the table to receive our signatures. The business having been finished, we left the bank with our arms about each other's waist, telling of out experiences after our two former meetings. She, too, had suffered, but nothing like myself, since she felt sure I was a real person.

At my wedding my only attendant was my sister.

THE TERRIBLE BATHOLITE.

Molten Rock That Bores Upward Through the Earth's Crust.

Batholite is a term invented by the great German geologist Eduard Suess to describe the gigantic intrusions of molten rock which, according to him, bore their way upward through the crust of the earth from the "eternal depths" below, cutting through the strata and folds of the mountains very much as a white hot soldering iron may be thrust through a plank, burning its way across the grain of the wood as if it were cheese.

These batholites lurk deep in the earth, where the temperature is thousands of degrees, and gradually melt their way to the surface above them. Generally they issue in the form of tremendous domes of hot rock, towering up to mountain heights and often giving birth to volcanoes. When a batholite, as sometimes happens, does not reach the surface its roof opens in a network of fissures, lava pours out and a whole group of volcanoes appears at that point.

Suess has recognized the remains of many cooled batholites on various parts of the earth's surface, and he says that the consolidated crust of the earth, even at the present day, may be exposed to these mighty intrusions from below. The batholites bring up with them many metals from the interior of the planet, and rich mines are often opened in the dikes that are thus formed.

Suess describes the rock about Boulder, Colo., as an ancient batholite, which covers 5,000 square kilometers of surface. But there are others still more prodigious in extent.

Sometimes they have been worn down nearly to the general level, but near Elkhorn the old batholite yet towers up to an elevation of 9,000 feet above the sea. The diamond dikes of South Africa have thus been thrust up from the profound depths of the earth, where there exists a laboratory of nature in which she performs what seem miracles to the petty inhabitants of the planet's surface.

The face of the moon shows us most clearly what batholites are capable of. The vast circular plains ringed with steep mountains, which make its surface so marvelous to look upon with a telescope, have, according to this view, been formed by intrusions of colossal batholites, and Suess calls them by the startling name of "smelting furnaces"—furnaces thousands of square miles in extent—in which the frame of that little world has been melted and dissolved like a snow bank lying in the path of a flow of molten iron.

And if we could remove the sedimentary accumulations of ages from the face of our world, says this astonishing German savant, we might find now hidden under our feet a network of the seared skeletons of ancient batholites, grander than any on the moon!—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

HIS ACCOMPLICE.

The Obliging Old Lady Who Helped the Struggling Boy.

When a kind old lady in walking along a north side residence street beheld a small boy struggling vainly to reach something between the gratings of a tall iron fence surrounding a palatial residence she paused to watch his operations. The object of his quest she discovered to be a handsome mechanical toy, an automobile that would run when wound up. The boy had a stick with which he was trying to pull the machine toward him, but as he could scarcely reach it the struggle was well nigh hopeless.

"Let me try it," said the old lady. "My arm is longer than yours."

"All right," replied the youngster, relinquishing the stick.

Getting down on her knees, the old lady, by dint of much stretching and careful manipulation, gradually worked the machine toward the fence and at last had the satisfaction of seeing the little boy grasp it with eager fingers.

"Now," she said, "you must be more careful and not let it get away from you again."

"Gee," said the boy, "it never got away from me, an' it ain't goin' to neither."

"Wh-wh-why," faltered the old lady, with the dawning of a horrible suspicion, "isn't it yours?"

"You bet it's mine now," said the kid, and away he scampered, leaving the good old lady alone with her conscience.—Atlanta Constitution.

Private Property.

"If I had a dollar for every time a barber has asked me if I wanted that mole removed," remarked a man the other day after he left a tonsorial shop and was drawing his hand across a smooth shaven face, "I would go down to the office in the morning and tell the company to give my job to some one who really needed money, and then I would start on a long trip and just enjoy myself the rest of my days. Every time I strike a new barber he asks me if I want him to remove that mole, and I tell him I do not. As a rule, I can train a barber in four lessons not to ask the question, but a man can't always get the same lather peddler in a shop, and the question continues to come at me. As a matter of fact, I need that mole. If I wanted it removed I would not expect a barber to do it anyway. Why can't barbers refrain from asking the question? It isn't their mole. It's my mole. It's always been mine too."—Detroit News.

The Broken Trust

though I had left him yesterday. This is not the man, Captain Chandos."

And the same words that coming from Edith's lips had so strange and ghastly a sound came from his:

"Where is Alan Wayne?"

They frightened him, brave soldier as he was. While the usurper triumphed in his money, while they seemed fighting with the shadow of truth, where was he—the true heir of Carsdale?

Vivian's face grew white with emotion. Could wrong have been done to him?

"My daughter," said Paul, proud of Edith's wisdom, "advises caution, and that for the present Sir Alan should be kept in profound ignorance, even of our suspicions."

"Miss Westerne is right. I think the best person we can consult would be Mr. Grey, of the firm of Morton & Grey, the solicitors. Mr. Grey had the whole management of the Carsdale property, and would take more interest in it than any one else. Perhaps, Mr. Westerne, you will be good enough to meet him here—say, to-morrow at noon—and we can decide upon further steps then. There is no need for me to express my gratitude for your frankness and honesty."

"I should like to say one word," said Paul, with trembling lips. "He, Sir Alan, has been very kind to me. You will be merciful, Captain Chandos if he is guilty?"

"As I hope for mercy myself," replied the captain. There is a great difference between justice and vengeance!"

They rose then to go; there were few words exchanged, but, in some vague way, each felt the bond between them was for life.

They passed out into the quiet night and Vivian was left alone with his own thoughts.

They surged through his brain so quickly that he could not master them. Content to lose Blanche he had never been, but he had thought little of Carsdale. What if the strange story he had just heard were true, and Carsdale his? What if, instead of being a poor captain, he was Sir Vivian Ansley—the large rent rolls of Carsdale his?

The wealth did not touch him—it would be comfortable and pleasant, he thought, and it would give him Blanche.

He knew Lord Damar liked him, and that the only objection to him was his poverty. Suppose this tale were true? Why, Blanche would be his own. No more days of wretched suspense or nights of agony! She would be his own, and he could atone to her for all she had suffered. It was no wonder the idea half maddened him. Since he left her, standing under the bare, wintry trees, the man's life had been one long pain.

He sprang from his seat with a smothered cry as he remembered that once married to Sir Alan, Blanche could never be his, and the discovery of the truth would avail but little.

He went to his writing table and quickly dispatched a letter to Lord Damar.

My dear Lord Damar (so ran the letter):—I write in the greatest haste and in the strictest confidence, begging you not to allow any marriage to take place between your daughter and Sir Alan until you hear further from me. I charge you most solemnly, remember this. I will explain more fully in a few days. Until then, trust me and keep silence.

Which letter caused that most amiable gentleman so much annoyance he could scarcely be civil to anybody.

CHAPTER XXXI.

An Unexpected Meeting.

Beyond a few unpleasant dreams and the attendance of the skeleton that day and night kept by his side, nothing ailed Sir Aynsley.

He was in the full tide of prosperity and good fortune; his political negotiations had been so wisely conducted that he was sure of being returned for the borough of Oulston. Carsdale was almost ready, and he had nearly won from Lady Blanche a promise that if the election ended favorably for him, she would crown his happiness by an early marriage.

"It has to be," the unhappy girl thought to herself. "People do not usually linger in sight of the scaffold or the rack, when they have to suffer thereon. Why should I live in suspense? The day has to come, so let it come quickly."

So, when Sir Alan wrote passionate imploring letters, she replied coldly he had better arrange the time for their marriage with her father. His dark face flushed with triumph as he read; the prize so longed for seemed within his grasp.

There was nothing much to trouble him but the fear of Esther. He had felt slightly uncomfortable that morning in the artist's studio. He wished he could have answered Mr. Westerne's questions; but of danger from the artist and his daughter he never even dreamed.

The month during which Esther had promised to keep silent was drawing to a close. What would she do at its end—denounce him, or accept his terms? Even did he love her still, had he never seen Lady Blanche, he would not have married Esther; he would never have submitted to live under the thralldom of a woman who held such a secret over his head.

He thought he could be able to purchase her silence—gold can do much.

On the very morning when Paul Westerne had appointed to meet Mr. Grey, Sir Alan went to the artist's house. It so happened Esther Bruce went that same morning by arrangement for a lesson, and the two who were once all the world to each other met at the step of the door.

Despite his nonchalant coolness, Sir Alan's face grew white and stern as he saw her.

"Esther," he said quickly, "are you in league with these people? Do you want help in hunting me down?"

There can be no sorrow greater than that which shone in the girl's eyes as she raised them to his.

"These people are your friends, Paul, she said, gravely.

"Have they said nothing of me?" he asked. "Have they not told you all about me?"

"Miss Westerne asked me one day if I knew Sir Alan Aynsley, and I told her, honestly, 'No!'" replied Esther.

(To be continued.))

Church and Clergy.

The gospel is preached in thirty different languages in the United States.

At a church in England a clergyman told the congregation that, while he had not personally witnessed it, he had been told that card playing had taken place during service.

Bishop Charles E. Cheney of the Reformed Episcopal church, now in his seventy-fifth year, preached a sermon in Christ church of that denomination in Chicago on the fiftieth anniversary of his rectorship.

At a meeting of the Rodelph Sholem congregation in Pittsburg Rabbi Leonard J. Levy was elected pastor for life at an annual salary of $15,000. He is to receive a $5,000 yearly pension if he should wish to retire after reaching the age of seventy-five, and the same amount is to be paid to Mrs. Levy in the event of her husband's death.

Science Siftings.

Experiments with ultra violet light appear to show that it is more effective for sterilizing liquids than ozone.

A carload of radium, Edison says, would have as much energy as all the millions of tons of coal mined in the United States in a year.

A French scientist says the rays from incandescent lights are beneficial to human health, destroying bacteria, stimulating circulation and cellular activity and reducing pain.

Recent experiments have proved conclusively that coal dust which has been ground to a state so fine that it will pass a 200 mesh sieve will explode from contact with either a naked flame or with the arc of an electric current.

Tales of Cities.

Fifteen Londoners are born every hour and nine die, the total excess of births over deaths a year being about 55,000.

New York city manufactures more fur goods than all of the other cities of the country together. It keeps about 9,000 persons employed in the industry, and its output for the last year is valued at $41,400,000.

That part of St. Petersburg which drinks unfiltered water is less affected by cholera and typhoid fever than the parts of the town in which filtered water is used, the reason being that the filters themselves have become contaminated.

Recent Inventions.

A recently invented rescue stretcher for miners has oxygen tanks at one end opening into a bag into which a man's head and shoulders may be placed.

On the principle of the slide trombone is a gas fixture invented by an Indiana man, so constructed that the burner may be slid to any point along the wall of a room where the light is most needed.

A New Jersey farmer has patented a cover for milking pails that admits the milk through a strainer covered with a cloth which may be removed for cleansing and which even keeps impure air from entering the pail.

THE TEMPLE BELL.

A Mysterious Disappearance and the Explanation.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Hedges and I toiled up the dry bed of Furnace creek and left Death valley.

"Hark!" said Hedges in a strange voice.

Across the hidden jagged ranges came a sweet musical echo. It was repeated again and yet again to my astounded ears.

"It's a bell," I almost screamed at him, "a bell here—a church bell in Death valley!"

With a choking cry Hedges melted from my side. I heard the stamping of his mule and then the sharp clatter of small hoofs among the stones.

"Come on!" he shouted back at me. "Once in India I heard it and"— His voice died away in the darkness, and when the sound of hoofs ceased altogether I was left alone with the intermittent sound of the bell.

I stood listening, listening, until at last my feet moved toward that spot in the gloom where my burro was picketed. I felt for and found the remaining bag of ore which Hedges had left to my share, and I flung it across the back of the beast with eager hands.

A great clearness was in my mind, and in my heart was a yearning pity for the poor—the poor of the world, at whose feet I longed to pour my sack of gold—and I hastened forward eager to give all that I had to charity.

The bell rang softly as I approached, and every chime fell straight on my pitying heart. A faint red glow was reflected on the rocks ahead, and around the bend of a huge bowlder I came upon the temple in the wilderness.

The red light came from the sanctuary lamp hanging within the tiny building. It tinged the gray rocks with a strange, unearthly coloring and gave to the white walls of the temple a delicate rosiness.

My knife ripped a hole in the canvas sack, and then, staggering because of its great weight, I lifted the gold and poured the precious lumps into the alms basin.

HIS GRAY HEAD BENT ABOVE SOME FRAGMENTS OF GREENISH METAL.

As the last lump of ore clanked into the basin the clearness in my head seemed to snap as if some one had struck me a sharp blow. I felt myself sinking, sinking to the marble floor. It seemed years before I felt its cooling touch on my cheek, and then all was dark.

* * * * * * *

When I awoke stars were shining out of a black sky, and I heard a hoarse whinny from the burro near by. I was lying on my back, and my temples throbbed dully.

The white temple had disappeared. My eager search among the rocks was unavailing.

Thus I found myself a beggar at the gate of Death valley.

I knew that Furnace Creek ranch was somewhere—it must be near, and without food and with only a small canteen of water I set forth on a journey that I knew must end in death.

The next day I met Hedges. He was riding slowly toward me with eyes fixed on the ground. Behind him trailed a pack mule. His bag of ore had disappeared.

"Medford!" he almost sobbed as I trudged painfully into view. He slipped from his mule and ran toward me with outstretched hands. "What is the matter, old man? Why didn't you follow me that night? I had to go. You see, I had heard the bell before!"

I stared at him from hopeless eyes, and he read the truth.

"You didn't—you followed the bell?" he stammered.

"Yes," I said thickly.

"And your gold—the ore?"

"I gave it—gave it to the poor of the world," I said bitterly. "I had to do it."

He nodded understandingly. "I will tell you my experience, Peter, after you have eaten. I have food here and materials for a fire. I will make some coffee."

"Where have you been?" I asked.

"I found the ranch. I left my sack there and loaded with food to return for you. Don't say another word until you have rested."

Late in the afternoon when the sun was drawing down behind the dark range Hedges told his story:

"Five years ago, before I met you, Medford, I traveled for a large dealer in precious stones. I went to Calcutta on the track of a pair of magnificent pigeon blood rubies, the property of a gambling maharajah, who was hard pressed by his creditors.

"These I bought, together with several other splendid stones, the combined value of which was $200,000.

"I walked into Calcutta from the maharajah's palace just as dusk was falling. Perhaps the pressure of my revolver against my breast gave me assurance, for it is a dark and lonely road, but there was a fascination in watching the dying of the red glowing Indian sunset and the coming of the velvet black darkness jeweled above with stars and pointed here and there with gleaming lights from scattered dwellings.

"I was crossing a bleak stretch of wild ground, rank with parched grass and weeds, when I first heard the temple bell—the same bell that you heard last night and from which I ran away.

"It seemed as if all the poor downtrodden, plague stricken natives of India called appealingly for alms. It mattered little that the jewels were not my own. I tore them from my belt with feverish impatience and threw them into the alms basin, and they disappeared. Then something happened, and I went down, down!

"When I regained consciousness I was still lying in the parched grass, and a pariah dog was licking my face. The stars shone overhead, but the temple was gone—marble walls and floor, luring bell—all gone!" Hedges buried his head in his hands and was very still.

"And what did you do?" I asked after a long silence.

"I raved like a madman," returned Hedges, lifting his head fiercely. "I ran into the city and found a man whom I knew, and he put great forces to work and discovered nothing. No one had seen or heard of such a temple, and they believed I had been drinking and been set upon by robbers.

"I would be breaking stone now if I had not had a rich relative who lent me the fortune to replace the stolen gems. I am repaying him now."

"Of course I am ruined," I said.

"Half of what I have is yours, Peter, and you can pay me back," he said quickly.

I held up my hand. "I couldn't, Hedges. You know I am grateful. I am engaged to marry Ethel Lambert, as you are aware. I have nothing but my profession, no capital whatever, and I made this journey down into hades for the gold to get a start. I have lost it and must begin again. I cannot ask her to wait much longer, and the professor"—

"Is Professor Lambert a stiff on money?" demanded Hedges. "I thought him quite the other way, you know."

"He isn't a bit mercenary," I said hastily, "only I haven't got the face to take Ethel from her luxurious home into the poor quarters I can now afford, and so"—

"So you'll both be miserable forever after," interrupted Hedges dryly. "Let's go back to San Francisco and see Professor Lambert before you do anything desperate."

We resumed our journey the next day and several weeks afterward found me dressed once more in civilized garments, shaven and shorn, ringing the professor's doorbell. I did not ask for Ethel, though my eyes were aching to see her, and so I was taken through the house and into the long passageway that led to the laboratory.

Professor Lambert was a metallurgist. I found his gray head bent above some fragments of greenish metal on the table.

When he had warmly greeted me I told my unlikely story, knowing it was scarcely credible, yet when I had concluded the professor took me by the hand and led me into a back room.

Then he told me the story of how he had experimented with bell tones, hoping to carry out a theory of his own that some day he might produce a bell whose tones might find a response in human hearts. He hoped to attain a pitch of tone whose vibration might strike a chord of human sympathy in every heart, that the hearing of it might promote good fellowship and love and end in universal peace—a very pretty theory.

The one casting he had made had resulted in producing that strange bell whose call was to sacrifice, to give all in response to its command. Startled at the production and still uncertain as to its value, he was shocked to awake one morning and find that his assistant had disappeared and with him the bell.

Secretly he had pursued the man. His agents had trailed the thief from country to country, and even after I had fallen senseless in the little chapel and had been thrown into outer darkness by the adventurer the detectives had fallen upon the temple and carried it and the thief triumphantly to San Francisco and justice.

A train of burros carried the stage setting from place to place. Wherever men walked in solitary places with gold or silver or precious stones the temple might be found.

"Your gold ore is in that sack in the corner," concluded the professor, with a smile. "And now suppose you go down and see Ethel."

Eager as I was to meet my sweetheart, I waited long enough to telephone the strange story to Hedges, patiently waiting in the hotel to share his golden store with me, before I went to claim my happiness.

She Tried to Fascinate Hubby and Was Rudely Shocked.

She had been reading that a titled Englishwoman advises married women to flirt with their husbands. As she finished the article her husband came home to dinner.

She ran to meet him.

"A little late tonight, duckydooselum," she said, with a dimpling smile.

"What's that?" he growled.

She looked at him archly.

"Don't you dare to kiss me!" she tittered.

"Gee," he cried, "I don't intend to! What put that in your head?"

She half closed her eyes and coyly surveyed him through the drooping lashes.

"Don't you want to sit here by me on the sofa?" she cooed.

"No, I don't. Why, you told me only yesterday that the springs were getting weak. Aren't you feeling well?"

She laughed softly and shot him a side glance and drew in her cheeks and flashed her white teeth and perceptibly winked.

He drew back suddenly.

"What's the matter with you?" he demanded. "Who are you imitating? Can't you make your face behave?"

She picked up the paper she had been reading and flung it into the decorated wastebasket.

"There's nothing the matter with me," she coldly replied.

"Just mugging for fun, eh? Glad of that. Stimson was telling me today about a lot of trouble his wife is having with her facial nerves, and I was afraid you'd caught it. Ain't that confounded dinner ready?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not the Fish He Caught.

"Say," said Baitman as he passed the fish dealer's stand, "send up a couple of nice bass to the house tomorrow."

"All right, sir," answered the dealer.

"And be sure they are bass," continued Baitman. "You see, I'm going —er—out—of town for the day, and—er—the last time I went I told my wife I was going trout fishing, and you sent up a salt mackerel. Another error like that on your part and there will be strained relations in my family. See?"

Must Finish the Game.

In a small country town there once lived a couple of young fellows who had gone into partnership in a barber's business, and in order to pass the time one particularly dull afternoon Tom proposed to Dick that they indulge in a quiet game of "nap." The quiet game went on hour after hour, and when the shades of night had fallen for some time neither of them noticed that a customer had entered. He survey them in silent contempt for some few minutes.

"Sorry if I interrupt," he said, acidly, at last, "but I'm in a hurry. Which of you fervid sportsmen is going to shave me?"

Tom looked over the hand which had just been dealt him. Then, in a voice full of suppressed excitement, he said:

"Just one moment, sir. Wait until we see who owns this shop?"

GOT THE EGGS FRESH

They Were Turtle Eggs and Agassiz Wanted Them.

A WILD RACE AGAINST TIME.

The Professor Had to Have the Eggs Before They Were Three Hours Old, and This Is the Story of How the Hunter Made Good His Promise.

When Professor Louis Agassiz was writing a book on the turtles of the United States it became necessary for him to have some fresh turtle eggs. He engaged Mr. Jenks of Middleboro, about forty miles from Cambridge, to get them for him. Mr. Jenks promised that the eggs should be in Agassiz's hands before they were three hours old. Mr. Jenks, who told the tale to a writer in the Atlantic Monthly, had to wait by a certain pond for the turtles to come out and lay their eggs in the sand. Finally, after weeks of waiting, one morning about 4 o'clock a turtle crawled up the beach, partly buried herself in the soft sand and laid her eggs. Mr. Jenks went on to say:

As she did so the distant clock struck 4. There was no train till after 9, and the eggs must be in Cambridge in three hours.

I laid the eggs on a bed of sand in the bottom of my pail, filled in between them with more sand, so with another layer to the rim, and, covering all over smoothly with more sand, I ran back for my horse. He knew as well as I that the turtle had laid and that he was to get those eggs to Agassiz.

I let him out. I shouted to him, holding to the dasher with one hand, the pail of eggs with the other, not daring to get off my knees, although the bang on them as we pounded down the wood road was terrific. We had nearly covered the distance to the pike when ahead of me I heard the sharp whistle of a locomotive.

With a pull that lifted the horse from his feet I swung him into a field and sent him straight as an arrow for the track.

By some stroke of luck I got on the track and backed off before the train hit my carriage. But the maneuver was successful, for the engineer stopped, and I swung aboard the cab—hatless, dew soaked, smeared with yellow mud and holding as if it were a baby or a bomb a little tin pail of sand.

"Throw her wide open," I commanded—"wide open! These are fresh turtle eggs for Professor Agassiz of Cambridge. He must have them before breakfast."

The engineer and the fireman no doubt thought that I was crazy, but they let me alone, and the fast freight rolled in swiftly to Boston.

But misfortune was ahead. We slowed down in the yards and came to a stop. We were put on a siding to wait no one knew how long.

I suddenly jumped from the engine, slid over a high fence and bolted for the street. In the empty square stood a cab.

The cabman saw me coming. I waved a dollar at him and then another, dodged into the cab, slammed the door and called out: "Cambridge! Harvard college! Professor Agassiz's house! I've got eggs for Agassiz!" and I pushed another dollar up at him through the hole.

"Let him go!" I ordered. "Here's another dollar for you if you make Agassiz's house in twenty minutes!"

We flew to Cambridge. There was a sudden lurch, and I dived forward, rammed my head into the front of the cab and came up with a rebound that landed me across the small of my back on the seat and sent half of my pail of eggs helter skelter over the floor. But we were at Agassiz's house. I tumbled out and pounded the door.

"Agassiz!" I gasped when the maid came. "I want Professor Agassiz, quick!"

She protested that he was in bed and threatened the police. But just then a door overhead was flung open, a great, white robed figure appeared on the dim landing above, and a quick, loud voice called excitedly:

"Let him in! Let him in! I know him! He has my turtle eggs."

And the apparition, slipperless and clad in anything but an academic gown, came sailing downstairs. The great man, his arms extended, laid hold of me with both hands and, dragging me and my precious pail into his study, with a swift, clean stroke laid open one of the eggs as the watch in my trembling hands ticked its way to 7 as if nothing unusual were happening in the history of the world.

A Fearful Poison.

From the microbe which gives rise in human beings to the disease known as tetanus, or lockjaw, a poison called tetanine is obtained which is over 100 times more powerful than strychnine. Stole a Locket.

Yesterday afternoon a young man named Ernest Luffman went into Jonas Bargman's store, and no one being in the store at the time he helped himself to a locket. Shortly after Luffman left Mr. Bargman missed the article and reported the affair to the police with the result that Luffman was arrested and the locket found upon him. This morning before Magistrate Masson, the accused was convicted and appeared to feel keenly his position. His employer, Mr. Fargey, of Sidney, offered to pay all expenses in the matter. Owing to the lads previous good character, he was allowed to go, to be called upon within a year for sentence. Mr. Fargey went upon Luffman's bond for his appearance if called upon.

Lost His Wad.

Last evening John H. Green, who is a member of the Mohawk tribe, went into the police station and reported that he had been robbed of $61. As Green was in an intoxicated condition and unable to tell where he had been or who he was with, he was locked up for the night. This morning he told the Magistrate that he came from Peterboro where he was working, and had the money when he arrived here. He admitted he procured the liquor at a hotel in Peterboro. He was unable to tell who he was in company with whilst in the city, but claims he was robbed. Under the circumstances Green was discharged, and an effort will be made to ascertain who he was with whilst here. The unfortunate man is 28 years of age and unmarried.

A Couple of Runaways

Two runaways occurred on Front street yesterday afternoon but fortunately no person was hurt and but little damage was done.

A horse belonging to Mr. W. C. Farley of Thurlow, and attached to a phaeton became frightened and ran up Front street and along Mill street. It was stopped near Ald. Lott's mill. Some damage was sustained to the vehicle.

The second runaway which occurred at 5.10, caused considerable excitement. A team of horses attached to a bus belonging to Mr. A. Aselstine, became frightened at a passing train near Hotel Quinte and off they started towards Front street up which thoroughfare they went. When near the upper bridge the team collided with A. Melchoir's delivery waggon, upsetting it and damaging it badly. The frightened animals then went upon the sidewalk and collided with the plate glass window in Mr. E. Elvin's store demolishing it. Here the runaway team was stopped.

Route of the C. N. R.

As the result of the visit here yesterday of Mr. Mountain, the Railway Commissioners engineer, and others we are informed that the engineer's report to the Commissioners will be in favor of the original route of the C. N. R. through a portion of the Township of Sidney, down the bay front and through the city just below Dundas street. Mr. Mountain, in company with some C. N. R. surveyors, and Mr. Wickstead, the railway's engineer, yesterday went over the proposed route from the cemetery eastward through the city. When work will be commenced at this end of the construction is not known, but we are informed that it will be not long delayed

A Pathetic Appeal.

"When Wolseley conquered Cetewayo," said an English officer, "he took nearly all his wives away from him. I believe he only left the monarch a half dozen or thereabouts. Cetewayo day after day sent piteous messages to Wolseley pleading for the rest of his wives, but the British soldier refused sternly. When Wolseley came to leave the country Cetewayo, in despair, sent this message to him: "If you will not send me any more wives will you not at least be enough of a gentleman to exchange the six I have for six others?' WIN MACKINNON CUP

Canadian Riflemen First in Big Bisley Event.

They Have a Lead of 41 Points In Important Event, With Scotland Second—Sergt. Freeborn of Hamilton Is High Man of the Canadian Team With 146 Out of 150—Morris Makes a Possible at 800 Yards.

Bisley, July 8.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Canadian team yesterday afternoon won the Mackinnon Cup by 41 points, with Scotland second.

During the competition, Sergt. F. H. Morris, 46th Regiment, Bowmanville, was the only one to make a possible, scoring 10 bull's-eyes at 800 yards, and Sergt. James Freeborn, 13th Regiment, Hamilton, was high man with 146 out of a possible 150.

The competition for the cup was open to teams of twelve from the various parts of the Empire. The cup is a challenge one, given by the late Col. Mackinnon. The distances were at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, each competitor to have ten shots.

A special commemorative silver bowl will be given by the National Rifle Association to the captain and adjutant and to each member of the Canadian team.

The standing of the teams at the finish was as follows: Canada, 1,567; Scotland, 1,526; England, 1,495; Ireland, 1,492; Australia, 1,483; Guernsey, 1,452; Malay States, 1,449; India, 1,447.

The individual scores made by the Canadians are as follows: Crowe, 139; Clifford, 120; Forrest, 127; Freeborn, 146; McInnes, 124; McHarg, 133; McKie, 133; Morris, 131; Mitchell, 131; Russell, 131; Steele, 114; Steck, 140.

Major Varley of the English team and Private Gray were the only competitors except the Canadians who used the Ross rifle.

Last year Canada won with 1,669, the team including Forrest, Freeborn, Morris, Mitchell, McInnes and Russell, who shot yesterday.

Capt. Crowe and Privates McKie and Steele are from Guelph; Pte. Clifford belongs to the 10th Grenadiers, Toronto; Capt. Forrest is from Vancouver; Sergt. Freeborn and Sergt. Mitchell, 13th Regiment, Hamilton; Sergt. McInnes, Edmonton; Capt. McHarg and Sergt. Morris, Bowmanville; Sergt. Russell is from Ottawa, and Sergt. Steck is from Truro, N.S.

Too Weak to Do the Work.

Ottawa, July 8.—In the annual report of the directors of surveys of the geological branch of the Department of Mines, just issued, the statement is made that the staff of the survey branch is too weak to cope with the pressing work of such an extensive country as Canada. In order to overcome the difficulty it has been necessary to engage outside experts.

During the past season D. D. Cairnes discovered a new occurrence of coal in the Whitehorse district of British Columbia. D. B. Dowling found a new and apparently important coal basin in Alberta.

W. H. Collins has reported on Montreal River district, which includes Gowganda and Maple Mountain districts. He states that the outlook appears to be satisfactory, though not equal to the sanguine expectations. The widespread distribution of ore offers serious disadvantages to economical mining. In regard to the Larder Lake district, M. E. Wilson reports that gold values are confined almost entirely to stringers of quartz, which in many instances contain no gold, or too little for profitable mining.

Five Hundred Men Out.

Winnipeg, July 8.—Five hundred C.N.R. carmen joined the ranks of the strikers yesterday just before noon, quitting work quietly and without any demonstration. Immediately after they left a large squad of police arrived on the scene, but no trouble is anticipated. The carmen ask for increased wages and the restoration of several minor privileges, including a half hour monthly for the cashing of pay checks, one hour off on Saturday and time and a half for work on Sundays and holidays, enjoyed while the road was operated by the Northern Pacific, and which was guaranteed to them, but cancelled.

Woman Wandered Away.

Salisbury, July 8.—Great excitement prevails at River Glade, a village near here, over the disappearance yesterday morning of Mrs. Alfred Jones, a highly-respected woman. Mrs. Jones arose about 3.30 yesterday morning, procured some milk, filled her baby's bottle and fed it. She then partially dressed herself and went out. Her husband, missing her shortly after, went in search. He traced her by the dew on the grass to a point in the woods where the trail was lost.

Tried to Kill Foreman.

Cobalt, July 8.—Fire completely gutted the cookhouse of the Nipissing mine early yesterday morning.

It is reported that seven Finlanders, who were discharged from the Quinlan property in South Lorraine, returned yesterday and attacked the foreman with intent to kill. Constable McKay and deputies rushed to the scene in a special speed launch.

Shot Her Husband.

Chicago, July 8.—Mrs. Henry Mulsaw, goaded to desperation by the alleged brutality and unfaithfulness of her husband, a street car conductor, yesterday shot and fatally wounded the latter and their three-year-old daughter and then killed herself by taking carbolic acid.

Heavy Earthquake Shock.

PICTURES PROHIBITED

Ontario Will Not See Jeffries-Johnson Fight View.

Order-in-Council Is Passed Barring Cinematograph Reproductions of the Reno Mill From Being Shown In the Province—Other Places Shut Them Out—Morality Crusaders Will Try to Keep Johnson Off Stage.

Toronto, July 8.—The Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures and all other of a pugilistic nature are banned from this province. An order in council was passed by the Ontario Cabinet yesterday afternoon, amending the police regulations to prohibit them.

Sir James Whitney said: "The matter was taken up by the Cabinet this afternoon, and considered, along with certain other questions, for the first time, and the regulations with relation to moving pictures have been amended so as to prohibit pictures of prize fights."

Copies of the new regulation will be sent out to the heads of the various police forces in the province, as well as to the owners of moving picture shows. The penalty for a breach of the regulations in this respect is a fine of $50, and an additional fine of $25 for each subsequent day the pictures are shown, and in default of payment the offender goes to jail for three months. There is the further penalty for violations of the regulations that the owner of the show will lose his license.

Chatham, Ont., and Lynchburg, Va., and most of the towns of Kentucky have been added to the list of cities which have barred the fight pictures. Agitation against them are also being waged in Washington, Memphis, Pittsburg, Boston, Philadelphia, Niagara Falls, Calcutta, India, and London, Eng.

The loss to the moving picture industry is placed at $2,000,000.

An endeavor is also being made to keep Johnson off the vaudeville stages.

The Enigma of the Eel.

Some not very old beliefs include the notion that horse-hair steeped in water turns to eels, that they generate in the gills of other fish, or in the bodies of dead mammals thrown into water, but perhaps the most startling, if absurd, theory was advanced by David Cairncross, a working man whose observation lacked the steadying power of scientific training. In a treatise on "The Origin of the Silver Eel," published in or about 1862, he fixed upon the water-beetle as the progenitor of the eel. Another equally absurd belief prevailed that the eels were spontaneously generated from th dew of May. This belief originated in the fact that new-cut turfs folded and placed in such a river as the Severn in the month of May would, on removal from the water, be found to swarm with tiny eels.—The Graphic.

The Origin of Oxygen.

That eminent scientist, the late Lord Kelvin, maintained that all the oxygen in the atmosphere probably originated from the action of sunlight upon plants. When our earth was a globe of hot liquid, it contained no vegetable fuel and probably no free oxygen. But as it cooled off plants appeared on its surface, and these began to evolve oxygen through the medium of the sunbeams. Upon the oxygen thus derived we depend for the maintenance of life by breathing. When we burn coal or other vegetable fuel we use up oxygen, and it is to plants again that we owe the restoration of the oxygen thus lost to the air. If they failed to keep up a sufficient supply the atmosphere would gradually part with its oxygen, and the inhabitants of the earth would disappear in consequence of asphyxiation.

The understanding is always the dupe of the heart.—La Rochefoucauld.

SHE WAS SURPRISED

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs. R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

BURNS AS A WORLD HERO.

Love of the Poet Has Gone to All Parts of the Civilized Globe.

A writer in T. P.'s Weekly comments on the sustained popularity of Burns as evidenced once more at the recent anniversary of his birth. "From Scotland the institution of the Burns dinner and panegyric has spread into all lands where the wandering Scots may have gone," he says.

"There is nothing comparable to this phase of hero-worship in any other nationality. Washington's birthday may be celebrated in America, and other heroes of the Republic of the West often recalled; but there is nothing of American origin akin to the devotion of the Scot to his Burns The Scottish temperament is less excitable than the French, even than the German and the Italian; and the traditional 'guid conceit o' oursel's' of the Scot pales its ineffectual fire before the self-conceit of the American. Whence, then, this exceptional display of the otherwise limited fervor of the Scots on the Burns anniversary? No sufficing answer can be obtained to this query without a patient and discriminating study of the personality and the poetry of Burns. The poet himself alone explains his long succession of perfervid orators. One of the earliest panegyrics on the anniversary was spoken in the town of Dumfries in 1820. John Syme was the orator. He was introduced as 'the intimate friend and social companion of the poet during his life and one of the cabinet council of his heart.' Syme was grieved by certain attacks gratuitously made upon the character of his friend then dead for 24 years. Indignation lacerated his breast. He emerged from the retirement of old age on purpose to defend his poet 'Let me, sir,' said Syme, 'who has often and often enjoyed Burns' intimacy—who has seen him in every phasis, and has heard his lowest note and the top of his compass—let me, sir, declare that in all those situations there never was a sentiment or expression that fell from his lips which did not gild my imagination while it warmed my heart, and which evidently flowed from a fine and benevolent fountain of morality and religion.'

"From 1859 to the centenary of Burns' death in 1896 the volume of annual oratory grew and improved in quality. Broad-church clergymen emerged as frequent panegyrists of the poet, often soiling the wholesome flood of oratory by assuming airs of ethical patronage towards Burns, or spreading unctuous whitewash all too thickly where no whitewash was needed. At the centenary of the tragic death of Burns Lord Rosebery excelled all other orators of the day in his double appreciation, delivered in Dumfries and in Glasgow. Nothing more beautiful has ever been written or spoken concerning Burns than the Rosebery address at Dumfries, which ascended on steps of golden eloquence, intoned by a subduing pathos, to this peroration: 'To-day is not merely the melancholy anniversary of death, but the rich and incomparable fulfilment of prophecy. For this is the moment to which Burns looked when he said to his wife: 'Don't be afraid, I'll be more respected a hundred years after I am dead than I am at present.' . . . He was right in his judgment, for his true life began with his death; with the body passed all that was gross and impure; the clear spirit stood revealed, and soared at once to its accepted place among the fixed stars in the firmament of the rare immortals.'"

HIBERNATING ANIMALS.

The Lethargy of Winter and the Awakening In Spring.

The sleep of hibernation is a very different matter from the sleep of repose. If it be complete, respiration can no longer be detected. A torpid bat when disturbed will heave a sigh or two and, being left alone, again to all appearances cease to breathe.

Submerged in water of a temperature slightly higher than his own, the hedgehog not only continues to live, but appears to suffer neither inconvenience nor harm. Inclosed in an air-tight receptable, his atmosphere undergoes a change so slight that it affects him slightly, if at all.

But circulation does not cease. As respiration diminishes the irritability of the muscles of the heart increases, and thus without the stimulation of oxygen, although much more slowly, the heart continues to beat. In the absence of the fresh air drawn into the lungs in times of activity, uncleansed and unreinvigorated and venous blood passes on to fill the whole system of circulation.

A profound lethargy ensues, distinguishable from death only by the slight beating of the heart. The waste is very small. The fat accumulated during the plenty of summer and autumn supplies all expenditure until the coming of spring, when earlier or later the hibernating animal, having no capital in reserve, begins to suffer the pangs of hunger. In response to the demand respiration very slowly increases. His oxidized blood flows more quickly, and his energy returns.

Then the bat flies forth once more from the hollow tree in the wood to find the warm dusk teeming with insect life, and the hedgehog comes, it may be, from the cavity under the gnarled roots below to find beetles, worms and slugs once more among the spring grass.

Hibernation has saved both from death by starvation, but if their nooks had not been snug and wisely chosen they would not have been preserved from death by frost.

The hiding place also must be secret and free from intrusion, for the hibernating animal cannot bear to be suddenly roused. Even the little dormouse, which comes out at intervals to feed, when in deep sleep must be carried indoors to the warmer temperature of a room or revived by the heat of the hand passing through the nest. He then wakes refreshed and full of activity, but he does not survive too hasty an awakening.

LIQUOR SLEUTH LYNCHED.

Newark, Ohio, In Ferment Over the Death of "Blind Pigger."

Newark, Ohio, July 9.—Carl Etherington, 22 years old, employed Thursday night by the State Anti-Saloon League as a blind tiger raider, was lynched here at 10.35 last night, following a day of almost continuous rioting. The heavy doors of the Licking County jail were battered down and Etherington was dragged from his cell. He was shot, kicked and bruised before the street was reached and the finish followed quickly.

Etherington earlier in the evening confessed he killed William Howard, proprietor of the "Last Chance" restaurant, and former chief of police, in a raid of alleged "speak easies" during the scuffle at 1.30 yesterday afternoon, and narrowly escaped lynching at that time.

When the news from the hospital that Howard had died passed over the city at 9 o'clock last night, the fury of the mob took definite form. Large battering rams were directed upon the doors of the Licking County jail and the deputies were powerless. The doors fell after nearly an hour's attack.

Crying piteously, Etherington, a curly-headed Kentuckian, who had been serving as a strike-breaker since he was released from marine service three months ago, was dragged forth.

Several reporters leaving the jail last night, after interviewing the detectives, were attacked by the mob and roughly handled until identified.

Licking County, of which Newark is the county seat, is "dry" under the Rose local option law. Wayne B. Wheeler, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League at Columbus, said last night that the situation was brought about by Mayor Atherton of Newark not upholding the law. Wheeler said that the detectives were from Cleveland.

Woman Aviator Injured.

Rheims, July 9.—Baroness de la Roche was badly injured yesterday when flying in a Voisin biplane at the aviation meet.

The machine went wrong and plunged straight down 150 feet, tangling the victim in the debris. She was internally injured and also sustained a fracture of the arm and leg.

The biplane, going at a terrific speed, suddenly seemed to halt; it appeared tossed on the wind. Then, while the driver could be seen to tug at levers, the machine fell, whirling and tossing.

After a dashing career as an automobolist in the last month, the baroness came to the front as an aviator and earned a name as one of the most daring air pilots.

It was not her first mishap. On Jan. 4 last she was seriously injured at the Chalons Aviation Field.

The doctors, after a careful examination, declared that the baroness' skull was not fractured, and that she may live.

Second In the Kolapore Cup.

Bisley Camp, July 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Mother Country won the Kolapore Cup yesterday; Canada was second, after leading at the end of the second stage. The colonial prize of $400 goes to the Canadian team.

The Canadians were leading, when Mitchell for his last shot got an outer. Then Gray, with a bull, and Runciman, with an inner, scored the victory for the Mother Country by two points. The standing: Canada, 796; Australia, 777; Mother Country, 798; Guernsey, 770; India, 745; Malay States, 763; Singapore, 742; South Africa, 756.

The scores made by the Canadian team is as follows: Crowe, 100; Forrest, 99; Freeborn, 102; McHaig, 102; Morris, 101; Mitchell, 93; Russell, 105; Steck, 99.

Welcome to Premier.

Port Arthur, July 9.—Port Arthur turned out en masse last evening to welcome Sir Wilfrid Laurier and party on his arrival to commence a tour of the west. Thousands of people cheered the party at the depot and through the streets to the residence of James Conmee, where the informal reception was held.

The city is decorated with arches, evergreens and bunting. To-day there will be automobile trips followed by a cruise on the bay on the yacht Sigm. After the presentation of his address at the Lyceum Theatre in the afternoon, Sir Wilfrid goes to Fort William in the evening to address a meeting at the Arena rink.

Troops Tried to Lynch Negro.

Washington, July 9.—Determined to avenge the probable fatal injury to one of their fellow soldiers, Private Scott of Battery D, Third Artillery, U.S.A., between forty and fifty United States white troopers and artillerymen from Fort Myer, Va., early yesterday made an attempt to storm the Alexandra County Jail on Fort Myer Heights, to lynch Robert Jackson, a negro.

A clever subterfuge of Jailer Harry Crack, in inducing the soldiers to believe that Jackson was not within the jail, was the only thing that saved the negro from lynching.

CROWDS FOR AVIATORS

First Day of Toronto Aeroplane Meeting Is Very Brief.

Delighted Spectators Watch Count De Lesseps and Ralph Johnstone Make Trial Flights Around the Field—Wind Is High and Long Delay Ensues Before Bird-Men Take to the Air—Lieutenant-Governor Present.

Toronto, July 9.—The possibility of flight through the air, which, through the passage of ages, hundreds of amiable maniacs have died to prove, until of late years their dreams have come true, was demonstrated for Toronto people last night at the aviation grounds at Weston, when Count Jacques De Lesseps, in his Bleriot monoplane No. 9 rose into the air at 7.23 o'clock like a large bird with graceful white wings outspread and circled three times around the course in five minutes before finally alighting to receive the plaudits of the spectators.

Hardly had he left the field before the Wright biplane, a far larger and more imposing, though scarcely as graceful a machine, at the other end of the field, drew everyone's attention by the whirring of its two propellers. A moment later, with Ralph Johnstone at the helm as aviator, it slid along the mono-rail on which it gets its start, passed off it and sailed along the ground at about a height of fifteen feet for over a hundred yards before rising high into the air and circling around the field, performing various evolutions in aviation, of which the figure eight was the most conspicuous.

The people first began to gather a little after 3 o'clock, although the program was not advertised to begin until 4.30, and eventually about two thousand had passed the gates, a larger crowd than graced the first day of the meet at Montreal. Because either of undue delay in shipment at Montreal or slow carriage over the railways, most of the machines did not arrive on the grounds until the afternoon was well on its way. This caused a delay of nearly three hours in starting, to the great disappointment of many who thought there would be no flying at all, but it is safe to say that there was no one there who did not think the wait well repaid when he saw the heavier-than-air machines flying through the air. Count De Lesseps, of course, used to coursing great distances over land and water, was not as satisfied as were the spectators.

Ralph Johnstone, who comes from Kansas City, will make flights every day and take part in most of the contest relating to speed and accuracy. Dr. Duval Lachappelle, especially, will be an important figure in speed contests to take place between himself and Count De Lesseps, one of these to occur this afternoon. Mr. J. S. Stratton, who will take up the Canadian Bleriot, is an aeronaut of great experience, covering all kinds of aeroplanes. He was prevented rising yesterday because, through some negligence or ignorance of the need of care, his machine was shipped by flatcar from Montreal, and arrived with the wings badly frayed and the engine full of cinders. Young Dixon is on the grounds and may possibly take some flights in this machine.

Mr. George B. Harrison of Los Angeles, Cal., is in charge of the Wright machines. He has two of these on the grounds, with one still on the car at Weston. He expects very shortly a new Wright biplane of a different model, smaller and more graceful than the usual type, which has been especially designed for speed, and with which, although never tried out, he expects Mr. Lachappelle will be able to break some speed records, both for speed and height of flight. Two other Wright aviators expected to arrive shortly are Mr. A. R. Hoxsie of Pasadena, Cal., and Mr. A. L. Walsh of Washington, D.C., Walter Brookins, who obtained the record for high flight at Atlantic City, may also possibly be there.

His honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Gibson, with a party, visited the grounds. He was introduced to the aviators and inspected their machines, but because of an evening engagement had to leave before the first flight.

Thirty-two men of the Royal Canadian Dragoons under two officers, Lieuts. F. Gilman and D. Bowie, patrolled the grounds and kept spectators from the neighborhood of the grounds wherever unprotected by canvas. Camp is pitched on the Milne farm, and the men are supplied butter, eggs and milk by the Aviation Committee.

H., W. & G. Dropped.

Hamilton, July 9.—An announcement that will cause much surprise and great disappointment, not only in this city, but in a number of western Ontario cities and towns, was made yesterday. It was that the Hamilton, Waterdown & Guelph Railway project has been abandoned owing to the excessive cost of constructing the terminals and the part through the high level district, and the inability of John Patterson to finance it because of these things.

Rescued Family From Flames.

Magnetawan, July 9.—The fine brick residence of E. W. Jenkins on the river, a mile from here, was totally destroyed by fire about midnight on Thursday. The family, only in their night clothes, barely escaped with their lives. Mr. Jenkins was ill at the time and great praise is due Mrs. Jenkins for her heroic and successful efforts in rescuing the family from the flames.

Postmaster of St. Mary's Dead.

St. Mary's, July 9.—Col. H. A. L. White, postmaster of St Mary's, and a prominent citizen of the town for many years, died here yesterday afternoon.

Even Cuba Objects.

Havana, July 9.—The Cuban Government, which permits bull-fighting, has drawn the line on the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures.

Will Go to Privy Council.

Toronto, July 9.—George W. Beardmore has instructed E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., to apply for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against the Court of Appeal decision which decided against his suit to prevent the City of Toronto entering the Hydro-Power electric system.

Only 36 Out of 192 Passed.

Kingston, July 9.—The pass list of the recent entrance examinations for the district from Gananaoque, Newboro, Westport, and Delta, is not encouraging. In the entire district 192 candidates wrote and only 36 passed.

Paris is threatened with a recurrence of floods, through abnormal rainfall.

Lord Sholto Douglas will work with a C.P.R. survey crew for three months at $2 a day.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. has restored the service cut off from brokers on a number of cities in the Eastern States.

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars is the fee demanded, and may be paid to Attorney Clarence A. Knight for services rendered in straightening out the estate of Chas. T. Yerkes, the late traction magnate.

Montreal Will Get Dock.

Montreal, July 9.—It is pretty well understood here that the contest between Quebec and Montreal, which has been going on for months past as to which port will have the immense dock, has been decided in favor of this city. In the first place Mr. Vickers, who carefully looked over the whole situation and calculated the amount of business that would naturally come to the respective ports, has positively stated that Montreal is the place for the dock. In fact, he declares that he will not go to Quebec under any consideration, and will not advise any friend of his to spend a cent at Levis on such an enterprise.

Of course Levis is agitating at Ottawa and trying to get a group of capitalists to apply for the subsidy, but it is not at all probable that any one will undertake the proposition.

A Test of Sincerity.

Madrid, July 9.—The rule forbidding any more religious orders to enter Spain until the dispute between the Government and the Vatican regarding the revision of the concordat is settled, was introduced yesterday. It was drawn by Premier Canalejas, and was signed Thursday by King Alfonso.

The disposition made of the bill, which will be strongly supported by the Republicans, will go a long way toward determining whether the King and the Premier are really sincere in their talk of limiting the state church power. Many people are accusing them of insincerity, but the majority believe that they really want to do something, but that no hope for sweeping reforms, may be expected so long as the monarchy survives.

Bricklayers' Strike Gaining.

Montreal, July 9.—The list of contractors who are willing to accept the demands of the International Union of Bricklayers and Stonemasons has grown during the past twenty-four hours from 56 to 102, and it is still increasing. There are at present about 650 union men at their places, but they are for the most part employed by the smaller firms of the city.

The big English firms and the members of Master Bricklayers' and Masons' Association present an undaunted front. They have signed an agreement to employ union men only on the terms which had been agreed to in the past, not to recognize the union, and each agreed to forfeit the sum of $1,000 in the event of a breach of the agreement with one another.

Largely Increased Traffic.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 9.—The June report of lake commerce through the canals shows 1,961 vessels of a registered net tonnage of 4,403,728 passed through the American canal, and 1,108 vessels, with a registered net tonnage of 3,530,586, went through the Canadian Canal. The total tonnage carried through both canals was 9,839,872 net tons, an increase over June of last year of 2,907,447 net tons.

Wanted to Shoot Johnson.

Chicago, July 9.—An unidentified man, believed to be from St. Louis, was arrested last night, when, armed with a gun, he tried to force an entrance to the home of Jack Johnson, negro champion pugilist. When examined by the police, the man admitted that he lost money on the recent prize fight.

An Heroic Youth.

Cornwall, July 9—Ralph Fiske, aged 16 years, is in the Cornwall General Hospital undergoing treatment for severe burns received in a heroic attempt to rescue his little brother from the flames which consumed their home at Nicolville, N.Y. He will recover.

University In Financial Difficulties.

Washington, D.C., July 9.—Staggering under a debt totalling $849,389, and facing financial ruin, the George Washington University is to-day negotiating for the sale of its most important building and the discontinuance of its medical school and hospital.

Can't Stop 'Em.

Albany, N.Y., July 9.—Corporation Counsel Arthur L. Andrews, yesterday advised Mayor J. B. McEwen that moving picture exhibitions cannot be prohibited in Albany, unless in his opinion they were of a "lewd or immoral nature."

At the Old Guard banquet at Delmonico's a guest told an instructive story about summer vacations. "I said to a man the other day," he began, 'Well, are you going to send your wife to the seashore again this summer?' 'No, sir, I'm not,' said he, 'I can't afford it.' 'But your wife's so economical,' I objected. 'You told me that she spent very little at the shore last year.' 'Yes, I know,' said he; but home alone, I spend over a hundred a week."

She (candidate's wife): Well, what did you think of my husband's speech last night, Garbutt?

Garbutt: He's a very powerful speaker for such a young man.

She: Oh, but he's had a lot of practice in the Union at Oxford.

Garbutt (who has not been to the University): Really, now! Well, it's wonderful 'ow some of these workhouse boys get on!—The Windsor.

The trained ostrich disconcerted its exhibitor at a music hall by continually endeavoring to break away from all restraint and to climb over the footlights into the orchestra. The widely advertized act came to a sudden end, and the professor emerged from behind the curtain and apoligized for the actions of his pet in about these words: "Lydies and Gentlemen—Hi ham very sorry to disappoint you this hevening. We are compelled to cease our hengagement until the management hengages a new orchestra leader. The one at present employed 'ere 'as no 'air on top of 'is 'ead, and my bird takes it for a hegg."

A simple hearted and truly devout country preacher, who had tasted but few of the drinks of the world, took dinner with a high toned family, where a glass of milk punch was quietly set down by each plate. During the service some commotion was caused by a gentleman who accidentally ignited a box of wax matches in his pocket, and was trying to put them out while his alarmed neighbors strived equally hard to help him. The minister, being shortsighted, could not make out the reason of the disturbance, and thinking to cover diplomatically the incident he innocently said: "Brethren, there is a little noise going on. Until it is over let us sing "Sometimes a Light Surprises."

Nervous Systems

ALWAYS FOLLOWS A RUN DOWN CONDITION OF THE BLOOD

It is an old story now that nervous people tell of how the blood becomes poor and thin, and then the nervous symptoms followed. How many really know that the thin blood was responsible for the nervous disorder? The nerves get all their nourishment from the blood and as thin blood is deficient in nerve-building material, the nerves become starved and pain and nervous breakdown is the result. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic for the blood that supply it with the necessary elements to nourish and tone up the nerves and, the cause being removed, nature does the rest and health is fully restored. Mrs. Harry Patterson Dauphin, Man., tells of how she was cured of nervousness and general debility through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "A few years ago I was all run down, and my nervous system apparently all broken up. I was weak, tired and nervous all the time. When I got up in the morning I seemed to be more tired than when I went to bed. I could not walk up an ordinary flight of stairs without sitting down panting for breath, and my nerves trembled like a leaf. I got so that it was almost impossible to do any housework, and so nervous that I wanted to cry about everyything I did. I took several different medicines without the least benefit; then I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. After taking two boxes I felt a little better and I got a further supply which I continued taking for about a month when I was as well as ever; could do all my housework without difficulty and could walk for a long distance without being all tired out. In view of the wonders Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me I sincerely recommend them to all weak, nervous, run-down people."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Stomach Ache And Diarrhoea.

These common summer ailments are generally caused by the system trying to rid itself of some injurious or indigestable material which has been imprudently taken into the stomach, gulping down iced drinks and sudden changes in the weather.

The discomforts and suffering which result are easily prevented and quickly cured by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the great family medicine. It is an invaluable tonic for all people who suffer from the heat. It brings restful sleep, cools the blood and tones up and strengthens the whole system.

Dr. Lewis J. Davis, of Chicago, Ill., recently wrote: "I was a surgeon in the war of the Rebellion and have suffered ever since with chronic diarrhoea and disease of the liver. Whiskey heretofore would not agree with me, but I have no trouble in retaining Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. It also has strengthened and built me up.""

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is indorsed by leading clergymen, doctors educators, nurses, lawyers, as well as business men and women in all walks of life. It is invaluable in the treatment of indigestion, nervous prostration, malaria, chills, low fevers, and all diseases of the throat, the bronchial tubes, lungs and stomach. It is a heart tonic, and in old age, when the vital forces are yielding to the weight of years, it will bring strength and vigor to the muscular and nervous centres.

All druggists, grocers, dealers, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Be sure and get the genuine; substitutes and imitations are injurious. Medical booklet, containing rare common sense rules for health and testimonials, also doctor's advice, sent free to any one who writes. The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester. N. Y.

Kangaroo Has Fun With San Francisco Policeman

ESCAPES FROM CLUB HOUSE, WHERE IT IS MASCOT, AND KNOCKS OUT BLUECOAT.

Just as dawn was breaking the other day, Patrolman Fugit, while approaching Sixteenth street, on Valencia, descried a figure lurching ahead on the sidewalk with the most peculiar stagger he had ever noticed, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The current of Fugit's thoughts was changed and he began to speculate on the history of that weird jag ahead. He also quickened his pace. The object of his attention also quickened its pace and the way it did so made Fugit rub his eyes. It began to look like a woman, but instead of walking she moved with little wobbly hops

"Hold on a minute, madam; I want to speak to you!" yelled Fugit. At the sound of his voice the object leaped at least ten feet up into the air and alighted a quarter of a block in advance. 'If that's a benzine case,' said Fugit, "it's the kind they use in aeroplanes. But, gee, she must have thrown overboard a lot of ballast to make that last hop."

Impressed with the idea that he must stalk the eccentric pedestrian, Fugit stole up behind telegraph poles and laid his hand on a furry shoulder.

One leg shot out in response and Fugit hit the sidewalk on his back. It developed later that his almost prisoner was a kangaroo, the mascot brought back from Australia by the Columbia Park boys, which escaped from the club house.

When the patrol wagon arrived three policemen assisted Fugit to put the kangaroo's small end first into the wagon. As its head struck it gave one swift kick, striking Fugit in the solar plexus and knocking him down and out.

Fugit was laid on the seat, while the three policemen sat down on the kicker, and finally after much excitement managed to lock him up at the Mission Station. Before it was released at eight o'clock the kangaroo had almost made a wreck of the Station House.

The Belated Reports.

Of course there is the report—too late—that Jeffries was not in condition for a fight. Some writers have even gone so far as to state that he had been poisoned by the alkali in the water at his Moano camp, and say that he was in such a feverish condition that he does not even remember entering the ring. For his lack of forgetfulness however, the thirty thousand persons who saw the fight and hundreds of thousands who watched the tickers who will not be able to remember anything else for a long time to come.

With all such talk, however, it must be agreed that the black man was far superior in the contest. He has expressed a wish that he might have met Jeffries in his palmy days, and there are many who believe he would have proven the better man had he met the miner when the latter was at his best. Sure it is that there is no white man on earth who can give battle to Johnson as he stands today, and he will not fight for months at any rate—until there shall arise a man who shows he is competent to stand in the ring with the champion.

"I told you I'd show you something about fighting," was Johnon's comment after the battle, "and I did."

He still insists, however, that he did not show all that is in him, and that the public will have to wait until there is a bigger man than Jeffries to meet him—one who will make him extend himself and show all the fight that is in him.

The Invincible Billy

An Irrepressible Boy's Part In a Love Affair

By AGNES G. BROGAN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

They sat upon the pier together, the girl whose eyes were as blue as the sea, the little boy whose flaxen curls framed the face of a cherub and the man who looked askance at the boy and frowned. The girl caressed the child. "Dear," she asked tenderly, "are you tired?"

Billy rested the curly head against his aunt's shoulder and confidingly placed his damp boots upon the skirt of her white linen dress. "Nope," he answered concisely.

Jack Winston sighed and shook his head. "When I see the amount of affection you are wasting upon that imp," he said, "my soul is filled with wrath."

The boy scrambled to his feet suddenly and, collecting a handful of small sharp stones, began pelting them at the two occupants of a small boat which glided noiselessly along beside the pier.

"Billy," his aunt cried, horrified—"Billy, did you hit the little boy?"

"You bet I did," her nephew replied gleefully. "That was Dicky Smith. I hate Dicky Smith!"

Miss Brereton's eyes looked unutterably sad. "That was very wrong," she said reprovingly, "and you must not hate him, dear; you must love everybody."

Her nephew laughed. "Everybody!" he exclaimed derisively.

"Yes, indeed," his aunt reiterated. Billy considered.

"Do you love everybody, Aunt Beatrice?" he asked. "Do you love Mr. Winston?" A rosy flush covered his aunt's pretty face.

"Of course I do," she answered evenly.

Billy turned to seek an ally in the man. "Do you love everybody, Mr. Winston?" he persisted.

"Not by a good deal, Bill," the man responded warmly. "I have much the same feeling for Mr. Fenway, for instance, that you have for Dicky Smith."

The girl laughed and caught her small nephew by the hand. "What nonsense!" she said. "And now don't you think it is time to go back?"

The three went strolling up the sandy beach, the boy skipping along between them. The hotel guests had assembled upon the wide verandas, awaiting the sound of the gong which would summon them to the evening meal. They hailed the delinquents merrily. "Last call for dinner in the dining car," said Fenway. "Billy, come here and give an account of yourself." He caught up the boy and perched him upon his knee. Beatrice stood leaning against a white pillar, smiling down at them. Winston sat upon a lower step.

"What have you been doing, Billy boy?" Fenway questioned. The child was always very amusing, so the guests leaned forward, eagerly listening for his replies.

"Been down on the pier," Billy piped in his shrill treble, "with Aunt Beatrice and Mr. Winston." A pause. "Aunt Beatrice says she loves Mr. Winston," he repeated deliberately. For a moment there was silence, tense, deadly silence; then Jack Winston committed the unpardonable crime—he laughed. No one joined him. That made it worse, for all were fascinated in watching the girl's face, which changed so suddenly from white to crimson. She looked contemptuously at Winston for a moment because he could thus enjoy her discomfiture.

"Billy," she said desperately, "you remember, I spoke of loving everybody—not Mr. Winston in particular; he was merely included with the others."

It seemed to the man on the lower step that her eyes sought Fenway's appealingly. "Merely included with the others." He arose suddenly. "You have sufficiently cleared yourself of the imputation," he began in a low tone, but Billy was speaking again.

"Mr. Winston says," the cherub announced distinctly, "that sometimes he would like to pelt stones at Mr. Fenway." There was a general laugh at this, and Winston was conscious of an overwhelming desire to fall upon the boy and thrash him within an inch of his life.

"Thanks, awfully, Bill," Fenway observed calmly. "Forewarned is forearmed. Henceforth, whenever I see Jack Winston coming my way, I shall run."

The company dispersed in little chattering groups toward the dining room. Billy was borne thence upon Fenway's shoulder, and Beatrice followed. As Winston passed she averted her eyes, and so during the endlessly long week which followed she perversely ignored his existence and admirably succeeded in dispelling any erroneous ideas which might have prevailed regarding her partiality toward him. And the injured one hid himself in faraway corners and worked resolutely upon the serial story which he was preparing for one of the current magazines. He had neglected his writing lately, and there was much to do. Occasionally Billy would seek him out, but was always curtly dismissed. In fact, the thorns were beginning to show among Billy's roses, for his champion, Fenway, had suddenly departed for town, and Aunt Beatrice had developed into a very unreasonable person. One could not tell how to please her.

When they started for a walk upon their last afternoon at the seaside Aunt Beatrice first found the wooded path too shady, then decided that the sun shone too brightly upon the pier, and later when the man in the little postoffice informed them that there were "no letters today" Billy really thought she was going to cry. "P'r'aps," he comforted, "Mr. Fenway will write a nice letter to you bimeby, but," he added, with the strange perversity of childhood, "I like Mr. Winston best."

Aunt Beatrice very unexpectedly bent down and kissed his upturned face. "Billy boy," she said sadly, "Mr. Winston does not like us any more, and it is all because of you." Billy pondered deeply upon this. If it was his fault that these two funny grown-up people refused to speak to each other then some way or other he must be the one to straighten things out. He did not quite know how he was going to accomplish this purpose, but would see Mr. Winston at any rate. So it happened that Billy's chubby figure invaded the hiding place among the trees, and Winston ceased scribbling for a moment to look impatiently at the innocent face peeping out from its tangled curls. "Hello!" said Billy cheerfully.

"Don't you see that I am busy?" the man answered. "Now run along."

"All right," Billy agreed, and sat down upon a fallen tree trunk. Winston resumed his writing. As he finished one sheet he would tear it hastily from the pad and toss it from him. The ground near by seemed covered with the closely written pages.

"You write a great many letters," Billy suggested politely. There was no response. "Mr. Fenway went away yesterday," he ventured again. Still no answer. "Aunt Beatrice and I are going home tomorrow," he continued. At last Billy had gained the man's attention. "Tomorrow!" he exclaimed in consternation. "She is going away tomorrow?" Billy was pleased with the sensation he had made. "Yep," he answered coolly. "No more fun here now."

Jack Winston looked far away between the trees to where he could see a glimpse of blue sea beyond. "I suppose not, now that Fenway has gone," he said bitterly. The man continued to gaze gloomily out upon the sea. He had forgotten the story; he had forgotten even Billy until the unusual silence reminded him that his unwelcome visitor had departed. Then he slowly collected the scattered sheets, dropped the pad into a loose coat pocket and with great heaviness of heart turned to go. So she was leaving tomorrow. In all probability he would never see her again, and the happy hours of this summer which had meant everything to him would linger in her memory only as an idle seaside flirtation. The man sighed a mighty sigh, and then the twisted branches before him were parted and Beatrice herself stood there in the opening. She raised a flushed face to his; her blue eyes shone mistily. "I wanted to see you so very much," she said hesitatingly, "that I just could not wait for you to come."

He stared unbelievingly. Miss Brereton pouted. "Of course if you are not glad to see me"— she was beginning, when the glorious truth dawned full upon him.

"Glad!" he cried, and the fervor expressed in that one word seemed to quite satisfy the girl. After a long silence she laughed softly. "It was a dear little note," she said. "Do you know you have always appeared to be such a dignified, self contained person that really I have been a bit afraid of you all along—at least I never imagined that one so calm could write like that."

The last words were uttered in a tone which conveyed her entire approval of the note, which had evidently been the means of bringing her to his side. Winston realized slowly that something remained to be explained. He must be cautious.

"Have you the letter with you, dear?" he asked. She drew a crumpled paper from her belt and, smoothing it out, held it up before his eyes. The man took her hands and the note within his own.

"Dearest," he read in his own handwriting, "I can bear this silence—this separation—no longer. In pity let me see you once more." The scrawl ended abruptly, and the sheet was torn off as though in frantic haste. With a perplexed frown Winston recognized the words with which the hero of his latest serial story begins an ardent epistle to his ladylove.

Beatrice smiled. "You must admit," she said softly, "that Billy made a good messenger. I was sitting in the garden looking sorrowfully out over the hills and wondering if a certain person who considered himself mortally offended could really be so cruel as to allow me to go far away without one word of goodby when Billy, the dear, came running down the road. 'Aunt Beatrice,' he called, 'here is a letter for you from Mr. Winston!' If it had not been such a nice, anxious letter I might have properly waited for you to come to me, but as it was—well, Billy led me straight to your hiding place."

"Dearest," said Winston in the phrasing of the letter, "I humbly apologize for the many unkind remarks which I have made from time to time concerning your nephew. He is an angel, a remarkably clever child. There has never been his equal." Beatrice sighed contentedly, and Winston, happening to glance over the crown of her head at this moment, saw the aforesaid angel seated upon the tree trunk close by, apparently a very much interested spectator.

"Say," said Billy wearily, "cut it out

Flour Without Gluten Is Flour Without Life

Gluten, Mistress Housewife, is the very "Soul of Flour".

It is the one essential element—it means Energy, Nourishment, Strength, Breadlife.

It is the element which makes Wheat Bread the best, most profitable food on earth—civilized nations are judged by the bread they eat.

It's Gluten that makes your breadstuffs rise and stay risen—making them light, porous, toothsome—giving them every single quality worth having.

Gluten, Madam, is most plentiful in our own Manitoba Spring Wheat.

And FIVE ROSES is milled essentially from the purest Manitoba wheat berries—only the plump, sun-ripened berries—only the cleaned, scoured kernels.

Only the gluten from very heart of the berry is taken—there's no bran in FIVE ROSES flour, no woody indigestible particles from the wheat skin.

In FIVE ROSES, you get the best, the most gluten. You get the very element, the strength that has made Manitoba Spring Wheat the costliest under the sun.

FIVE ROSES is everything you want in flour—nothing that you don't want and wouldn't want if you knew.

It is not Bleached, not Mixed, not Cheapened in any way.

That is why FIVE ROSES is the healthiest, wholesomest, most profitable, strongest of all flours.

Simply the concentrated nourishment of the amber wheat kernels reduced to flour form.

FIVE ROSES foodstuffs, Madam, are not "just filling". Every ounce is food, not a grain is wasted.

Why don't YOU use FIVE ROSES?

Being one of a dozen men dining together at a London club where each was required to produce his own dish. Alvanley's, as the most expensive, won him the advantage of being entertained free of cost. This benefit was gained at an expense of $540, that ebing the price of a simple fricassee composed entirely of the "noix," or small pieces at each side of the back, taken from thirteen kinds of birds, among them being 100 snipe, 40 woodcocks, and 20 pheasants.—in all about 00 birds.

This seemed to end the strain, and, no jury being present to muddle affairs, a satisfactory verdict was reached.

Judges' Wigs.

The wig is only worn by English barristers to give them a stern, judicial apeparance, and no one can say that it fails in this respect. The custom was originated by a French judge in the seventeenth century when, happening to don a marquis' wig one day, he found it gave him such a stern and dignified appearance that he decided to get one for himself and wear it at all times in court. This he did, and the result was so satisfactory from a legal point of view that not only judges, but barristers also, took up the custom throughout Europe.—London Graphic.

Hamilton, July 9. — Capt. William Ross, aged ninety, of Port Robinson, Ont., is rejoicing in having found nearly three hundred dollars and an honest New Yorker.

A quarter of a century ago he did two hundred dollars worth of work for a contractor who failed, leaving the debt. The contractor died but his son, who is very successful, recently advertised for his father's creditors. Ross replied and got his money with interest.

BRITISH ELECTIONS LIKELY TO BE IN JANUARY.

(Intelligencer Special.)

London, July 9.—That the general elections will be held in January next and will be very strenuous is the opinion here since the conference between the leaders of the parties failed to come to an understanding. It is expected that the issue will be the complete extermination of the Lords or such curbing of their powers as will prevent the slightest interfeernce in government matters. The campaign will be the bitterest in the history of Great Britain. Even the Irish realize that the Lords must be disposed of before home rule can be thought of.

Great indignation is felt against the flagman in charge of the crossing He has been arrested and was arraigned this morning.

Daily Intelligencer.

Sir Wilfrid Going West.

Sir Wilfrid is westward bound. He goes with the view of enlightening the "benighted" opponents of his Government in that part of the Dominion, whose interests he has constantly, during his term in office flagrantly set at naught. That he will be fawned upon by those who have enriched themselves through land grabbing and timber deals; and by those who are living in expectation of similar results, there can be no doubt. There are other elements that exist in the West, which will crop up, and do no little "heckling," some of itwell deserved. He should be made to answer why he has steadily refused to grant the just demands of the Province of Manitoba for an extension of territory, and a fair and equitable rearrangement of the financial aid justly due that Province. Whether his "sunny smiles" will convince the people that he is right, time alone will tell.

That other demands on him will be made is already foreshadowed, some reasonable and others of an extreme character. It is already intimated that among questions which are to be brought under his notice and answers demanded are:

1st—"A general tariff reduction."

2nd—"Acceptance of the United States offer for free trade in agricultural implements."

3rd — "Immediate construction of the Hudson's Bay Railroad and the operation of the road and its terminals as a Government project."

4th—"Government ownership of the terminal elevators at the lake front under an independent commission."

5th—The inauguration of a chilled meat industry by the Federal Government with a refrigerator car service, that will place the live stock industry of the West on a paying basis."

6th—"The enactment of co-operative legislation which will enable the farmers to conduct their own business on co-operative methods if they desire."

A somewhat socialistic platform, it must be admitted. It will be interesting to watch the tactics of the "Sunny Smiler" and see how he evades each question.

Curing a Cold in Camp.

Taking "cold" is a very popular camp method of feeling bad. The man who does not at least once, while in camp, stuff himself full of a good old-fashioned "cold" feels that he has been cheated out of a part of the enjoyment of his out. For the benefit of those of his companions who do not appreciate his "barking" in season and out, the following rules are suggested: First, take a bath; it may be painful but necessary. Second, assist overworked eliminants to remove the debris that has accumulated by reason of the failure of the ordinary process of waste removal.

This can be done very nicely with a heroic dose of calomel; by heroic about three grains is meant. Follow up the calomel with several five grain doses of phenacetine, or until the patient is in a profuse perspiration, roll him in warm blankets, and await developments. A careful observance of the foregoing will annihilate any able-bodied "cold" on earth.—Dr. Charles Stewart Moody in June Outing.

The Broken Trust

His face flushed angrily at her words.

"On your oath, Esther, you have not betrayed me?"

"On my word," she replied, proudly, "which was ever sufficient for you."

"Esther what are you going to do when the month is over?" he asked.

"Shall you keep the promise you made me years ago?" she asked.

"I may as well tell you now as then. No, I have no intention of marrying any one but Lady Damar—do you hear me, Esther?"

"Yes," she replied, dreamily, "I hear you, Paul."

"Do not use that name," he cried, angrily. "Do you want to ruin me with your absurdly sentimental ways? I am not going to marry you, Esther. Shall you denounce me?"

"No," she replied; "if ever I was so false to my womanhood or to my love as to threaten you, I retract my words; mine shall not be the voice to cry out against you, or mine the hands to drag you down. It will come in God's good time. He brings all evil to light, but I pray Him not to make me the instrument of His vengeance."

He was touched by her words—more touched than he cared to own. The sublime sorrow on her face moved him.

"Thank you, Esther," he said; "it would be hard if the woman I once loved should give me up to the enemy. You are kind and good. I am not sure but that I am half in love with you again. You care more for me than Lady Blanche. Wouldn't she denounce me if she could?"

"Spare me all insult," said Esther; "none can be so great as to mention of your love. No, I will not betray you; but I do not mean to yield all claim to you. I shall never cease to pray to you—to plead to you—to beseech you, in God's name, until you promise to do justice, and give up what you have so unjustly won."

"And I give you permission to preach," said Sir Alan, with a light laugh, "whenever you get a chance."

"Your welfare will always be dearer to me than anything else," said Esther with solemn dignity. "I loved you very dearly years ago, Paul; I think sometimes no woman ever loved or suffered as I have done. I thought, when I discovered your treachery, that I was strong enough to punish you. I am not, I am not; for the love you taught me is stronger than life itself. God help me, I cannot betray you; I would die sooner."

It was wonderful to see the relief that came to his face. Was this the woman he had feared so greatly that the sight of her face on canvas had shaken the strong life within him?

"You are a noble girl, Esther," he said. "I must see you again; you must let me offer you——"

"Nay," she interrupted; "spare me the indignity of a bribe; and remember you are in mightier hands than mine; remember—'the wages of sin is death.'"

He started back at the words—no others could have touched him so keenly. He had read them first in that far-off hut near Otana, with the dying face of Alan Wayne turned to him for comfort. They had haunted him ever since, and now they came from the true lips that had never said false words to him. He shrank from her with a white, cowed, yet half-defiant look on his face. He dared not retort the words were not her own.

"Good morning, Esther," he said, "I am going in here. You had better come another time."

She turned away without a word and he congratulated himself in the quiet street where so few passed that their interview had been a private one. But the eyes he had most cause to fear in all the world, had he known it, were bent upon him. Edith Westerne, from between the closed Venetians of the drawing-room window, had seen the meeting and watched the whole interview. She noted the sublime expression of suffering and patience on Esther's face; she noted the mingled fear and insolent triumph of Sir Alan; and, as she watched, felt more and more sure that the so-called baronet was Esther's lover, who was "so much worse than dead."

"She told me," thought Edith, "that she did not know Sir Alan Aynsley, and yet she talks to him as if she had known him for years. How can that be? They are more like intimate friends than strangers."

Suddenly an idea came to her. She always so truthful, whose lips were guileless and stainless as her own, had said she did not know Sir Alan Aynsley. Did she know the man by another name? Sir Alan's loud rap sounded on the door and she went down to the library, where he awaited her.

"Mr. Westerne is not in, I hear. I merely called to see how the picture is getting on. I would no go away without paying mes devoirs to you, Miss Edith."

"You are very kind," she said calmly; and then, as usual when they were together and alone, a particularly unpleasant and restrained silence fell over them.

"By the way," suddenly said Sir Alan, thinking it best to provide against emergencies, "that is a nice face your father has found for the picture; the model, the young lady sitter, or whatever it is proper to call her, reached the door at the same time I did. I spoke to her, pray do not be shocked, and complimented her on the pretty face she had."

"Then you took a liberty few would dream of taking with Miss Bruce," said Edith quietly. "She is singularly reserved and ladylike, a great favorite with both papa and myself."

Makes Hair Grow

J. S. McKEOWN HAS AN INVIGORATOR THAT MAKES HAIR GROW IN ABUNDANTLY OR MONEY BACK.

If your hair is thinning out gradually it won't be long before the bald spot appears.

The time to take care of the hair is when you have hair to take care of.

For thin falling hair the best remedy known to mankind is Parisian Sage. It is compounded on scientific principles and furnishes to the hair root a nourishment that acts quickly and promptly and causes the hair to grow.

But remember this: It kills the dandruff germ, the pest that appropriates all the natural nourishment that should go to the hair root

Parisian Sage is sold by J. S. McKeown under a positive guarantee to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It gives to women's hair a lustre and radiance that is most fascinating and causes it to grow abundantly.

Parisian Sage is now sold in every first-class town in Canada. A large generous bottle costs only 50 cents, and the girl with the auburn hair is on every bottle.

FIGHTING A CROCODILE.

An Exciting Adventure in a Chinese Timber Camp.

A chance visitor to a Chinese timber camp has related in Chamber's Journal an extraordinary adventure with a crocodile, in which the crocodile came very near having the best of it: "Arriving in my boat at the little jetty or landing place, I was astonished to find Graham, the white man in charge of the camp, lying on a rattan couch within a few yards of the bank, with a heavy express rifle across his knees, gazing intently at a rough fence erected in the stream.

"Throwing myself down near him in the welcome shade, I learned the following story:

"Two nights before Graham was sleeping peacefully in his little palm leaf house in a clearing about twenty yards from the river bank, when his dog began to growl. Graham turned out and walked round the hut to ascertain the cause of the disturbance, but, seeing nothing, addressed himself to the dog in his usual vigorous sailing ship language and retired to bed again.

"Five minutes later he was once more aroused by a yelp from the dog, and this time, really annoyed, he seized a stick and sallied forth to inflict punishment on the disturber of his dreams. Suddenly a dark form glided swiftly from the shadows and Graham felt himself seized by the right knee as in a vise. Stooping to free himself, he found he was in the grip of a large crocodile, whose teeth were firmly embedded in the flesh.

"Backward and forward the struggle swayed, the crocodile striving to pull its destined victim to the water's edge and Graham, hampered as he was by his imprisoned leg, fighting for his life to reach higher ground. At last the beast, hurling its victim to the ground with a shake of its powerful head, began to drag him swiftly toward the water.

"Poor Graham, feeling, as he expressed it, that it was 'all over bar the shouting,' determined to make one last effort for his life, and, taking advantage of a momentary halt as the brute was steering past a tree stump, he sat up and succeeded in getting both his thumbs into the reptile's eye sockets—the only vulnerable part of a crocodile's head.

"The rest of the story is perhaps best told in Graham's own words, or as nearly as circumstances will permit:

"'As soon as I gets my thumbs made fast in 'is eyes, 'e opens 'is mouth to shout an' lets go my leg. Then first thing next mornin' the coolies lays 'is breakfast for 'im, as you see, an' I gets into this chair an' 'ere I stays, if it's a month.'

"Vainly I tried to persuade him to come away with me to the next station and see a doctor. I argued with him, I implored him, but it was absolutely useless. He refused to move from that chair till he had bagged his crocodile, and I was at last obliged to leave him, having dressed his leg and exhausted every known means of persuasion short of brute force.

"I met him again a week later in a hospital bed, suffering severely, but quite happy in the knowledge that the bones of that crocodile were bleaching in the sun outside his house."

Books of the Old Testament.

The Great Jehovah speaks to us
In Genesis and Exodus;
Leviticus and Numbers see,
Followed by Deuteronomy;
Joshua and Judges sway the land,
Ruth gleans a sheaf with trembling hand;
Samuel, and numerous Kings appear,
The Chronicles we wondering hear;
Ezra and Nehemiah, now
Esther, the beauteous mourner, show;
Job speaks in sighs, David in Psalms,
The Proverbs teach to scatter alms;
Ecclesiastes now comes along,
And the sweet Song of Solomon;
Isaiah, Jeremiah then
With Lamentations takes his pen;
Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea's lyres
Swell. Joel, Amos, Obadiah's
Next, Jonah, Micah, Nahum come
And lofty Habakkuk finds room,
While Zephariah builds the walls,
And Malachi, with garments rent,
Concludes the ancient Testament.

The Certainty of Fate.

The Mohammedans have a fable which they repeat to illustrate the certainty of fate.

A sultan was once asked by his favorite, the grand vizier, for permission to leave at once for Smyrna, although a brilliant court fete was then in progress. Upon being asked his reason for such haste the vizier replied:

"Because I just saw the angel of death yonder in the crowd. He looked at me so earnestly that I know he has come for me. I wish to escape him."

"Go! Go at once!" said the sultan, who then beckoned to the angel and asked why thel atter had looked so earnestly at the vizier.

"I was wondering," replied the angel of death, "why he was here, for I have orders to kill him in Smyrna."

A Stroke of Business.

A writer who was very intimate with Frank R. Stockton says that when the Stockton family lived in Bucks County, Pa., Frank and his brother had a dog which they trained solely to hunt cats. The brothers were overhauled one day by a farmer whose cat they were chasing. To placate the farmer they gave him a dollar for a pig, which they took home. By driving away their father's pigs at feeding time they soon made their own the fattest pig in the pen and sold him at a profit of $7. Frank R. Stockton always considered the deal a tribute to his business acumen.

"[illegible]," said the barber, deftly rubbing the lather into the scalp of the patron, "I was ship's barber on a transpacific steamer for five years until the ship was wrecked and I was cast away on an island in the south seas. I lived there for two years and never saw a human being, but when I was rescued I flatter myself I was a better shampooer than ever. I kept in practice all the time."

"How did you manage it?" asked the patron.

"I shampooed the cocoanuts."—Life.

Board of Education

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening, at which Messrs. W. S. Morden, J. H. Anderson, C F. Sharpe J. Rabbitts, J. F. Wills, T. E. Ketcheson, G. A. Bennett, W S Smith, B. Mallory, J. L. Tickell, W. N. Ponton, F S. Deacon and P. Harrison.

The business transacted was purely of a routine nature

Mr. E. F. Milburn wrote the Board thanking them for an increase in salary.

REPORTS.

Mr. H. J. Clarke, Inspector, presented a lengthy report detailing his inspection of the various schools of the city.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of the following accounts:

Miss Young	$ 14.00
Mail Printing Co.	4.66
C. B. Scantlebury	11.57
R. Snook	2.00
Brass and Steel Goods	1.85
T. A. Cargill	15.25
Jas. Rodgers	30.75
Jas. Colling	32 40
H. J. Clarke	26.79
W. W. Knight	28.95

M. W Mott	4.00
C. F. Simpkins	2.00
C. N. Sulman	71.41
Geo. Martin	1.50
Ritchie Co.	.50

The Board went into committee of the whole, Mr. Anderson in the chair.

The Finance committee's report was adopted without discussion.

The Inspector's report re entrance examination showed that of the 95 pupils recommended by teachers for entrance examination into High School only 31 has passed. The arithmetic paper appeared to be the confusing paper.

After a brief discussion during which some of the members were inclined to find fault with the teachers, Mr. Wills moved, seconded by Mr. Deacon, that the Examiners report be referred back to that board to see if some who had failed in the total number of marks through failure in one subject could not be recommended by the Examiners and endorsed by the Minister of Education.

The motion was adopted.

In answer to an enquiry from Mr. Smith it was shown that the average attendance at Grier street school was 127.

A By-law calling upon the Township of Thurlow to raise by levy $903.14 as their share towards the city school tax was passed through its various stages and numbered.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Mr. Rabbitts gave a verbal report of the visit of a number of the members of the Board to Trenton to inspect the new public school recently erected there. It was an up-to-date building in every respect and cost $22,000.

The matter of asking for tenders, etc., in regard to building a new public school here was on motion left in the hands of the Sites, Building and Repairs Committee.

The Supplies Committee was given power to purchase coal from the lowest tenderer. Mr. Mallory, the chairman of that committee, stated that Mr. Downey was the lowest tenderer.

A resolution was passed authorizing the expenditures of $20 or flags to be used on the school buildings during the Old Boys' Reunion.

Board adjourned.

THE FORMULA OF "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Is On The Outside Of Every Box For All The World To See

Every user of "Fruit-a-tives" knows exactly what is being taken. The formula of this famous fruit medicine is printed plainly on the outside of every box. We have stated many times—and now state clearly—that "Fruit-a-tives" is made of the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, with valuable heart and nerve tonics and antiseptics.

Everyone knows that fruit juice is healthful—but perhaps some do not understand why this is true.

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet principle, and 1% of a bitter substance. It is the quantity of bitter principle in fruit that gives the fruit value as a medicine. An eminent physician of Ottawa, after years of experimenting, found a method of increasing the bitter principle in fruit juice, thus increasing the medicinal or curative qualities.

The juices are first extracted from fresh, ripe oranges, apples, figs and prunes. By a secret process, some of the sweet atoms are replaced by the bitter principle. Then tonics and antiseptics are added, and the whole made into tablets, now known far and wide as "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit juices, and is one of the few remedies that have let their composition be known from their introduction to the public.

"Fruit-a-tives" is nature's stimulant for the liver, bowels, kidneys and skin. In cases of obstinate Constipation, Liver Trouble, Indigestion, Backache, Rheumatism, Headaches and Impure Blood, this wonderful fruit medicine cures when everything else fails.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold everywhere at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c., or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Priests Fought Burglars.

New York, July 9.—Three masked burglars, intent on cracking a safe and getting $500 in cash and other valuables belonging to the church, were caught at work at the rectory of St. Leonard's Roman Catholic Church in Brooklyn yesterday.

Three priests bravely sprang to the defence of the church's treasures, and attacked the robbers. Thugs and churchmen battled for more than a quarter of an hour before the issue was decided in favor of the priests. The burglars fled.

As a result of the encounter, Fathers Konig and Oppel are suffering from severe bruises on their heads and arms, and Father Sanders has a long knife cut in the hand, received in a final grapple with the marauders, when one of the masked men held the pursuers at bay near a window, while his two pals escaped.

Quebec C.N.R. Terminus.

Quebec, July 9.—Following the decision of the City Council to take action to force the Canadian Northern Railway to reimburse to the city $200,000 granted on certain conditions that were not fulfilled, Messrs. Mackenzie and D. D. Mann have assured the municipal representatives that the C.N.R. is looking forward to fulfill the conditions.

Quebec, said Mr. Mackenzie, has always been held in view by the C.N.R. as its eastern terminus. A new bridge over the St. Charles River and a grain elevator are contemplated.

Money Lenders Suspended.

Ottawa, July 9.—Employes of the Printing Bureau, who do a petty business as moneylenders, are figuring considerably in the enquiry which Hon. Charles Murphy is making. The suspension of four of them was announced yesterday. Two are laid off for a week and two for four days. They have been loaning little amounts to fellow-employes and charging very liberal interest.

Need More Elevators.

Montreal, July 9.—C. C. Ballantyne, harbor commissioner, returned yesterday from the western wheat fields, firmly convinced that the elevators at the disposition of trade at the port here will very soon prove insufficient to meeting the growing demand of the rapidly accumulating business. The Grand Trunk elevator, with a capacity of one million bushels, and the harbor commissioners', with a like capacity, are both crowded, together with the capacity of the floating storage of the port crowded to the extreme limit.

Turkish Troops Mobolizing.

Constantinople, July 9.—The entire Turkish third army corps is to-day mobolizing for a speedy transfer to the frontier, owing to the discovery of uniformed Greek regulars among the raiders who have been creating havoc on the frontier.

A Three-Year Term.

Woodstock, July 9.—Frank N. Scott, for shooting Mrs. McBride, was sentenced yesterday to Kingston Penitentiary for three years.

Damage Will Be $2,000,000.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., July 9.—Forest fires in Northern Wisconsin are daily becoming more threatening. Hundreds of persons are now homeless and the damage is well towards $2,000,000 for the summer.

Ran Into Track Slide.

Keewatin, July 9.—About 4.30 yesterday morning a westbound freight ran into a track slide at War Eagle, five miles west of here.

The engineer and fireman jumped. No one was injured.

DROUGHT HURTS CROP

Outlook Said to Be Very Bad in Manitoba.

Bulls Have Control on Winnipeg Grain Exchange — Many Districts Are Badly Parched and Hay Crop Is a Failure—Farmers Are Beginning to Worry About the Winter's Feed.

Winnipeg, July 9.—Partly owing to the furious wordy warfare of the election campaign, and partly because there is so little good to report, the local press has little to say regarding the condition of the crop in this province.

At the Grain Exchange, however, the bulls have it all their own way. "The Manitoba crop will not average ten bushels," said one big operator yesterday afternoon. "Condition of spring wheat is nearer 50 than 60, the lowest in years, and every twenty-four hours of heat and no rain is making it worse."

That may be an extreme view, but it is certain no one is looking for anything like an average crop this year. Even Brandon district, which was among the optimists till a few days ago, now is talking of grain being baked up.

Conditions of course vary largely, according to district and soil, and in some parts of Southern Manitoba farmers are already plowing under spring wheat. On light lands there will not be much of a crop to harvest. Some heavy lands, which have succeeded in retaining what little moisture there has been, are showing better, but on these grain is maturing too rapidly for even an average yield. The hay crop will be a dead failure, and farmers are getting anxious about winter feed. For miles and miles the open prairie is yellow and parched, with sloughs dried up. The problem of watering cattle is already serious in many districts. Heavy rains right away and cooler weather would no doubt save the situation to a certain extent, but Manitoba is going to have the worst average wheat yield of any recent year.

Conditions are reported better in Saskatchewan, though the southeast of that province has suffered severely.

Southern Alberta appears to have been damaged by drought quite as badly as in this province, and further north conditions are better.

A great deal of misleading information is offered the public, and the weekly reports of the railway companies are not above suspicion of an attempt to keep up the flow of immigration by making the best of it. Official returns by the Provincial Governments are about due, and will throw a good deal of light on the situation.

Missing, May Be Drowned.

Kingston, July 9.—John Kelly, an inmate in Rockwood Hospital, is missing, and cannot be traced. It is feared he may have been drowned.

Emelian Krebreake, Russian, sent down from Hamilton for two years for wounding, was released from penitentiary yesterday, and will be deported.

HAYS ACCEPTS AWARD

G.T.R. President Promises Men's Demands Soon.

He Is Willing to Give Trainmen All the Increase Agreed on by the Conciliation Board and Will Give the C.P.R. Standard of Wages and Duties as Soon as G.T.P. Is Finished —C.P.R. a Richer Road.

Montreal, July 9.—The arrival of Charles M. Hays of the G.T.R. on the scene of action and his acceptance of the board of arbitration award, has added new interest to the negotiations with the unions, which have been carried on for several weeks past.

As for the C.P.R., there is nothing new. Negotiations are progressing satisfactorily, although there may not be any results announced for some days yet.

It may be also stated that no possible preparation for strike conditions are being made by either company, and there is not an iota of truth in the foolish report to the effect that the railways are on the lookout for strike-breakers. In the first place, neither the men or the railways look for anything like a strike, and if one did take place, the fact that four thousand men being involved makes the "breaking" of a strike impossible.

The G.T.R. men, being seen yesterday evening, said that they were not in a position to discuss Mr. Hays' proposition, but that they will no doubt be heard from the first of the week.

Yesterday President Hays of the Grand Trunk submitted a statement to the union officials, offering the wage increase granted by the conciliation board and promising the C.P.R. standard of wages as soon as through rail connections are made with the Grand Trunk Pacific, supposedly within two years, the G.T.R. being then able to participate in the higher traffic rates obtaining in the northwest. Failing acceptance by the employes, the company are willing to submit the whole question to a board of arbitrators, composed of experienced railway men, with the obligation on the company's part to abide by the result of such arbitration, conditional only upon the employes in question agreeing to do the same.

"The point at issue is the standardization of rules and rates of pay, and we are asked to pay the same rates as have recently been granted their employes by the Baltimore & Ohio, the Erie, the New York Central and other trunk lines," said Mr. Hays. "Standardization of rates of pay can be equitable only under standardization of earnings. The Grand Trunk system occupies a territory where the density of traffic is very much less than that in the territory occupied by the roads with which it is desired to have standardization of wages.

"The annual gross earnings per mile of the roads named are each more than double those of the Grand Trunk Railway. Our ability to pay, therefore, is limited accordingly. It would be as reasonable to ask an individual with an income of $3,000 per annum to standardize his expenditure with those of an individual with an income of $6,000 per annum.

"There has heretofore always been a differential between the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk in the matter of rates of pay and it is well known by the public in Canada why the Canadian Pacific has been able to pay a higher scale of wages than other roads. It has received much larger bonuses from the Canadian Government than any other railway; it has received larger grants of land which have increased enormously in value especially of recent years, since the entrance into the northwest of other railway companies; it has exemption from taxes; its rates are not subject to the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission on portions of its lines until it has earned 10 per cent. on its capital stock, and by reason of the larger part of its railway system being located in the Canadian Northwest, where a higher basis of freight and passenger rates obtain, its gross earnings have been in excess of those of other railways."

Military College Crowded.

Kingston, July 8.—Concerning a statement that the Royal Military College is too crowded to admit all eligible entrants, Lt.-Col. Crowe, the commandant, says:

"We are admitting 36 candidates; we had 26 retirements with the close of the last term. Of those who will not enter are three who passed the examinations, but are under age. They were told they would only be allowed admission if room permitted. Two who passed are not coming, and four university matriculants cannot be accommodated. I would like larger quarters for next term. I will have 68 cadets occupying 34 rooms. I would have liked to have had 68 separate rooms."

Gored to Death by Bull.

Halifax, July 9.—Daniel J. McDonald of Loch Lomond was gored to death by a bull while feeding his cattle in the pasture yesterday. McDonald made a desperate effort to escape, but finally was torn to shreds.

Irving Kemp, a German miner, employed by the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Co., at Sydney Mines, was instantly killed yesterday by a fall of coal.

Posed as Man to Save Sister's Honor.

London, Eng., July 9.—The officials conducting the inquest into the death of "Harry Lloyd," a strange woman, who for thirty years posed as the husband of her sister, expressed the opinion yesterday that the woman had practiced the deception to save the honor of her sister, and of the latter's daughter.

King Edward's Faith.

London, July 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In a letter published from the Archbishop of Canterbury to the Dean of Quebec, referring to a paragraph in a New York paper reporting that Edward VII. died a Roman Catholic, the archbishop says it is a report both preposterous and baseless.

VOL. 43 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, JULY 11, 1910. NO. 260

TO TAKE STRIKE VOTE.

Grand Trunk and Central Vermont Trainmen Reach Crisis.

Montreal, July 11.—The rather startling news is given out that a strike vote will be taken this week by the trainmen of the Grand Trunk and Central Vermont systems.

It will be remembered that after deciding to accept the arbitrators' award, Chas. M. Hays, upon his return from the west, changed his mind and asked the men to negotiate. This they have to-day absolutely refused to do and have notified the Grand Trunk authorities to this effect.

All the Grand Trunk men who have been here during the negotiations, left for their respective homes yesterday, and the vote will be submitted to the men during the week. As for the C.P.R., negotiations, it is understood, that matters are progressing favorably.

It is stated by Vice-President Murdock of the trainmen that this proceeding is really a formality in accordance with the conservative methods of the Trainmen's Union. A new position was created by the G.T.R. accepting the majority report of the Board of Conciliation and the further proposition of Mr. Hays, and the general committee considered that before going any farther in the matter it would be the part of wisdom to consult the men. Although this is done, the members of the general committee stated that they had not the slightest doubt as to the answer, and that the Grand Trunk men would stand solid for their demand for the full standard wage for the territory east of Chicago.

In addition to this the committee refused the suggestion of Mr. Hays that the matter be referred to an arbitration of experts, arguing that the matter had been already thoroughly arbitrated and such further procedure would be a waste of time. Another new aspect to the position was the addition of the Central Vermont to the dispute as an appendage of the Grand Trunk, and a strike vote on the proposition will also be taken this week from the 350 employes of that line, when it is expected that they will fall in line with the other Grand Trunk men.

The question to be submitted to the men all over the Grand Trunk System is, "Are they willing to accept the offer of President Hays, or are they ready to do as they expressed themselves on the previous vote and stand behind their general committe to the utmost extent in insisting upon the adoption of the eastern association standard wage?"

Both Sides Confident.

Winnipeg, July 11.—The eve of the election sees both sides very confident of the result. Ten seats is the most the Conservative organizer last night would concede the Liberals, while the Premier predicts that the Opposition will have but eight. The Opposition on the other hand claim they will have two or three majority. The general feeling is that the Government will be returned with possibly a slightly decreased majority. Conservatives concede that Hon. G. R. Coldwell is liable to be beaten in Brandon. George Steel, Cypress River, who opposed the Government elevator bill, is also in danger. South Winnipeg is also another seat which is likely to go Liberal.

Last night the Conservatives claimed that the G.T.P. is taking too active a hand in the election, and that in Lansdowne constituency particularly, where there is a G.T.P. divisional point, Rivers, many Conservative votes have been sent out of the constituency.

Nearly Came to Blows.

Quebec, July 11.—In the presence of a large audience at Beauport yesterday afternoon, F. D. Monk placed the naval policy before the people as something of more interest to them than appeared from simple enactment of Parliament. He spoke for an hour and his language was moderate, there was running through it an undertone of gravity, accentuated by references he made to his health and to the loss of personal friendships suffered for taking a position which he believed to be in the interest of Canadians.

J. Turcott, federal member for Quebec County, was permitted to speak in defence of the Government. He had the imprudence to make reflecting comments on Armand Lavergne, who resented the insinuation and for a moment or two the bystanders had to exercise themselves quickly to prevent a personal encounter.

Outwitted Bandits.

St. Louis, Mo., July 11.—Cleverness on the part of the engineer prevented three youthful bandits from robbing the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Southewestern "flyer" near Laimore, early yesterday. The bandits, with revolvers, compelled Engineer Quinn and the fireman to descend from the cab and go with them to the baggage car, to assist in uncoupling it.

While tinkering about the coupling the engineer and fireman, in the darkness, managed to glide away from the bandits and ran toward the cab. The bandits shot at them, but they jumped into the cab, and the engineer threw the throttle wide open and dashed away with the train.

The Cotton Crop.

New Orleans, La., July 11.—The Times-Democrat will to-day publish the following summary based on reports of its special correspondents concerning the cotton crop of 1910:

"The reports indicate favorable progress in the states of Oklahoma and Texas and distinct deterioration through the remainder of the belt.

"In the west the fields as a rule are clean and well worked. A general rain would prove beneficial."

TWO MORE DROWNED

Canoeist and Bather Claimed by Waters in Toronto.

James Furness, Aged Sixteen, Gets Beyond His Depth at One of the Most Dangerous Points on Humber River—Howard Hill Rents a Canoe and It Is Found Later on Humber Bay Beach.

Toronto, July 11.—Six drownings in eight days is a sad record for Toronto. The bay claimed one, the lake two, the Humber River two, and a brickyard pond the other.

Two more victims have been claimed by the water. They are:

Howard Hill, 103 Givens street, upset while canoeing in the lake; body not found.

James Furness, 2 Geoffrey street, while bathing in the Humber.

Only five days after, and in exactly the same spot in the Humber River where young Arthur Burt came to his death, James Furness was drowned yesterday afternoon at about 2 o'clock while bathing, about half a mile up from the mouth of the river, at the spot known as Dead Man's Point.

Furness, who was 16 years old, was bathing with another lad considerably younger, when he got beyond his depth. He could not swim at all and sank at once. The body came up twice, but no one but the small companion, who also was unable to swim, was at hand.

G. Arrowsmith and Fred Devereaux were dragging for a pouch which had been lost in the river but a short time before by one of the York Radial conductors who had been upset from a canoe, but a little distance away. These two men were summoned, but it was 20 minutes before the body was recovered. Drs. A. C. Ricker and Forbes Godfrey were on the spot almost at once, but resuscitation was impossible.

Dr. Ricker will hold an inquest at Humber Bay to-night at 8.30, and much stress will be laid upon the frequency of such accidents at this very dangerous point, with a view to having the city or county authorities install some kind of life-saving station at this point.

The deceased had only been out in this country a little over three weeks, and had been living with his sister at 2 Geoffrey street. He was employed by the Eaton Co.

Howard Hill, living at 103 Givens street, was drowned in the lake an Saturday night. A canoe containing a coat and hat was discovered opposite Stop 6, just west of the mouth of the Humber, at about 11.30 p.m. The find was reported to Constable Simpson, and the canoe identified as one hired from O. L. Hicks' boathouse during the day. Papers in the pocket of the coat pointed to its owner being Hill, and the hat was also identified on Sunday by the young man's father. Mate Aykroyd has not yet succeeded in finding the body.

More Heads Fall.

Ottawa, July 11.—The announcement that the Printing Bureau will have a new superintendent of printing, as well as a new superintendent of stationery, to succeed Frank Gouldthrite, the unfortunate official who committed suicide, has caused a good deal of talk in the capital.

Wm. C. McMahon, the superintendent of printing, whom, it is assumed, the Minister proposes to superannuate, is widely known in the capital.

It is assumed that if the Secretary of State proposed to have a new superintendent of printing there will be other sweeping changes at the bureau, and that many heads are likely to fall. To-day it is reported that two additional members of the bureau staff, holding subordinate positions, received their dismissals on Saturday, and the expectation is that, as the enquiry proceeds more heads will fall into the basket.

Just when Mr. Murphy will be ready to take the public into his confidence as to the progress of the enquiry is not known, but it is probable that a statement will be given out before the end of the week.

Deaths From Heat.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 11.—Ten deaths and many prostrations occurred here yesterday as a result of the excessive heat. The humidity was 85 during the morning hours, and the mean temperature for the day was 84. The maximum temperature, 93, was recorded at 4 p.m.

New York, July 11.—This was the hottest day of the year in New York. Ten persons died from the heat and three others went mad. The list of prostrations was long, but not so heavy as Saturday.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., July 11.—This city experienced yesterday the hottest day of the year. Street thermometers registered over a 100 in the shade. Two deaths were indirectly caused by the heat.

Middleton, N.Y., July 11.—The thermometer touched 102 degrees in the shade yesterday afternoon, and reached 104 in the neighboring towns of the country.

Will Carry Out Instructions.

Ottawa, July 11.—Capt. J. E. Bernier of the Canadian Government steamer Arctic, which sailed from Quebec on Thursday on a two months' cruise of northern waters, wired Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries from Father Point, as follows:

"I regret that your duties prevented you coming to Quebec, as you had intended, to express good wishes. Be assured that I will endeavor to follow to the fullest degree the instructions which you have given."

Pugsley to Open Locks.

Ottawa, July 11.—Hon. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, left yesterday for Winnipeg, to attend the opening of the St. Andrews locks on Red River. The ceremony takes place on Thursday next.

Prominent London Merchant Dead.

London, Ont., July 11.—Wm. H. Smith, formerly a prominent hardware merchant in this city, died at his home here yesterday, aged 53 years. He has been ill for some months, but his death was unexpected.

Boy Killed by Muskoka Express.

Bradford, July 11.—Earle Saint, aged 11, was killed by the northbound Muskoka express here. He was standing on the main line trying to hand a lacrosse stick to one of the players on the train going to Newmarket.

NEW HOPE IN WEST.

Showers In Manitoba Cause More Optimistic Outlook.

Winnipeg, July 11.—Cooler weather and showers over the greater part of the province have characterized the past forty-eight hours, with the result that a distinctly more optimistic tone is prevalent regarding spring wheat prospects in Manitoba.

"The wonderful recuperative properties of the soil are felt now," said the representative of a leading elevator interest yesterday, "and provided conditions continue as at present, the next week or two will see a remarkable recovery. Of course, the droughts and burning heat accomplished its work in some districts, where land is light and showers have been few.

"No doubt considerable areas of spring wheat are or will be plowed under, but much of the heavy land, which is the backbone of Manitoba wheat production, is well capable of supporting the unusual drought and of returning in the end a fair average yield. It depends entirely on the weather conditions of the balance of the month. People who are now talking of the very considerable failure in Manitoba will get a big surprise if we have right weather conditions with general rains."

The encouraging note finds expression further west, and reports from the older settled districts of Saskatchewan in particular are encouraging.

Dr. Cook In Chilean Andes.

New York, July 11.—Another traveler has come back from South America with tales of the vanished polar explorer, Dr. Fred. A. Cook. This time it is Dr. Robert N. Kelley of Philadelphia, and he brings a photograph to prove his tale. Dr. Cook shows in the print without the moustache he had when he toured the country giving lectures.

"The doctor keeps very much to himself," he explained, "and avoids Americans whenever possible. He is living in Cumbre, 12,800 feet up in the Chilean Andes. I believe he will stay there until he can come back with some sort of proofs."

Hitch In Bank Merger.

Montreal, July 11.—There is a hitch between the Royal Bank of Canada and the Union Bank of Halifax about a difference of opinion over the value of certain assets of the latter institution. It was stated here yesterday that a leading official of the Canadian Bankers' Association would have to be called in to act as arbitrator.

Wm. Robertson and E. L. Thorne, president and general manager of the Union respectively, arrived here yesterday, and will meet the Royal people to-day, when further progress, so it is said, will be made in the negotiations.

Drowned With Stones In Pocket.

Inglewood, July 11.—The corpse of a man about 35 or 40 years of age was found in the Credit River, one mile north of Inglewood, on the farm of W. Kidd Saturday, by Mr. Hooper, a neighbor. A stone was found in each pocket and one tied around the neck with a handkerchief. A black christy hat found on the band has the name Phillips written on the sweatband.

Daughter of Ex-M.P. Killed.

Neepawa, Man., July 11.—Bessie Crawford, eldest daughter of John Crawford, ex-M.P., was instantly killed Saturday afternoon in an automobile accident, within a block of her home. She was driving the car, and, it is supposed, set the break too heavy when going at a high rate of speed, the machine upsetting.

BELLEVILLE UPLIFT.

It is within your power to help make Belleville "A Bigger and a Better Belleville," and to make it better than any other town. BOOST, DON'T KNOCK.

Robert Lewis Stevenson tells a pointed story of a citizen and a traveller:

"Look round you," said the citizen, "this is the largest market in the world."

"Oh, surely not," said the traveller.

"Well, perhaps not the largest," said the citizen, "but much the best."

"You are certainly wrong there, said the traveller, "I can tell you—"

They buried the stranger at dusk. That's the way KNOCKERS in Belleville should be treated. NEVER KNOCK, Always Boost!

Here is a chance to help your own home town. Always boost, never knock.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign Notes

Well, we had another innings at the midday business men's lunch Saturday and found it up to standard test. We like to get in a hurry order for another bit of the pumpkin pie. Kindly have the thin end about an inch wide. "Please."

There were a lot of surprises sprung on the meeting Friday. The captains of teams would get up in a modest, apologetic sort of way and with a voice full of emotion and potato salad would announce they had only been able to corrall $763.00 from Thursday noon until Friday. Sad conditions of affairs eh!

Think of it, another $4,000 pledge from Thursday until Friday and not a drop of perspiration to show there had been a struggle for it.

I would like to take the captains of the ten teams into partnership and start a flying machine factory over on Stoney Lonesome. They could sell enough stock in two weeks to make the promoters independent.

And what about the lad less than 15 years of age who reported 46 subscriptions of $1 each. If you have any prize "colts" to put up against this chap just lead them out into the ring where they can be seen. He's a wonder, and no wonder, for his father is a bigger wonder.

In the absence of "Billy" Deacon, Mr. Sinclair was acting chairman, and as usual, was making about 3200 revolutions a minute. He called on Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who had honored the "Workers" with his presence to make a few remarks, which he did in his witty and pleasing manner. In passing it might not be too much to say that Belleville is fortunate in having a citizen whom all ages and classes so delight to honor, and who is ready always in a substantial way to give aid to all worthy objects. If a permit from the writer will help Sir Mackenzie to attain to 125 years he can have it on application.

I have it from the "Never Err" information bureau that the comet is likely to return in October with a new tail composed of things which cannot be mentioned in print for fear of causing spontaneous combustion, and consequent destruction of the newspaper offices. This is not intended to cause any undue anxiety, but it might be well if you had it in your heart to give a few hundred to any philanthropic, or, other movement, to arrange it now, it might sort of square up a few other things you should have done but didn't.

It is wonderful what a softening influence this campaign has had on the moneyed people of this city. Why, they are so tame now you can almost go up and take money right out of their pockets.

W. B. Don't let this comet suggestion worry you, you can fix it up all right. "Do it now."

Through Stephen Burrows' Esq. intimate acquaintance with Mr. W. D. Robb, superintendent of motive power of the G T. R., Mr. Burrows has been able to secure a subscription of $250.00 from Mr. Robb toward the new Y. M. C. A. building.

Wales Wants to Get on Flag.

London, July 11.—"Gallant Little Wales" is trying hard to get represented upon the Royal Standard, and claims that the red dragon of Wales should be emblazoned thereon, taking one of the two quarters which England selfishly uses for her three lions passant. With this object the Welsh members of Parliament have laid their claims before Premier Asquith, who has promised that it should be made known to the King.

PARK NINE VICTORIOUS

On Saturday afternoon a city baseball league match was played between the Park Nine and T. A. S. teams. It was played on Coleman flats diamond and was witnessed by many spectators. Not much interest was manifested in the match owing to its being too much one-sided. In the third innings the Park nine team made seven runs which gave them a decided lead. At the finish the score was 15 to 5 in favor of the Park Nine. Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire performing his duties satisfactorily. Phillips for the Park Nine pitched a good game, as did also Whalen for the T. A. S., but the latter was not well supported in the field. The line-up was as follows:—

PARK NINE		T. A. S.
Phillips	Pitcher	Whalen
Connolly	Catcher,	Champagne
Gerow	First Base.	J. Goyer
Reeves	Second Base.	McNabb
Connell	Third Base.	Kelleher
Smith	Short Stop	M. Goyer
Thomas	Right Field.	F. Goyer
Taylor	Left Fielder	Hogan

The score by innings was as follows:

Good Luck to the Deceased.

A former consul general at Shanghai tells of the interest evinced by a Chinaman of that city in the wedding ceremony of an English couple there.

At the conclusion of the usual western rites incident upon the departure of the happy couple for their honeymoon the Celestial sought the consul with this question:

"Why do occidentals throw rice after the departing couple?"

"I am not aware of the precise origin or significance of the custom," banteringly replied the official. "All I know is that it's meant for good luck."

"Then why," demanded the Chinese triumphantly, "do not you westerners throw rice after the hearse when there is a funeral?"

The Montreal Frauds.

The aldermanic frauds which were committed in Montreal, amounting, so reported the judge who made the investigation, to some $250,000, are still unpunished. Is it possible that the Montreal authorities look upon this kind of stealing by aldermen as a minor offence? Or are aping the policy and practice of the Laurier Government, of not punishing public thieves, though shown after investigation to be guilty? No other conclusion can be arrived at, as neither the local government nor the Montreal municipal authorities have taken any steps to bring the guilty parties to justice. On the contrary, they have allowed the time to lapse during which action could be brought against the culprits. The City Solicitor of Montreal, says the Star, "stated that in the case of civic employes no criminal action could be taken against them because the time had expired when such action could be legally taken, and that another lawyer connected with the law department of the city it was ascertained that the aldermen would be informed that no criminal action could be entertained against any of the ex-aldermen except one. This was because prescription could be pleaded by those whom Commissioner Cannon named in his report."

What must other countries think of Canada when they reflect that not one of the grafting thieves whose transactions were exposed by Judge Cassels in his investigation, have been punished by the Government add to this fact the Montreal alderman thieves and the world must come to the conclusion that the Laurier Government and Montreal are "two of a kind."

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

Sermon by
CHARLES T. RUSSELL
Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

"BE YE RECONCILED TO GOD."

Text, "You that were sometime alienated, and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled" (Colossians i, 21.)

Sunday, July 10.—Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle, New York, preached yesterday from the above text. He said in part:—

In order to use a telescope to advantage we need first to obtain a proper focus on the object to be examined. And so it is with the Divine Plan and Purpose. Looking at it with the eye of faith through the Telescope of God's Word, adjustment of the focus is necessary. This focusing of the Word, Christian people in the past have very generally overlooked. As a result the Divine Plan has a blurred and indistinct appearance to our sight. The various word-pictures, symbols, types, allegories and plain statements of the Scriptures without this focusing together, make a very unsatisfactory and nondescript matter of the Gospel of Christ, one that is unsatisfactory to everybody, one that the learned of our day have repudiated entirely — an ambiguous collation that is a source of vexation to millions of God's consecrated people. The difficulty is that the Telescope was tampered with during the dark ages and the proper focus was lost. Since then Christian people have feared to readjust it. They have gloried in the fact that some one else did change it for them long ago and that the unsatisfactory view we have gotten is the result of this and is entirely out of accord with the clear and beautiful vision of God's Grace and Truth and Mercy and Love and Wisdom and Power as seen by the Apostles in the early Church.

Some of us, dear friends, instead of throwing away the Telescope of the Word of God, are taking pleasure in cleaning the lenses of the dust of the dark ages and adjusting the focus by a careful endeavor to speak where the Word of God speaks and to be silent where it is silent, and to bring, as the Apostle suggests, our every thought into captivity to the will of God in Christ as outlined in the Bible. The result, we all can testify, is not only comforting, but happifying; not only enlightening, but refreshing. Truly, as the Apostle suggests, we have come to "Times of Refreshing from the presence of the Lord." And all this, we perceive, is exactly what the scriptures foretold, namely, that a falling away and darkening of the understanding would follow the death of the Apostles, but that in the end of the age the darkness would begin to scatter before the oncoming light of the Sun of righteousness, in the morning of the New Dispensation of Messiah's reign.

In accord with all this, note the fact that for centuries we have been overlooking certain Scriptures while accepting others. We accepted the Apostle's statement in our text respecting the reconciliation of the Church, but we overlooked entirely other Scriptures which speak of a still different reconciliation—"God through Christ reconciling the world unto himself" (II. Corinthians v, 19). We should have remembered the Lord's words, "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." We should have seen that the salvation and reconciling of the Church is one thing and the salvation and reconciling of the world is quite another thing; that these are two different salvations—the first to heavenly, spiritual conditions and joint-heirship with Christ in his Kingdom; the other to an earthly inheritance, to earthly perfection and life everlasting and an Eden that is to be world-wide—Paradise restored. God's footstool made glorious.

Nevertheless nothing has been lost. No feature of the Divine Plan has been thwarted, for these two salvations do not progress at the same time. During this Gospel Age none are saved, nor desirous to be saved, except those "drawn of the Father," "called of God." These have been privileged to approach God through the Son, whose name is "the only name given under heaven or amongst men whereby we must be saved" (Acts iv, 12). Only those who take up their cross and follow the Lamb through evil report and good report, faithful unto death, can now be spirit-begotten; in the resurrection, these will be spirit-born, members of the Bride of Christ, the Lamb's Wife and joint-heir with him in his Kingdom. It does not matter to the remainder of mankind that they have been allowed to remain in ignorance of the great fact that God is about to pour out upon humanity a great blessing; about to pour out his holy Spirit upon all classes; about to establish the Kingdom of his dear Son for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come"; about to cause the knowledge of the Lord to fill the whole earth; about to give to every son and daughter of Adam one full, fair, righteous opportunity to come to a knowledge of the Truth that they may be saved.

If the knowledge of God's grace has proven to be a grand, glorious, inspiring message to the sanctified in Christ Jesus, the Church of this Gospel Age, called to the heavenly calling, will not the message of reconciliation to the world, in due time, likewise bring to the world comfort, joy, blessing as they shall be invited to the earthly portion—to full restitution to human perfection—to all that was lost by Adam and that is to be recovered by the sacrifice of Jesus. No wonder the Scriptures assure us that the night of weeping is nearly over and the morning of joy already dawning! No wonder the Apostle declares that "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together," and that they are "waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God" (Rom. viii, 22, 19).

The work of this Gospel Age has been the calling, the testing, the proving, the fitting, the polishing of these sons of God for the glorious heavenly state to which they have been called. The Apostle urges that however humble the position of God's saints in the present life, "We know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." When he shall appear in his glory we also shall appear with him. When he shall reign as the King of kings and Lord of lords, when to him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, the elect Church, his Bride, will be with him in his Throne, sharers of his glory and participants in his work—the work of blessing and uplifting the world—reconciling the world to God.

Calvin, Knox and others of the reformers, we may then see, were quite right in their insistence that none at the present time are in a reconciled condition toward God except the comparatively few of our race—the saints. These turn from sin to righteousness, turn from disobedience to faith and consecration, and in and through the merit of the Redeemer are acceptable as probationary members of the elect Church. If faithful they will shortly, in the "first resurrection," constitute the Church of glory, the Bride, the Lamb's Wife and Joint-Heir.

Brothers Wesley, Whitfield and others were also right in their proposition that God was not content with electing merely a saintly handful, but surely loved the whole world and would surely give to every member of the race a full opportunity to come to a knowledge of Christ and to seek a share in the merit of his sacrifice for sins and an opportunity for life everlasting.

Those dear brethren contended earnestly with each other over their differences, the one upholding the doctrine of Election, the other contending for the doctrine of Free Grace. Now we see that both were right! Now we see that the election belongs to this Gospel Age and to the High Calling to the divine nature and that in an age following this Free Grace toward all of the race of Adam will prevail. "The knowledge of the Lord shall fill the whole earth"; "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess." Then those who, under the rule and assistance and uplifting influences of the "elect" will come into harmony with the Divine Law, will be blessed with full reconciliation to God and eternal life on the human plane—in Paradise restored—while the intelligently perverse, instead of being everlastingly tortured, as we had supposed, will, as the Apostle says, be punished with everlasting destruction (II. Thessalonians i, 9).

From this viewpoint the glory of our Redeemer and the glory of our heavenly Father are multiplied a million times. Our Redeemer not only is to be the Saviour of the "little flock," his Church, his Bride, on the spirit plane of glory, but additionally, through the agency of his Millennial Kingdom, he is to be the Saviour of the world. He "tasted death for every man," as the Scriptures declare, and, as they express it, "He shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied" (Isaiah liii, 11). Who could suppose that the Saviour would be satisfied with the result of his labor if only about one in a million, as members of his Church, reach the heavenly glory-land?

Who in our day could for a moment believe the suggestion of Brother Jonathan Edwards, the great New England preacher, who declared that the Lord and his saints would, together, look over the battlements of heaven at their neighbors and friends and children suffering an eternity of untellable torture at the hands of demons, and turn around and praise God the louder on this behalf? Poor Brother Edwards had, we believed, but a small conception of Divine Justice and Divine Love. And his difficulty was that he did not see what is now so distinct and clear to Bible students, namely, that the Bible Hell to which all humanity goes is not a place of torture nor of consciousness at all, but the grave, sheol, hades, the tomb.

Instead of Christ and the saints praising God because of the tortures of the poor groaning creation, the Divine program shines resplendently, showing us that the Redeemer and his Church will for a thousand years be engaged in a missionary work of the sublimest and most gigantic character—a work not only for a living remnant of the race, but one which will include in its blessing all the thousands of millions of humanity under the Divine sentence, "The wages of sin is death." Truly the Scriptures declare, As the heavens are higher than man's ways and God's plans loftier than man's conceptions.

Notice next the context. St. Paul, after mentioning Christ as the Head of the Body, the Church, who is the first-begotten, the first-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence, adds, "For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell," and that (after) having made peace through the blood of his cross by him to reconcile all things unto himself—both the things in earth and things in heaven" (Colossians i, 18-20). The Apostle indicates the great scope of Christ's work as it shall be eventually when finished. He is appointed of the Father to establish peace and righteousness throughout the Universe. But he has not yet accomplished all of this. He has only begun. He has died for the sins of the world, as well as for the sins of the Church. But he has not yet offered to Justice the satisfaction for the world's sins. He first appears before God as the great Advocate for the elect Church, "called" of God in advance to be "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife." Note how the Apostle expresses this thought in our text, verse 21.

"And you, that were sometime alienated, and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblamable and unreprovable in his (the Father's) sight, if ye continue in the faith," etc.

Who are these and why are they reconciled in advance of the remainder of the world—brought in advance into fellowship with the Father by the Redeemer as his Bride? These were by nature "children of wrath even as others." By nature they were alienated and enemies in their mind by wicked works. They were unlike the Redeemer, who was "holy, harmless and undefiled and separate from sinners." Why then did God's grace specially come to this class—to us who are of the Church of Christ, "accepted in the Beloved" one? What did we do or could we do to contribute to this favor of God bestowed upon us? The Apostle assures us further along the same line, that the elect Church by nature was not superior to the world from which it was selected. He declares that it contains not many great, not many learned, not many rich, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith, many of them ignoble as respects birth and natural advantages of heredity. The difference between these and others was, first, that they had "an ear to hear" the Divine message. Sometimes this hearing ear came to them through sorrow and tribulation. In their weariness and heaviness they heard the Master's voice, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden and I will give you rest" (Matthew xi, 28). They heard this voice, while some of their neighbors more favorably situated heard it not. But a still further blessing came to them as they responded and drew near to the Lord by faith and prayer.

Desiring to come nearer and nearer they strove to put away all filthiness of the flesh—sin in its every form—the while realizing that they could not cleanse themselves. Then it was that the Master informed them of the terms upon which they might join his Church—"The Body of Christ which is the Church." They must make full consecration of themselves to God and to righteousness, even unto death. They must do this with a full understanding that it would take them out of touch with the world and the spirit of the world, while bringing them into closer relationship with the Father and with the Son. They were assured that if they thus presented their little all to God in the Redeemer's name and merit, this great Redeemer would serve them as their Advocate with the Father and impute to them a sufficiency of the merit of his sacrifice to make good the deficiencies of their flesh. Thus only could the Father accept their sacrifice of the earthly nature and all of its rights and beget them with his holy Spirit to joint-heirship with their Redeemer in all the glories and honors and blessed services for the world in his Kingdom of Glory which is to be set up as soon as this Gospel Age shall have finished its work of gathering out of the world the elect.

Let it not be forgotten in this connection that when the world shall be reconciled to God in the future, the blessings of that reconciliation will come to them while still in their fallen state, to assist them to the recovery of all that was lost in Adam. Hence our influence even with the worldly should be to encourage them towards as high standards of righteousness as possible, knowing that whatever they may attain in the present life will be that much of an advantage to them in the future life, and that in proportion to their degradation will be their difficulties in connection with their restitution to perfection. So then godliness is profitable, not only for the life that now is, but also for that which is to come; not only for the saints who hope to be of the "little flock" and associated with Christ in his Kingdom, but also for the world of mankind, whose hope is to be blessed under that reign of righteousness and its uplifting influences.

Judges' Gowns.

The London Law Times points out that the silk gown of the bench and bar owes its original use to its having been adopted as a form of mourning at the death of an English sovereign. On the death of Queen Mary in 1694 the present silk gown was introduced as mourning and, having been found more convenient and less troublesome than the regular dress then worn, has since been continued. The late Sir Frederick Pollock is said to have expressed an opinion in reference to the ordinary costume of the bar that the bench and bar went into mourning at the death of Queen Anne and have so remained ever since. American courts adopted the gown along with the English common law.

Music In a Lunatic Asylum.

Sir Edward Elgar, the famous composer, probably owes a great deal of his success as a musician to heredity, for his father was an excellent musician, and he commenced life in a thoroughly sympathetic atmosphere. One of his first appointments was bandmaster to a local lunatic asylum, where he used to conduct an orchestra composed of the attendants, and in those days he thought nothing of writing a whole score of a piece for the princely sum of 35 cents.

Settled Him.

Robert Smith, brother of Sydney Smith and an ex-advocate general, on one occasion was engaged in an argument with a physician over the merits of their respective professions.

"I don't say that all lawyers are crooks," said the doctor in his final summing up, "but my opponent will have to admit that his profession doesn't make angels of men."

"No," quietly retorted Smith; "you doctors certainly have the best of us there."

Then He Quit.

A pretty little girl about five years of age named Rosa was teased a good deal by a gentleman visiting the family, who finally wound up by saying:

"Rosa, I don't love you."

"Ah, but you have got to!" retorted the child.

"How so?" asked the tormentor.

"Why," said Rosa, "you must love them that hate you, and I'm sure I hate you."

The Broken Trust

She could not help observing something quite new in his manner, a shade of triumph, a freedom as of some fear removed.

She said but little more to him, and Sir Alan left the house quite unconscious that he had left a most bitter enemy and determined foe behind him. When he reached home it was to find on his table letters which gave such information as made his return at next week's election sure.

Flushed with the double triumph he sat down and wrote at once to Lord Damar and Lady Blanche, urging his request that the marriage might take place soon.

Lady Blanche wrote two lines, saying the matter lay in her father's hands and she could not interfere.

Lord Damar wrote at greater length saying in his plausible, courtly way there were imperative reasones why the marriage should not take place yet and his dear Alan must wait a little while longer.

"He wants more money," said the baronet to himself, as he threw the letter impatiently down, wincing as he thought of the many thousands already lent, wondering how many more must follow, and firmly resolved to keep his purse tightly shut when once the marriage ceremony had taken place. "He wants money, but what does she want? I would give the world to learn how to make her happy."

A scene was being enacted in the rooms of Captain Vivian Chandos that laid the foundation to Sir Alan's ruin.

Mr. Grey had received the summons to attend the consultation with some little wonder and surprise.

"What can Captain Chandos want with me? 'Private and most important business.' Surely there is nothing wrong at Carsdale; the heir is steady enough."

Sir Alan Aynsley was a favorite of the old lawyer, and he was proud of him and considered him in some vague way his special protege.

He went to Captain Chandos at once and after a few words of greeting asked the meaning of the important business.

"I hope there is nothing wrong at Carsdale?" he asked, anxiously.

CHAPTER XXXII.

A Modern Portia.

"There is nothing wrong, I hope, at Carsdale?" repeated Mr. Grey, noting the blank expression on the face of Paul Westerne and the excitement of Captain Chandos.

"That is the very thing we want to see you about," said Vivian; "if this gentleman's suspicions are correct, there is something very wrong indeed and must be set right at once."

Mr. Grey looked very much astonished.

"Surely," he said, "Sir Alan has not got into the hands of the Jews. I thought him so very steady. Is he trying to raise money on the estate?

"The difficulty is not of that kind. We had better come to the point at once. You, of course, Mr. Grey, were amply satisfied with the proofs of Sir Alan's identity"

"His identity! I never dreamed of doubting it."

"Yet serious doubts have arisen on the subject," said Captain Chandos. "This gentleman, Mr. Westerne, was an intimate friend of the late Edgar Wayne. They lived at Wabash together; and Alan Wayne as a child was well known to Mr. Westerne and his daughter. They both declare now that the man calling himself Sir Alan Wayne is not the boy they knew at Wabash."

"But," cried Mr. Grey, "what proofs have they of this assertion?"

Paul Westerne handed him the little sketch, saying:

"I took this portrait of Sir Alan Wayne when he was a child, and the present Sir Alan does not bear the slightest resemblance to it."

"But," remonstrated the lawyer, "a man's face changes so—that is—perhaps neither you nor I retain our childish features."

"Possibly not; but how about the color of hair and eyes. You will see Alan Wayne's eyes are dark blue, his hair dark brown, and both, I promise you, are correct. Sir Alan Ansley has dark eyes and black hair. The sun may brown a man's face, but I defy it to change the color of his eyes," said Paul Westerne, impressively.

"Still, the evidence is so light to bring forward so serious a charge upon."

"There is more to follow," replied Mr. Westerne. "Believe me, Mr. Grey I like Sir Alan and I speak against my will. It will be a dark day for me if he turns out as I fear—an imposter. He is my best friend and patron; he has placed me on the road to fame and wealth and I am grateful to him. My interest is one with his, yet honor is honor, and I must speak the truth."

There was a quiet force and dignify about the artist that impressed Mr. Grey favorably.

Let me hear what other proors you have," he said.

Mr. Westerne told him all, of Alan and Edith's love, of her immediate recognition of the fact that he was not Sir Alan, and of her persistence.

"In the eyes of the law," he continued, "it may be slight evidence. I am ready to add my oath to it. I can recall the face of Alan Wayne, gentlemen; it was pale and earnest, with dreamy blue eyes and tender lips, the face of a man destined to die young yet withal there was something of the fire of his race in it—a face in all respects different from that of Sir Alan Aynsley."

"You say it will not be difficult to get witnesses from Wabash to prove what you suspect?" asked Mr. Grey.

"Not at all, if you require them. I think you will prove the fact without it."

"I have never been so surprised in all my life," said Mr. Grey. I cannot believe it. His papers were all right, he had all the certificates ,all my letters, both to Edgar and himself; he had the letter we wrote when Sir Edgar died; where could he have obtained them if he be not Sir Alan himself?"

"That remains to be proved," said Captain Chandos; "strange things are done in those wild countries. I pray Alan Wayne met with no foul play. It is not difficult in a place like Otana to kill a man and steal his papers."

Mr. Grey's face grew white with horror.

"My dear Captain Chandos," he cried, "you think and judge too quickly; the man may be an imposter, but he may not be a murderer; you must be calm. I cannot believe one word of it. Not only were his papers all right, but his handwriting was identically the same; and he knew all the particulars of the family. He cannot be an imposter. No man can play a part as he played it. He talked to me the first evening he came about his father and Carsdale."

"That is the very thing I want to know," said Vivian Chandos; "try to remember, Mr. Grey; on the first evening did he talk or did you? Did he first mention names and places, or did he skilfully draw you out—take the words out of your mouth and make them seem his own? Did he learn from you, do you think?"

"Upon my word, I can hardly tell. You see, we had no doubt; his conduced his papers and went through all straightforward. He came to us, produced his papers, and went through all the necessary legal forms. We never dreamed of doubting him. Why should we We wrote as we had written before, to Alan Wayne, and Alan Wayne came. I will think it over. I do remember one thing. At Carsdale, after dinner, Sir Alan asked me all particulars of his relations, saying that his father had been unwilling to name them. Another thing that struck me was, he did not in the east recognize his father's picture. I felt and expressed some surprise. He said his father's face had greatly altered with time and care."

"It seems to me," said Mr. Westerne "that the most direct way would be for some one to go to Otana, to see the place where Alan Wayne certainly lived, and make inquiries there as to whom he associated with."

"It would be a work of time," replied the lawyer, "but it is the best plan."

"I should propose looking over the papers again," said Captain Chandos. "Where are they?"

"In the strong room at Carsdale. I can have access to them, if you think it any use," replied Mr. Grey.

"I do, decidedly," replied Vivian. "Having, as you say, no doubt, you would naturally not look very closely into them."

"I was with Sir Alan when he put the letters and papers into the iron safe. There was a whole bundle of them. I do not now if he is aware that we have always had a duplicate key. But I cannot credit or believe it. There must be some mistake somewhere. I should like to see your daughter and examine her myself."

"That can be done at once," said the artist. "Let us go to my house now."

"Captain Chandos and I will follow," said the lawyer, with his habitual caution; "it might excite suspicion if we all went at once."

In a short space of time the three gentlemen met again in the artist's studio, and Paul Westerne summoned his daughter to appear before him.

There was no flush on Edith's calm face as she entered the room; even before she spoke Mr. Grey was favorably impressed by the calm, intelligent expression of her face.

A Point of Information.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the judge, "if the evidence shows in your minds that pneumonia was the cause of the man's death the prisoner cannot be convicted."

An hour later a messenger came from the jury room.

"The gentlemen of the jury, my lord," he said, "desire information."

"On what point, of evidence?"

"None, my lord. They want to know how to spell pneumonia."—London Answers.

What He Said.

"What do you think of this place?" asked the girl's brother.

"It's fine. Every prospect pleases," the young man replied.

"I heard mother telling father this morning that you had asked Dorothy to be your wife."

"Did you? What did he say?"

"What he said would make you go ahead and finish the quotation you began a moment ago about every prospect pleasing."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Little Curl.

There was a little girl,
And she had a little curl
Right in the middle of her forehead.
She wore it to a dance,
Where the blamed thing dropped by chance,
And the language that she thought was simply horrid.
—Punch.

Her Markswomanship.

The militia boys were going away to camp on the morrow, and as Lieutenant Wellington Grant Smith parted with his sweetheart on the piazza she said, "I shall stand here tomorrow as you march past and throw a kiss at you."

But her soldier lover said, "No, don't do that."

"Why not?" she asked.

"Because," laughed he, "ten to one you'd hit the captain."—Judge.

Tales of a Tail.

I've taken with a grain of salt
The wondrous things men do.
The speed they've made, the tales they've spun,
Have knocked me all askew,
But for the swiftest things afloat
That never seem to fail
Without exception are the yarns
About that comet's tail!
—Boston Herald.

Real Solicitude.

Husband—You are quite comfortable, dear?

Wife—Yes, love.

"The cushions are easy and soft?"

"Yes, darling."

"You don't feel any jolts?"

"No, sweetest."

"And there is no draft on my lamb, is there?"

"No, my ownest own."

"Then change seats with me."—Ideas.

Too Late.

The novelist laid out his course, on atmosphere intent,
Sought for the places reeking sin, the horrid, low and vile.
They had to let him gently know each wicked place he went
That others, seeking atmosphere, had beat him by a mile.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

No Cause For Delay.

"I sent for you, doctor, because you are famous as a specialist in cases similar to mine," said the sick man.

"Ah, I see," rejoined the noted M. D.

"But before we go any further," continued the patient, "I feel it my duty to inform you that $25 is all that I am able to pay you for your services."

"That being the case," said the great pill dispenser, "I'll have you on your feet by tomorrow."—Chicago News.

Not Reversible.

"A miss is as good as a mile,"
But I can assure you of this—
The rule worketh not t'other way.
So long as we've taste for a kiss
Nowhere lives a man who will say,
A mile is as good as a miss.
—Woman's Home Companion.

What Traveler Saw Abroad.

"So you think the Bluffers are faking about their extended European tour?"

"I should say so. They said there were so many Americans in Venice that many had to walk in the middle of the street."

"Well?"

"Why, the streets of Venice are canals."—Springfield Union.

The Only Change.

My ladylove is perfect quite.
Her name is Brown, her hair the same.
Her disposition's sweet and bright.
There's naught I'd change—except her name.
—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Place of Danger.

Employer—You have an excellent chance to grow up with the business, young man, and make something of yourself. It's all up to you.

Boy—I'd like de job all right, mister, but if you don't mind I'd just as lief stay at de bottom. You see, sir, I'm just a little leery about bein' one o' dem fellers "higher up."—Boston Herald.

Who dropped a big dynamite bomb,
And now in Mars

Supply and Demand.

There'd be no peekaboo stockings
Or peekaboo waists, so to speak,
Nor yet any peekaboo garments
Were there no peekaboo to peek.

A Trying Climate.

Water freezes every night of the year at Alto Crucero, in Bolivia, while at noonday the sun is hot enough to blister the flesh.

Comets.

Peoples in all times have been afraid of comets, and the dread of their approach has driven strong men to death. Hannibal and Mithridates committed suicide, and King Louis, the debonair, of France and Louise, mother of Francis I., died in sheer terror of the flaming portent. The great Charles V. became a monk because of one.

Chinese Drinks.

The national drinks of China are samshu, a kind of arrack, and hocshu, which looks and tastes much like sum, a peculiar kind of beer made from wheat malt.

The Dictionary.

"Neither is a dictionary a bad book to read," says Emerson in his essay on books. "There is no cant in it, no excess of explanation, and it is full of suggestion, the raw material of possible poems and histories. Nothing is wanting but a little shuffling, sorting, ligature and cartilage."

Gutta Percha.

Gutta percha is a poor conductor of electricity, for which reason it is most successfully used for insulation of electric cables and other electric conducts. Friction causes negative electrification.

Birds of Paradise.

Probably no famous bird has a smaller habitat than the bird of paradise. No one knows why the varieties of this beautiful bird are confined to the island of New Guinea and the neighboring coasts of Australia. There are many other islands not far away where the conditions would seem to be equally favorable to their existence, but they are not found among them.

Sundials In China.

The Chinese have carried the art of sundials to perfection. One Chinese watchmaker has arranged his front porch in such a way the shadow of the posts tells the time by which to regulate the watches.

Sense of Smell.

There is no end to the curiosities of smell. It is, for instance, the vapor of a liquid that smells and not the liquid in the mass itself. If eau de cologne be poured into the nostril the nose refuses to recognize any odor there at all.

Convicts In Norway.

The convicts of Norway are made to till the soil.

An Ancient Clock.

There is at Castletown, in the Isle of Man, a clock that was telling Manxmen the time of day before Oliver Cromwell was born, and there is a clock, it is said, still marking time at Castle Rushen which Queen Elizabeth herself presented to the owner of that castle.

High Winds In Scotland.

It is a common occurrence for a train to be brought to a standstill on the Scotch highlands by the force of the wind.

Pickled Statues.

The marbles in Westminster palace are treated to a bath once a year. They are first sponged off with water and then "pickled." This pickle consists of a solution of soft soap and sulphur, which removes the incrustations due to the smoke laden atmosphere and is said to do the marble no harm.

Chinese Newspapers.

The Chinese newspaper is generally printed on a roll, so that the purchaser may tear off and throw away that part which he has perused.

An English Borough.

In the days of "rotten boroughs" in England that of Gatton Park is said to have been the worst. It had only one qualified voter, and yet it returned two members of parliament. Of course with this right the property was very valuable, and in 1830 it was purchased by Lord Monson for $500,000. Two years later it was disfranchised.

The Tail of a Wolf.

The wolf carries its tail hanging down because in that position it is less conspicuous and better eludes detection. A family of wolves playing together undisturbed occasionally carry their tails curled upward.

Analysis of a Tear.

The chief element in the composition of a tear is water, but with water are associated minute proportions of salt, soda, phosphate of lime, phosphate of soda and mucus, and when seen under the microscope a tear after evaporation looks like a very small fish bone, owing to the salines forming themselves into lengthened cross lines.

Elephants In Liberia.

The virgin forests of Liberia contain thousands of elephants.

To Get Rid of Rats.

After all other remedies fail there still remains a way of getting rid of rats, and that is by depriving them of water. They can live for a very long time without food and when hard pressed will not hesitate to eat each other, but no rat can go twenty-four hours without drink. Therefore if every possible means of obtaining water is taken from the rats they will desert the vicinity.

The Dollar Mark.

The news writers have not yet learned that the expression "a rich farmer" has become just as redundant as "an old veteran."—St. Louis Times.

A new English electric heater consists of quartz tubes containing spirals of wire, the tubes becoming incandescent within a few seconds after the current is turned on.

A German investigation has shown that the efficiency of some electrical insulators, especially rubber, is greatly lessened by light. Wood and others are much influenced by moisture. All insulation decreases with rising temperature.

AFGHAN AMENITIES.

Jealous Natives Cut Off Their Wives' Noses.

Dr. Theodore L. Pennell, a medical missionary, lecturing at the Caxton Hall, London, recently, on his experiences among the wild tribes of the Northwest Frontier of India, said while at Bannu it was no unusual thing to be called upon to supply artificial noses for the wives of men who, in a fit of jealousy, had cut off the ends of the noses of their women folk.

One man who had cut his wife's nose off altogether was told by the doctor that, in order to make a good job of the repair, it would be necessary to send to England for an artificial nose.

On being told that the cost would be thirty rupees the man hesitated. Asked the reason of his hesitation, the man said, "Well, it's this way, sahib, I can get a new wife for eighty rupees." (Laughter.) "However," proceeded the doctor, "he agreed eventually to have the old wife patched up."

"Every year," he added, "we are called upon to make new noses, and some of the ladies are very well satisfied with the result."

Robbery and brigandage were the profession of some of the tribes, especially the Waziris. When a child was born his mother usually placed him in a hole in the wall of the mudhouse, and said to him, "Learn to be a thief." Thieving was largely done by digging under the walls of the mud-houses.

But the Waziris also had a sense of humor. Last year there was a big assemblage of chiefs at a certain centre to meet a political officer respecting the lawlessness of the tribes. Having been sumptuously entertained, they presented the officer with a beautiful antelope as a mark of appreciation.

Before the chiefs had reached their hills on the return journey a message arrived stating that an antelope had been stolen from the house of a Nawab.

Speaking of the blood feuds of the various tribes, Dr. Pennell said these were so intense that it was only possible to cultivate land within gunshot range of the villages, each of which possessed a gun tower with loopholes for firing. Each man worked in the fields with a rifle over one shoulder and cartridges in his belt, in order to be ready for all emergencies.

In such a district the advantages of European surgery were naturally much appreciated, and a doctor could pass from one tribe to another without fear; in fact, each tribe would provide him with an escort to the boundary of the next tribe.

Patients come to the hospital at Bannu from as far away as Cabul, and often there would arrive at the hospital a string of the blind, each holding on the other in front, and a man who could see a little leading the lot.

In the course of an interview with a reporter, Dr. Pennell gave another illustration of matrimonial jealousy among the border tribes.

"One day," he said, "an Afghan chief who had been across the border came back and saw his wife speaking to a man over the wall in his compound. He at once drew his sword, cut off his wife's head, and threw it to the man, saying, 'If you want to speak to her now, you can.'"

Many of the patients at the hospital are the victims of frontier raids. One man who was admitted there for treatment had been shot by his uncle. The bullet had gone through his lung, but careful nursing pulled him through.

"When he was convalescent," said Dr. Pennell, "he called me one day to his bedside and said, 'Oh, sahib, I want you to give me some cartridges.' I said, 'What do you want the cartridges for?' Pointing to his chest, he replied, 'I have this score to pay off.'

"I said, 'I am very sorry to hear that. We have had a difficult task to cure you, and now very shortly we shall have the same trouble with your uncle.' He said, 'Oh, no, you need not be afraid of that, sahib. I am a better shot than he is.' We did not get the uncle in, and we heard eventually that he had killed him."

Surrounded by Blacks.

A thrilling tale of five English officers and a few native troops having been besieged for three months by cannibal hordes comes from Obundu, in Southern Nigeria. The besieging Munchis are almost the only Nigerian tribe not subdued by British advance. They are tall, powerful savages, and fight with poisoned arrows and a long native sword. The Britishers had with them a company of the Southern Nigerian Rifles and two Maxim guns. The Munchis have been attacking them spasmodically for three months past, and for two weeks the troops had practically no rest. Three-quarters of the company were on outpost duty round the station, and the whole company were under arms every day from 3.30 a.m. till an hour after dark. One officer sat up every night and the rest slept in their clothes. On hearing of their straights a relief force of native troops was sent out from headquarters, which after a splendid forced march, covering 200 miles by river and 100 miles by road in 6 1-2 days, arrived in the beleaguered post.

Africa's Color Problem.

Replying to the toast of his health at a farewell banquet given by the Chamber of Mines at Johannesburg, Lord Selborne spoke about the colored races in South Africa who were not natives — people of partly white and partly black origin. He believed the tendency to drive colored people down to the position of Kaffirs was unjust and unwise, because they often had the thoughts and feelings of the white man, and, one day we might have to face a great concerted movement of native races. Lord Selborne prophesied that in the event of such a terrible catastrophe they would find the leader of the native races to be a colored man with the feelings, character, and superiority of the white man, if they persisted in the tendency to degrade the colored people to the condition of the natives.

Protestant Societies Attend Church

AND LISTEN TO A FORCIBLE AND ELOQUENT SERMON BY REV. R. C. BLAGRAVE — SYNOPSIS OF THE TROUBLE BETWEEN THE PAPACY AND THE PEOPLE.

At Christ Church yesterday morning a goodly number of the members of the Orange, 'Prentice Boys and True Blue, Societies attended divine service. The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, preached an appropriate discourse.

His text was from 2nd Samuel, 2nd Chapter and 5th verse:

> "And David sent messengers unto the men of Jabesh-Gilead and said unto them Blessed be ye of the Lord, that ye have shewed this kindness unto your Lord, even unto Saul and have buried him."

The King of England holds an office unique for its possibilities in the world. One monarch possesses a power which can be either tremendous in its range and intensity or of practically no account as the personality and power of the man are great or small. To a large extent Britain's subjects will remain loyal, but beyond certain bounds the break will be mighty. No position in the world has held, through so long a time and under such varied conditions, its prestige and power, with such unbroken continuity as the British monarchy. Time was when the King was absolute and the King's policy ruled the nation's life. The King's religion was the people's religion. Until the dawn of a new scholastic age and a new intellectual enlightenment this position was practically unquestioned. Hence through the control of the mighty power of Rome over the conscience of Britain's monarchs, the sway of the papacy in England was all but unchecked for four centuries. The popular voice of Britain's church and people made itself heard to some effect at Runnymede when the great charter of British liberties was forced upon a weak King. From that time on, and this was contemporaneous with the revival of learning the relation of the King and people was changed. The King might be a R.C. but the hand of Rome in the affairs of England must not be too conspicuous. The British were a tolerant people, a liberty loving people, a loyal people. They would waive their rights often, rather than stir up revolution. Yet great changes in the constitution of church or state could only be affected by their popular will. Thus it was that the conditions of things from John to Henry VIII., was toleraetd and thus it was too that Henry's resolve against the papacy, whatever might be the moral value of his motive was welcomed by the people. It was this freedom from the claims and pretentions of a foreign power, the national heart longed for. Hence it was that Mary's policy was repugnant to the British people to such an extent as to offer lives by the hundreds to vindicate their rights. Elizabeth reigned in love and power because she defended England against foreign usurpations. There was no power in the people's hands, save revolution, and England does not take readily to revolution. Cromwell weaned the British public by extremes in the opposite direction to Mary. The British public could not reform James IV's religion, because there was no such power in their hands. but English Bishops could refuse to read a proclamation made by the King against the law of the land, and could demonstrate to the King the unpopularity of his policy by the general voice of sympathy. Britain's monarchy is a powerful office and the monarch is a powerful man and Britain's public opinion is a fact that must to-day, and since the renaissance be reckoned with. Playing off between these two all down through history is the persistent, unwearying, diplomatic power of the papacy. Britain, tolerant, liberty-loving, unsuspecting, unconsciously pitted against Rome, narrow, bigotted, political, giving no quarter, and the great danger is that her love of liberty and justice may lead her into a tyranny from which she can only extract herself by violent revolution. Rome's policy to-day, and always, her principle to-day and always can be summoned up briefly. There is only one man on earth who urges by Divine right and all others through him. That man is the Pope of Rome. He is the head of the kingdon on earth and received his authority for such headship from Christ through St. Peter. All churches state principalities and powers, must and can be as such only by his consent and approval. All such religions and principalities not allowing this claim are heretic and unlawful. The acts, facts, and functions are wanting in Divine approval. All and sundry such constituencies must by the power of Rome come to an end. She will tell us our orders are invalid, our sacraments are not true, our marriage bond is of no account, so that all who are bound together without the blessing of the church are not joined together of God but are living in sin. These things she will tell us and when the great foundation upon which these preposterous claims rest are examined in the light of history it is found to be a very doubtful foundation. There are many things admirable in the Roman church but the papacy is a tremendous and audacious imposition upon the christian and civilized world. Here is the foe to true religion and liberty, with which are all called upon to contend and our contention must renew itself in this century with doubled effort, if we are not to loose what has been dearly won in he past. The principle of the papacy remains unchanged as far as the world knows and as long as the principle is so, so long must her policy continue. A policy cannot be traitor to a principle else it declares of the nullity of the principle. In the ligh of history we can see the tendency of things to-day. The increasing strength of the Roman church in America, the political moves of her representatives here and the actual political strength of a body that forms an undivided phalanx for church first and state second cannot but be recognized. The requested, nay the urged change in the Coronation Oath is but an indication of the direction in which the wind blows. Some will say this is the coy of the terrorist and the agitator and if Rome is not just, two wrongs do not make a right. They do not, but a people who can sit quiet and see a threatened infringement on dear bought liberty and the saving religion of Jesus Christ jeopardized is neither a patriotic nor a christian people. But our rights and our religion demands that we shall not play a losing game, as far too many are tempted to do. (a) We must become acquainted with the situation the Roman Church is acquainted with it. We must enlighten ourselves before we speak. We must be fearless and not fanatic. We must be broad and tolerant and at the same time careful and guarded. We must be loyal to the truth as well as loyal to the King and our country. This demands vigilance. (b) We must have a religion and be true to it. You will never appeal to a religious, loving people by execrations against any religion unless you can show that you have a religion that means as much to you. The strength of the non-Roman religions is their inherent vitality. To be an orangeman seems to be the only system continuously on the alert. Your defence is your religion. To show Christ to the world is to achieve everything. Let your religion be worth while. How strong supporters are you of what is called Protestantism? How much do you do for her? How are you making strong her bulwarks? The glorious liberty for which truth always stands is wrapped up in and has been given to the world by the revelation of God in Christ. Here is your strong hold. here your fighting strength. There is no success, no crown, in railing and protesting. What we call Protestant must have something positive, something to show for herself, something truly Catholic. It is this that will win out and secure the Crown. Anything else must end in what it is a seeming and unreality.

NO ELECTION IN SIGHT

Campaigning Is Not the Purpose of Tour, Says Sir Wilfrid.

In the Opening Meeting of His Trip at Port Arthur the Premier Discusses Matters of Transportation and Makes Several Promises to the Twin Cities — Wants to See the West and Meet New-Comers.

Fort William, July 11.—The problems of transportation confronting Canada at the present time formed the principal theme of Sir Wilfrid's address at the opening meeting of his western tour Saturday night. He showed the strategical position of Port Arthur and Fort William in the commerce of the country. He discussed at length the Welland Canal and the Georgian Bay and Ottawa Canal project, which, he said, was one of the "next things to be done" by the Government. Sir Wilfrid's remarks were accepted as virtually constituting a committal to the scheme.

He spoke positively of the future policy of the Government in regard to transportation matters, and in responding to an address of welcome at Port Arthur, said: "We will spend two dollars to your one; where you take one step we will take two."

George A. Graham, ex-president of the local Liberal Association, was chairman, and on the platform were: James Conmee, M.P.; Mayor L. L. Pelletier, Fort William; Mayor L. L. Mathews, Port Arthur; James Campbell, president of the local Board of Trade; J. R. Newby, W. W. Hamilton, Y. O. Corbett, W. K. O'Donnell and Dr. J. R. Manion.

Over 25,000 people thronged the large Arena Theatre and attentively listened to every word.

"Whatever success has accompanied my efforts, has come altogether, if not altogether, certainly the greater part, from those with whom I am fortunate enough to be associated," said Sir Wilfrid, in responding to the civic address. He made sport of the fear of a section of the Conservative party that the election would immediately follow the present tour. The Conservative press admitted that delay would make for the advantage of the Opposition. He joked at the abandonment of the proposed Conservative convention at Ottawa. There was no reason why he should desire an election in the fall, he was not afraid of the consequences of the naval policy.

He also wanted the country to know all about the cost of the National Transcontinental. "We have nothing to fear on the score, because every dollar that is expended on the railway is honestly expended," said the Prime Minister. "We will have no general election this fall; we will not, until the time calls for it, under the terms of the constitution.

"The object of this trip is that we, I and my colleagues and supporters of the Government, should become better acquainted with this new and rapidly progressing western country. It is to visit and see with our eyes these new communities, in the cities, towns, villages and farms which are springing up in every province, as if by magic. It is to extend a hand of welcome to those new fellow-citizens who come to us from the United States and from Europe, to make our country their country, to become Canadians and to make Canada a country even to be more proud of. It is to ascertain what are the requirements of these new communities, and what is the measure of duty and responsibility devolving upon us, who are entrusted at the present time with the responsibility of Government in this country. This is our object. Nothing more and nothing less," declared the Prime Minister.

Sir Wilfrid concluded his remarks by paying a tribute to the memory of King Edward, who earned the greatest title ever given to any monarch—"the peacemaker."

E. McDonald, M.P., Pictou, was the first speaker. He congratulated the twin cities on the reception given Sir Wilfrid, who was entitled to honor for the splendid administration he had given to the country for the past fourteen years, which, when the history of this generation was written, these years would be known as the first "gold age" of Canada.

F. F. Pardee, M.P., Lambton, chief Liberal whip, said that in so far as they had gone, the Liberal party had had a record of progress.

Hon. G. P. Graham spoke vigorously in defence of the Government's action in respect of the Quebec bridge, which was a joint idea on the part of Sir Wilfrid and the Province and City of Quebec. He justified the Transcontinental Act by saying that its low grades and standard of construction would reduce rates and make more money for consumer and producer alike. Answering criticism of the Conservative leader, the Minister said that the G.T.P. had agreed to take over the eastern section of the Transcontinental without waiting for the Quebec bridge to be completed.

Owing to the Manitoba elections being held on Monday, Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not arrive at Winnipeg until Tuesday morning. Sir Wilfrid does not desire that his presence on polling day should be construed into an act of interference.

MAKES HEIGHT RECORD

Walter Brookins in Biplane Ascends 6,178 Feet.

Daring Young Aviator Uses His Last Drop of Gasoline to Reach Immense Altitude, and Is Then Forced to Glide In Spirals on Descending Trip—Is Ready to Collapse at End of Feat, But Recovers Again.

Atlantic City, N.J., July 11.—Walter Brookins, in a Wright biplane, broke the world's altitude record here Saturday evening, when he attained a height of 6,178 feet, or about 1 1-16 miles. He used his last drop of gasoline at his highest altitude, and was still climbing when his engine missed explosions. The daring aviator brought his machine back to level to get the last drop of fuel out of the storage tank, to reach the line of vision of engineers on the beech. Reaching the imaginary line, Brookins started to glide to earth, and his engine stopped entirely when he was at 5,600 feet and still over the ocean.

His circled glide, which the crowd thought fancy flying, was done to save himself from diving into the sea. Brookins was ready to collapse when he reached the ground, and did not tell of his plight in the air until midnight, after he had partly recovered.

The officials at midnight gave 6,175 feet as the exact height of the flight, from the calculations of engineering experts. It is said that the record will stand without protest.

By his feat Brookins wins the $5,000 prize offered by the Atlantic City Aero Club, for breaking the world's record, unless a higher altitude is reached here before the end of the present week.

Brookins spent exactly 1 hour 3 minutes 15 1-5 seconds in the air, according to the official timing of the contest committee of the national council of the Aero Club of America. About 57 minutes of this time was made in the circling ascent, the rush of over a mile to the ground consuming less than seven minutes. Fear that Brookins at his highest point had not crossed the line of vision of the expert engineers in charge of securing his height by triangulation startled officials and spectators, until it was discovered that the failure to obtain a record of his crossing the imaginary line, on which his record will be based, was on two swings at a much lower altitude than at the final highest point.

It is calculated that nearly 10,000 people watched the flight and cheered Brookins when he descended at 7.11 p.m.

Monoplanes Made All the Records.

Bethany Plains, Rheims, July 11.—The international aviation meeting, at which new records for height, distance, speed and time were set, came to a close yesterday. The meeting was a triumph for the monoplanes, which made all the records and carried off the majority of the prizes.

The experts declare that the most important achievement was the record made by Leon Morane, who attained a speed of more than 68 miles an hour. They believe that this will be followed soon by a speed of 180 to 200 kilometres, at which speed aeroplanes will be little affected by the wind. The moment is in sight, they think, when travel by aeroplane will be as safe and twice as fast as by train.

The distance and duration records established by M. Labouchere Saturday, 340 kilometres (211.14 miles) in 4 hours 37 minutes 45 seconds, were broken yesterday by Olieslagers, who made a magnificent flight of 393 kilometres (244.44 miles) in 5 hours, 3 minutes 5 seconds. On landing Olieslagers was handed a telegram of congratulation from the King of the Belgians.

Aviator Fatally Injured.

Ghent, Belgium, July 11.—Daniel Kinet, the Belgian aviator, was seriously hurt yesterday while making a flight. The rudder of his machine broke when he was at a considerable height, and the aeroplane turned over several times, dropping like a stone in a wheat field. It is thought that Kinet is fatally injured.

More Spirits Consumed.

Ottawa, July 11.—Statistics issued by the Department of Inland Revenue show that last year the Canadian people consumed more of liquor and less of beer than in the previous year. Of spirits the consumption per head of population in the fiscal year was .815 gallons; of beer 5,276 gallons; of wine, .97 gallons, and of tobacco 2,940 pounds.

Of the fiscal year of 1909 the consumption of spirits per head was .806 gallon; of beer 5,348 gallons; of wine .085 gallon, and of tobacco 2,910 pounds.

The latter increase in consumption is not out of proportion to the increase in population, and compared with the old days, there is a substantial decrease. Thirty years ago two gallons of liquor were consumed for every head of population, now it is less than a gallon.

There is a steady, but not abnormal increase in the use of tobacco.

Fight Pictures and White Slavery.

Vancouver, July 11.—Resolutions on fight pictures and the white slave traffic were unanimously passed at Saturday afternoon's session of the Baptist convention. The first resolution was forwarded to the Ottawa and Victoria authorities, which asks that the Minister of Customs shall instruct all customs officers to prevent the importation of fight films, while the Provincial Government and municipal councils are asked to prohibit exhibitions of the pictures.

The white slave resolution urges the need of bettering the condition of working girls where they are paid insufficiently to support themselves in decency and comfort.

Took Cramps In Swimming.

Ottawa, July 11.—Alex. McEwan, aged 20, was drowned at Hog's Back, near Ottawa, yesterday. He was taken with cramps while in swimming. The deceased, who was a clerk in the Postoffice Department, was a son of Peter McEwan of Maxville, Ont.

A "GUARDIAN ANGEL."

Philip Gallant of Summerside, P.E.I., Has a Great Record.

Down by the sea, in the town of Summerside, Prince Edward Island, there lives a modest, unassuming, hardworking fisherman who has the unusual distinction of having saved from drowning twenty-six human lives. The story of this extraordinary achievement, covering a period of some twenty years and punctuated, as few stories are, by evidences of courage, heroism and devotion to man's highest duty—the rescue of the perishing—is known throughout his native province and has won for him the empty, although enviable title, "The Guardian Angel of Summerside Harbor." And the title is neither inappropriate nor irreverent. In many cases his timely arrival on the scene of accident seemed to be providentially guided. Drawn by an irresistible impulse, as mysterious and unaccountable as it was irresistible, he has more than once without any conscious motive, except a vague idea that he was needed, gone to the waterfront or out into the harbor in his fishing-boat to find that he was just in time to rescue some unfortunate from a watery grave.

The name of this life-saver and hero is Philip Gallant. He was born in the Parish of Mont Carmel, about fifteen miles from Summerside, some forty-five years ago. Since boyhood he has followed the calling of a fisherman. During the past twenty-five years he has resided continuously in Summerside where the scant harvest of the sea has enabled him to support himself, his wife and two children and where also he is known as an honest, upright and clean-living citizen.

His first battle with the sea was on a cold stormy morning in December, 1889. During the previous night a schooner had been driven ashore by a fierce gale at Rocky point, Egmont Bay. About daylight Philip Gallant, who had strolled to the shore to see what havoc had been wrought by the storm saw the helpless schooner pounding herself to pieces on the rocks about half a mile from the shore with the seas washing over her. A closer inspection revealed dimly the forms of men lashed to the rigging. Her position was such that the men were in imminent danger of being swept overboard at any moment. Recognizing this Gallant pluckily made up his mind to effect their rescue. There was no time to look for help and he determined to risk it alone. It was a perilous undertaking, but, heedless of the peril, thinking only of the lives in danger, he launched his dory into a sheltering cove and headed her for the doomed vessel. As he rounded the sheltering point of land between him and the open sea the merciless breakers met him, dashing his frail craft backward. Five times he faced the breakers only to be dashed back again and again and finally his little boat was filled and rendered helpless. By this time a neighbor happened along. Together they launched a larger boat, rowed to the perishing men and after incredible difficulty succeeded in picking them off one by one. The half-frozen and almost exhausted sailors—five in all—were rowed ashore, and helped to the nearest dwelling where they were tenderly cared for and nursed back to life. One of them, the cook, died a few days afterwards as a result of the hardships and exposure endured on that awful night. The others, one of whom was the late Captain David Cain of Summerside, recovered. The five men would undoubtedly have perished had they not been rescued just when they were.

In the autumn of 1892, on the north side of the Island, a fishing boat with a crew of three men was struck by a squall and capsized. Philip Gallant, who at the time was alone in his boat in the shelter of the shore, saw the accident. He quickly got his boat under weigh and put out to their rescue in the teeth of the gale. Alone he managed, after sailing three times around the perishing men clinging for life to their submerged boat, to get into such a position that he could make the boats fast to each other. He then hauled them, one by one, into his own and brought them safe to land. These three men would certainly have perished had it not been for Philip Gallant, and his fierce determination not to be beaten even by the demon of the sea.

On different occasions since, in 1899, 1903, 1908 and 1909 he has rescued four children from drowning in Summerside harbor. One fell off a wharf, another off a scow, one fell among ice cakes and another fell overboard from a boat sailing out of the harbor. In each instance Gallant was on hand, accidentally or providentially, and in at least three of these instances he risked his life in saving others.

As the world counts wealth Philip is a poor man. He receives his daily bread as the reward of honest daily toil. He has received the "God bless you" of mothers whose children he has handed back to them from the brink of the grave; he has received the blessing of children who, but for him, would have been orphans, of wives whom he saved from widowhood.

These blessings he cherishes, but of this world's wealth he possesses nothing. He has risked his life for others; he has brought back to loved ones twenty-six lives. And for this he has received praise unstinted, the blessing of those whom he brought back to life, newspaper notoriety as a life-saver and a hero—and a set of beautifully finished binoculars, which will doubtless make a cherished heirloom among his descendants, if not of necessity disposed of in the meantime.

He Met the Book.

Bishop Doane used to tell the following story on himself:

"Dr. Doane," said a parishioner at the end of a service, "I enjoyed your sermon this morning. I welcomed it like an old friend. I have, you know, a book at home containing every word of it."

"You have not," said Dr. Doane.

"I have so," said the parishioner.

"Well, send that book to me. I'd like to see it."

VICTORY FOR ROBLIN

His Party Sweeps Manitoba After Hot Campaign.

Although Decay of Conservative Government of Manitoba Has Been Asserted It Gets One More Majority Than It Had In Last House—Cabinet Ministers Have All Big Majorities—Osborne Snowed Under.

Winnipeg, July 12.—The Roblin Government has swept the province and has been sustained at the polls by one more of a majority than it secured in 1907.

Returns indicate this morning that the standing of the parties is:

Conservatives, 29.

Liberals, 12.

Some of the outlying polls have not yet been heard from, but their figures are not expected to substantially change the result.

In the last Legislature the standing was: Conservatives, 28; Liberals, 13.

The Conservatives have gained Arthur, where Lyle has 231 majority over John Williams, the former member; Dauphin, where James G. Harvey redeemed the seat from J. A. Campbell by 74, and Hon. Dr. McFadden has brought Emerson back to the Conservative column, defeating George [illegible] by the handsome majority of [illegible]. In 1907 McFadden was beaten by [illegible].

HON. R. P. ROBLIN.

Returns from Gimli are incomplete, but Baldwinson has probably regained the seat for the Government. Dr. Thornton, one of the chief lieutenants of T. C. Norris, went down to defeat in Deloraine, J. F. C. Reid carrying the seat by six majority.

The biggest surprises were sprung in Winnipeg. The North was regarded as certain for the Conservatives, but a young Jewish lawyer, Hart Green, only three years in Winnipeg, wins by some 450 majority. The foreigners voted solid for Green.

South Winnjpeg was regarded as certain for the Liberals, and was carried by the Conservatives. Andrews was looked on as a sure winner in the West, and was defeated by the sitting Liberal member, T. H. Johnson. In Centre Winnipeg, T. W. Taylor had a close run by the Labor candidate.

Scow and 800 Logs Lost.

Chatham, July 12.—A big storm raged on Lake St. Clair Saturday, as the result of which the tug D. W. Crow, towing two scows and 800 logs, met with a mishap which resulted in $2,000 loss. The logs were roped between the scows. The fastenings broke and the boiler dropped out of the first scow. The tug pulled through all right and brought back only one scow.

Refuse Entrance to Her Own Country.

St. Catharines, July 12.—Mrs. Jas. Glass of Buffalo, who after spending three weeks visiting relatives in St. Catharines, was sent back to the border, being refused entrance to her own country, is still at the hospital here as the result of her experience. Her husband has made arrangements to come back again Friday and take his wife home to Buffalo.

A Difficult Problem.

Toronto, July 12.—"There is no doubt that what Rev. Dr. Coburn says about the public schools in the eastern counties of the province is true, but it applies in only some districts. It is not a condition that applies generally," said Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, yesterday. "It is a matter that will be dealt with, but the great question will be what is best to be done, as in these schools the great majority of the scholars are French Roman Catholics. These things are another legacy of the old Government, and when the matter is taken up will be given the consideration such a serious question merits."

Sir James Whitney said: "These matters will probably be brought to the attention of the Government, and when they are they will be considered."

Husbands Should Answer Promptly.

Pittsburg, July 12.—"I shot my husband because I thought he was a burglar and I would do it again under similar circumstances. Men who stay out late at night should answer promptly when their wives call 'Who's there'."

This is what Mrs. J. T. Burns said yesterday about shooting her husband in the arm at their home on McPherson boulevard Sunday night.

Shot by Companion.

Medicine Hat, July 12.—Walter Turner, a young Englishman, was fatally shot in a boarding-house on Sunday by Arthur Hobbs. Two young men were cleaning a revolver and Hobbs slipped a couple of cartridges into it. Then, thinking that he was snapping empty chambers, he pointed it at Turner and pulled the trigger several times. Hobbs is under arrest.

Drowned by Rickety Boat.

London, Ont., July 12.—Duncan, 13-year-old son of John McVicar, fourth concession, North Dorchester, with some other boys, went for a row on the Foster pond. When out a little way from shore the rickety old craft began to sink and the occupants jumped into the water.

Cheaper Wireless.

London, July 12.—Henniker Heaton states that the Marconi Company will accept private messages to Eastern Canada at sixpence a word if the Postmaster-General will agree.

Chatham, July 12.—Alvin Merritt of Louisville, the fattest man in the western peninsula, is dead, a victim of the excessive heat. Merritt was scarcely over five feet tall and weighed 448 pounds.

Rival Aviators Complete.

Toronto, July 12.—High flying and long periods in the air were the order of the evening at last night's exhibition at the aviation meet at Weston. Both Count de Lesseps and Ralph Johnstone did spectacular work. Johnstone made a record both for time in the air and height of flight for this meet, the first time he went up. Then De Lesseps went up and made a better performance. Again Johnstone went skyward and did the prettiest work that has been seen so far. Both reached about the same heights, 1,100 feet, but Johnstone stayed in the air longest, remaining up 18 minutes. Yesterday was the first day of competition, and the succeeding days of the meet the rivalry will probably grow keener.

The distances estimated were not accurate, owing to a misunderstanding. The aviators were supposed to cross the base line at the centre when at their highest, but one crossed too far to one side and the other went too far to the opposite side. The height finders, James W. Moffat and Prof. Louis B. Stewart, hope to be able to give accurate figure of today's ascents.

Soldiers Arrive at Springhill.

Halifax, N.S., July 12.—The military special from Halifax reached the colliery districts of Springhill last night, and two hundred members of the Royal Canadian Regiment with guns are pitted against twelve hundred striking miners.

The news that the military special had left Halifax and was speeding towards Springhill spread through the town and mining section with great rapidity, and when the train pulled into the station an enormous crowd were congregated on the platform. When the soldiers left the train they pitched tents in the driving park, which is owned by the company.

There is a bitter feeling between strikers and strikebreakers, and the slightest move on the part of either faction would result in a riot. Patrick De Bay, a railway policeman, was arrested for carrying concealed weapons.

THOUGHT BABY DOPED

Doctor Testifies in Suspicious Case in Toronto.

Inquest Into the Death of Baby Walter Brown Results In Evidence by Landlady That Russell Dumas, Who Adopted Child Seemed Pleased at Prospect of It Dying—Organs Sent to Analyst For Examination.

Toronto, July 12.—"Hurrah! If it dies to-morrow, I'll be $200 better off."

These were the words which Mrs. Bertram Rainey, wife of Policeman Rainey, heard Russell Dumas utter as he entered her house, where he and his wife and sister-in-law roomed, a day or so before his adopted child, Walter Brown, then lying sick, died under suspicion of strychnine poisoning. This evidence was given by Rainey at the inquest opened by Coronto G. W. Graham at the morgue last night, and which was later adjourned for a week.

Rainey said that Dumas told his wife that the mother of the child was a very dear friend of theirs, who had died in hospital giving it birth. She was, they said, only 15 years old. The babe was all right when it first came to the house, but soon became sickly. He had noticed that whenever Dumas was in the house, and the child was crying, it stopped almost immediately. Mrs. Dumas had told his wife that her husband was giving it powders of his own composition, he having studied medicine. When Dr. James Bray was called, he told him he thought that Dumas was "doping" the child.

Dr. Bray swore that he had been called on the Tuesday before the child died. He was suspicious from the start and his suspicions were confirmed by what the policeman told him. He did not see the child after death, but issued the death certificate upon symptoms previously observed. He had taken no action to report the matter because he thought that Rainey had reported it, and because he did not like to cast suspicion upon his patients. He believed that it died of malnutrition.

"Did you suspect that the child had been doped?" asked Coroner Graham.

"Well, I thought that the symptoms were so unusual that I could not explain them in any other way than that," was the reply.

Dr. Gideon Silverthorn, who performed the post mortem, declared that he had found all the organs normal except the stomach, liver and kidneys, which were turned over to Dr. R. A. Pyne for analysis. There was no tubercular condition disclosed in the brain as diagnosed by Dr. Bray. Decomposition was so far advanced that many traces, either of natural disorder or poison, would be eradicated from the portions of the body which he had examined.

Fourteen Cases of Smallpox.

Brantford, July 12.—Fourteen cases of smallpox were discovered here yesterday by the medical health authorities, the first of which had its origin in Brantford Township. Several of the cases found are in the convalescent stage, the attending physicians having treated the same as chicken pox. Several more cases, on account of the failure to establish a quarantine, are expected. In three instances whole families are afflicted.

The Board of Health took prompt measures yesterday morning, ordering all the patients to the Isolation Hospital and tents for emergency purposes.

Married, and Didn't Know It.

Toronto, July 12.—Reuben H. Rhodes was charged in the Police Court yesterday with not supplying his wife, Elizabeth, with sufficient of the necessaries of life to keep her in a healthy condition. He pleaded guilty.

"You were married to this woman on Dec. 11 last?" asked the magistrate.

"So I've been told. I don't know anything about it." Rhodes stated he had been intoxicated on Dec. 11 and knew nothing of the proceedings till the day following.

Hotel Burned Down.

Torrance, Muskoka, July 12.—Late Saturday night, during a severe storm, lightning struck the Hotel Torrance, and it burned to the ground. Several men nearly were overcome with the shock for a few minutes. The hotel tower was shattered by the bolt, and also a large portion of the wall. Loss $10,000; insurance $2,500. The hotel was three storeys in height with 100 foot frontage on Lake Muskoka, and 60 feet frontage overlooking the C.N.R.

Caught Their Young Fancy.

Newcastle, Pa., July 12.—Rev. R. N. Merrill of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Mahoning Town, advertised that he would preach in the dark Sunday night. The lights were extinguished because of the heat. The church was crowded when the minister entered the pulpit, and more than three-quarters of the congregation were young folks.

A lot of people are talking most enthusiastically about the beauties of life on the farm who would change their views if they ever tried to pitch hay on a hot summer day.

✦ ✦ ✦

It is satisfactory to note that President Hays of the Grand Trunk denies the stories as to the failures of crops in the North West. It is always necessary, as Mr. Hays says, to know on which side of the market a crop-killer is before, accepting his story as gospel.—Kingston Standard.

Elbert Hubbard says he has "a department for swine" on the Roycroft farm. The difference between "a department for swine" and a "pigpen," dear peruser, is the difference between—O well, it's the difference between the litterati and mere writers.

It is learned that grape fruit should be called "pomelo" By any other name it would be sour.

The Glorious Twelfth.

A large number of Orangemen, 'Prentice Boys, True Blues, and Lady True Blues from the city to-day visited Stirling for the purpose of taking part in the Orange celebration being held there which was a grand success.

The I.O.O.F. band of this city accompanied the various lodges to Stirling.

Laid to Rest

The funeral of the late Mrs. A. G. Parker took place this morning from the residence of her mother, Mrs. C. J. Bowell, Albert street Many were present to pay the last tribute of respect to the deceased. At the house an impressive service was conducted by the Rev Rural Dean Beamish, Rector of St. Thomas' church. The beautiful display of floral tributes was an evidence of the esteem in which the deceased was held from friends in the city, Bowmanville, Guelph and Newcastle. At the Belleville cemetery the remains were laid at rest. The bearers were Messrs. J. S. McKeown, J. L. R. Gorman, A. P. Allen, H. Thompson, F Wallbridge and W. J. Cook

Some More Campaign Rockets.

Got in the broad line again Saturday at the Y.M.C.A. rooms, with about 25 others of the human race, and while not feeling quite up to usual form was able to take second place in the first heat, Mr. Graham being in the lead. And don't you think for a moment that the word "Heat" is not used in the proper connection either.

Considering the quantity of enthusiasm these collectors are carryqing around, it is simply no less than wonderful where they find room in their anatomy to tuck away so many other things. To the ladies of the auxiliary it must seem like fitting out a whaling vessel on credit.

Well, they who work must eat, and we guess the some rule applies to the other lot as well. But do these collectors work? If you think not, just go out, into th highways around this burg and try coaxing a hundred dollars or so away from some one who expects to winter in the county poor house.

And do these collectors get these hundreds from this poverty-stricken wolf-beseiged bunch of pessimists. Get them, yes, certainly, why man, there is no such class as this in the Bay City, that's but a bluff. There is enough loose money in this city to build a Y.M.C.A. building, and have an endowment fund large enough to maintain it, and that's what it will come to some skeet day.

Never saw such indomitable pluck and splendid optimism as displayed by this band of scouts. If their target had been a hundred thousand they would have gone after it, and got it, same as they are getting this forty thousand.

A number of former residents by their liberal contributions, are setting a pace which is a bit lively, and puts some of our citizens a few laps behind and you must bear in mind that their interest now is but one of sentiment. Don't for goodness sake let it get noised abroad that Belleville's Y. M. C. A building is mostly owned by outside capitalists, the very thought of it makes my left ear red hot.

D. V. Sinclair is developing into a regular 'Chauncey Depew" as an after dinner speaker. He was pretty full on Saturday, but nothing like too full for utterance. When D. V. is no longer able to express himself in words, he will be employing a harp for the purpose. Only got his word for that, however.

All the same, Mr. Sinclair is right in his element, and on the job twenty-four hours and thirty minutes every day. His address to the gladiators Saturday was a stimulus to their agressiveness, and starts them off this wee with renewed energy.

You who have not already contributed, try and make the labor as light as possible for the teams this week. Seriously speaking, this raising $40,000 hasn't the first ear marks of a Sunday school picnic, and those engaged in this effort have had many a jolt and plenty of disappointments. Have your fountain pen loaded with ink that won't fade under two years and get busy with it the first time one of the hustlers gets near enough to hand you a subscription card. And don't look for any reward; you have already been rewarded by being permitted to make this beautiful city your home for all these years.

1,000 subscriptions still wanted. Do not wait for someone to see you. t will be a physical impossibility to see every one. Remember two years to pay it, but one minute to say it.

The Last Sad Rites,

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of the late Mrs. Thos. B. Marshall took place and was largely attended. At St. George's church the burial services of the Anglican church were conducted by Rev. R. C. Blagrave. The floral tributes were beautiful and numerous. The bearers were four sons of the deceased, a nephew and son-in-law

OLD BOYS' REUNION NOTES.

Louisville, Ky., July 6, 1910.

Mr. A. I. Bird,
Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

My Dear Friend,—As you suppose fortune seems against my ever visiting the haunts of my childhood days. No one can tell how I would enjoy coming back the latter part of this month to the Old Boys' Re-union. What a time I would have. There is not a name on the list of officers of organization but what I recognize, from the honorary president, the friend of my father and myself, down to the last member of the reception committee.

I had thought that during my 20 years' absence a large percentage of these friends of mine had possibly dropped out. What an air the "Bay of Quinte" much furnish that prolongs life in such a manner. The honorable president must be nearly 90, if not quite so, and there are a number of gray heads, I am satisfied, in this list of officers.

Remember me kindly to my old friends and tell them that some day I will be with them again. Some day, they say, never comes, but I will try to get there.

Yours fraternally,
W. P. WAY.

Toronto, 76 Harbord st., July 16.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell,

Dear Sir,—Being in my 90th year and a rheumatic wreck, I am compelled to forego the pleasure of joining the Old Boys on the 23rd.

The Laurier Comedians.

The little band of Laurier comedians has started on its barnstorming tour of the west, and soon the prairies will be ringing with the strains of the song that the leader of the Liberal party and not Providence is responsible for the marvellous prosperity of that land of promise and wheat. The Premier will leave a capital engaged in discussing the most recent exposure of graft in the administration of a government department. He will reach Winnipeg about the time a close has been put to a provincial campaign, in which a prominent place was given to the discussion of allegations of attempted graft in connection with the appointment of Judges made by members of his party in regard to other members of his party. At St. Boniface just across the Red River from Winnipeg he will see the terminals of the National Transcontinental Railway built on land for which the country paid a high price to middlemen, who just a few weeks before had bought it from the original owners at a low price. Going further west he will pass the homestead of settlers, whose owners paid a big price for the land on which they are built, although it was sold by the Government at a paltry price to the political favorites, who in turn sold it to the settler and grew rich in the process. The houses and barns he will see on the fat prairie lands will be in many cases of timber cut on limits, the transfer of which to their present holders under the Laurier Government, was attended by circumstances that gave rise to charges of misconduct against his officials which charges were never explained away. Among the foot-hills of the Rockies Sir Wilfrid Laurier will come across ranches, for the leases of which the country received a small bonus, though the holders dealing with favored middlemen, had to pay a heavy bonus. If Sir Wilfrid Laureir takes a trip through the Crow's Nest country he will come across coal mines on lands given as aid for the construction of a railway, which lands did not go to the company but were held to make millionaires of men whom Laurier personally knows and who are naturally his ardent supporters. In the province of British Columbia Sir Wilfrid will be welcomed by a Provincial Premier who occupies that high position because he opposes Laurierism and its trail of graft and rake-off. If he keeps his eyes open the Premier will find much in this western barnstorming tour to interest him. He will come back with a better knowledge of what his policy of land for the speculator and not the settler means. Not all the high sounding phrases of Mr. N. N. Macdonald or the elephantine witticisms of Mr. George Graham will be able to convince the fair minded farmers of the prairies that they have had a fair deal under the rule of Laurierism. The development of the west has reeked with Laurier jobs. And it must not be thought that the Premier himself has been unmindful of what has gone on. His was the eye that winked at graft. His was the silent support which made such scandals as the timber limit alienation, the Robbins irrigation deal, and the St. Peters reserve robbery possible. The whole structure of Laurierism is built up on Laurier himself. He can no more dissengage himself from the things which are done in his name and by his consent than he can stay the tides of the Bay of Fundy. And the country is coming to understand that for all which goes on Sir Wilfrid Laurier is primarily responsible.

And so the song that these comedians will sing is the last the west will have as its theme the personal purity and statesmanship of the man from Arthabaskeville. It is the last attempt to swing the country by the aid of one man's personality. It would not be surprising if they started up another slogan such as "Let Laurier start his work all over again" or vote for Laurier and assist in robbing yourself. The west may be charmed by Sir Wilfrid's oratory. He can say trite things in as flowery and pleasant a manner as anyone in Canada. But beneath that sunny smile there is the indecision and cynical disregard of the public weal which have made Canada the happy hunting ground of middlemen and political adventurers.

Genius begins great works. Labor alone finishes them.—Joubert.

SUFFRAGETTES THREATEN TO CAUSE TROUBLE.

(Intelligencer Special.)

London Eng., July 12. — The police are preparing for trouble when the debate on the Shackleton Woman's Suffrage Bill is resumed again to-night in the House of Commons. It provides for votes for all women with property qualifications and would include at least a million women, if passed. Last night there was a debate with Haldane, Lloyd George and other members of the Cabinet unalterably against the bill, but it is evident that the division to-night will not be on strictly party basis.

Suffragettes have announced their intention to storm the Commons and use militant argument to carry their cause.

Baggage Insurance.

This is a modern business age wherein a pianist may insure his fingers, a dancer may insure her ankles or a man with important business on hand may be indemnified against late arrival of a passenger train which failed to convey him to a certain point in time to close an important deal involving millions. But there is still a new kind of indemnity, and not Lloyd's either. It is the mere insurance of your personal belongings while traveling, and this very latest idea is through a system of tourists' baggage tickets. A traveler bound anywhere can insure his baggage for a short period as readily as he can get personal accident insurance to cover the perils of the journey.—New York Tribune.

The Nobel Prizes For This Year.

A statement just published by the managers and trustees of the Nobel foundation shows that the five winners of the Nobel prizes for the year 1910 will each receive, in addition to the decoration, a money prize of about $38,000. The fund consists of 33,729,698 kronen, about $9,107,018. According to a provision in the deed of gift, 10 per cent of the income must be returned to the fund and about 25 per cent of the remainder is set aside for taxes, expenses incurred by members of the various juries in the discharge of their duties, etc. "But for these drafts on the fund," says the report, "the five prizes for 1910 would each be greater by about 60,000 kronen."

High Life.

Up to a short time ago it was believed that the highest human habitation was a Buddhist convent in Tibet, where twenty-one monks devote their lives to the adoration of Buddha at an altitude of some 16,000 feet above sea level. It has been established lately, however, that a colony of mine laborers engaged in working tin and bismuth mines on Mount Chorolque, province of Chiches, Bolivia, are living in a settlement more than 17,090 feet above sea level.

A Dying Island.

An island in Puget sound near Vancouver, B. C., about twenty miles in circumference, is apparently dying from old age. Last summer it was observed that every fir and cedar tree on the island was dead. Near the water's edge vegetation seemed withered, and thin vapor hung over the island all day. There is not a living thing on the island. Not even a crow rests upon the topmost branches of the now dead firs.

THE MODERN ULYSSES.

British Sea Captain Has Lapped Globe 81 Times.

If Ulysses could come to life again he would probably have a very short lease of existence, for the shock on learning how his globe-trotting record has been hopelessly eclipsed would almost certainly prove fatal.

In these days of rapid and restless locomotion, to have girdled the earth a dozen times, or to have made ten thousand crossings of the English Channel is a feat which scarcely deserves notice. Certainly, it is one at which Captain Alexander Simpson, of the Aberdeen Line, could afford to smile.

When, a short time ago, the fine Aberdeen liner Pericles was unfortunately lost off Cape Leewin, West Australia, with all her mails and cargo, Captain Simpson, her gallant commander, was actually making his eighty-first voyage round the world, a record which, we believe, no other sailor has ever rivalled. When this undeserved disaster gave a pause to the captain's record-breaking he had covered on the sea the enormous distance of 2,070,000 miles.

And yet it is said that this record, amazing as it is, has been eclipsed by another seafaring man, who, however, is not a sailor. The actual holder of the world's marine record is Mr. H. Stevens, late chief wine steward on board the Cunard liner Lucania. Starting when a mere boy as a pantry helper in the service of the Cunard Line, Mr. Stevens spent forty years in constantly crossing and recrossing the Atlantic until, at the time of his retirement, he could boast that his aggregate mileage on the "herring-pond" exceeded three millions, the equivalent of more than 120 circuits of the earth at the Equator.

The man who is proud of having crossed from Dover to Calais or from Folkestone to Boulogne a score or more times will think less of his record when he learns that one man has made the Channel-crossing no fewer than 30,000 times, and did not think much of the feat either. This modest traveler was Captain Bennett, who, a dozen years ago, retired from the South-Eastern and Chatham steamship service with a fifty-three years' record to his credit.

There are many captains in the Australasian trade who have been round the world between thirty and forty times; and Captains Ismay and Glazebrook can each boast nearly forty circuits of the earth.

But all these records, stupendous as they are, pale into insignificance before that of Mr. Benjamin Jeans, who for fifty-four years was guard on the London and Birkenhead express, and who, at a meeting held to present him with an address and a purse of gold on his retirement, made the startling announcement that he had traveled on the railway the almost incredible distance of 4,000,000 miles, or more than the equivalent of 160 journeys round the Equator.

A Wonderful Literary Record.

Some interesting particulars are given in The Bookman concerning Mr. Percy Fitzgerald, who has 200 volumes of biographies, novels, essays, travels, and miscellaneous literature standing to his credit in the British Museum catalogues. Mr. Fitzgerald enjoys the distinction of having both written a life of Boswell and made the bronze statue of him that was set up at Lichfield a little while ago; and he has just completed a statue of Dr. Johnson, whose life he has edited three times. Mr. Fitzgerald is the only author now living whose stories were revised by Charles Dickens; when he was in difficulties with his plots he frequently went to Dickens, who also helped him with most of his proofs and added to them "large slices of his own long sentences."

Desert Gems.

In 1889 a hunter in the northwest of New South Wales wounded a kangaroo. The animal went off through the mulga and the salt bush at a pace too fast for the hunter to follow and was soon out of sight. The hunter was a bushman and did not despair. He followed the blood trail, hopeful of a short search and a speedy bag. At one point of the pursuit it may be that the trail grew faint and necessitated a closer inspection. Anyway the hunter stooped and picked up a piece of stone. This he examined. The red spot was not on it; it was in it. It was not blood that he saw; it was opal. Such was the beginning of the White Cliffs opal fields.

Waded to Church.

The inhabitants of Cruit, an island in Donegal, have been sorely inconvenienced lately by the collapse of a bridge. At a District Council meeting it was stated that there had been a football match in the district, and when the teams were crossing the structure it caved in with a crash, many of the passengers being immersed in the sea. The people going to mass on the following Sunday had to wade across up to their waists, and after the service wade back again. Such heroic conduct ought to get them a new bridge soon.

Old Heads Found.

An important archaeological "find" was made near Castlepollard, County Westmeath, Ireland, the other day, where some men were engaged making fences on a ranch. The relics comprised ten human skulls, some of which had teeth still left in them, shin bones, vertebrae and finger bones, as well as some swords of an old pattern and deer horns. The bones were all of huge size, and must have belonged to men of far distant times.

A Courtier's Retort.

Queen Bess had a pretty wit, they say, which she was by no means loath to exercise upon her subjects. She got the worst of it in one verbal duel at least. Observing in the garden a courtier to whom she had promised promotion that had not yet been realized, Her Majesty thrust her head out of the window and called to him

"What does a man think of, Sir Edward, when he thinks of nothing?"

"Of a woman's promise, your majesty," was Sir Edward's response,

CONSCIENCE MONEY.

Reporter Has a Chat With a British Treasury Official.

"Yes," said a Treasury official, with whom the writer recently had a conversation, "we usually receive something like $50,000 a year on account of the trouble given by guilty consciences. It comes in all sorts of ways. I have known a single sovereign, wrapped up in a piece of paper, to be dropped into our letter box, with an added pencilled sentence that it was for conscience-money! Then, again, we often get sums by registered letter with similar statements attached. I have opened packets containing as much as $500."

"What was your queerest experience in that kind of receipt?" I inquired.

"We got a tin box, and heavy it was, by post one morning," said the clerk. "When we opened it we found a short note saying that 'X. X. X.' wished to make amends for his deceit in returning his statement of income, and adding that we should find the amount due in sovereigns in the box. So we unpacked the small parcels there, and took from each the gold coins they enclosed. The total amounted to $1,800, which you will agree was a very good haul for one morning's work in this way!"

"You don't get such strokes of luck every day?" I asked.

"Oh, no; they come very irregularly. Sometimes a whole week elapses without our receiving one, but seldom more than that. And it is curious that most people wish to have some acknowledgment of the receipt of their conscience-money in the daily paper, which is why you so often see in the press a paragraph after this style:

"'X. Y. Z.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer wishes to acknowledge receipt of $750 on account of unpaid income tax.'

"Or it may be that the advertisement runs in the name of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, but it is generally the same announcement bar that. The very largest amount the Treasury ever got at one swoop from this source, so I am told, was $5,000, though that did not come under my own cognizance here. And, I believe, the lowest sum we have ever had was a shilling, which somebody once dropped into the letter-box with the usual explanatory note.

"That defaulter must have had a very tender conscience indeed; far more so than most men who pay income tax. Dodging the payment of this tax is reckoned not only right, but even creditable, by some men; but five postal orders for a pound each which came not long ago to us for conscience-money proves that not every man with a moderate income can stifle the 'still, small voice' when he has succeeded in 'doing the collector.'"

"I suppose," I put in, "that the Treasury does not take any special steps to discover the personalities of any of these conscience-stricken defaulters who thus send their money to its coffers unexpectedly?"

"No," he replied; "we should generally find the task impossible. Besides, we are only too glad to get the money at all! Many folk look upon the Treasury as a veritable gold-mine, a department never really needing money! But I can assure you that this is wrong. Our motto has long been—and I believe it always will be—'The smallest contribution thankfully received.' So we welcome these various gifts of conscience-money whenever they arrive. And the oftener they come and the larger they are the better we like them!"—Tit-Bits.

Watched Comrade Hang.

An astonishing story of callousness was told at Darlington recently where a young man named Bolam calmly confessed that he had sat in the prison cell and watched another prisoner commit suicide. This prisoner, a middle-aged man named Cully, had been arrested on a charge of larceny, and placed in the same cell as the youth. During the night he produced a piece of cord from the lining of his coat. "Who is going first?" he said to Bolam. "Well, I'm not going," replied Bolam. Cully then hanged himself, the youth quietly watching him the while. After the tragedy the latter went to sleep with the dead man hanging beside him. When he was asked by the police why he had not stopped Cully, Bolam said, "I didn't care what he did. I was not going to interfere. It was not my fault."—English Exchange.

Measuring Memory.

Attempts have been made from time to time in France to "measure memory." One of the experiments consists in reading a series of figures to the subject at a regular speed of about two per second and observing how many he can repeat without error in the order in which they were given. The faculty of voluntary attention is, of course, called into play by this experiment. Children from six to eight years old retain on the average five figures, children ten years old six figures and adults seven figures. It has been ascertained that Jacques Inaudi, the lightning calculator, can retain more than forty figures. — Harper's Weekly.

The Postal Card Rage at Washington.

About the first thing that a visitor in Washington decides to do is to get a full supply of postal cards to send home. Many have inquired who first set the fashion. At the postoffice the other day it was revealed that the first postcards ever issued in the world were sent out from Austria in 1869, following a suggestion made in 1865. Professor Herman of Vienna is the saint on whom the postoffice clerks visit their benisons when they find difficulty in handling the sheaves of postcards coming in all the year around.—National Magazine.

The Broken Trust

"These gentlemen are more immediately concerned in the discovery we have made," he said, after introducing her.

"You have come to do justice to Alan Wayne?" she said, quietly. "I knew you would come at last, but the time has seemed long. This man is not Alan Wayne. You will find it so; he is an imposter. What do you think he has done with my dear friend and playfellow?"

She carried conviction with her—such earnest faith in the truth of her own words, that the three gentlemen looked at each other in silent wonder.

Word for word, in her grave, low voice, she went over the old ground, the three tests; telling her story with such evident love for the true Alan Wayne, such evident belief in the imposture, that Mr. Grey was completely bewildered.

"I am sorry to say," he finally said, "that your story seems plausible enough; but it is not sufficient to deprive a man of name and wealth and brand him as an impostor."

"If he is really not Sir Alan, who is he?" asked Vivian Chandos.

"There is some one living in London who can tell you, unless I am mistaken," replied Edith. "Papa, you remember Miss Bruce? I am quite sure she knows who he is."

"Where can this lady be seen?" asked Mr. Grey.

"She will be here at noon tomorrow," replied Edith, "and you can meet her here."

She then turned to Vivian Chandos.

"Captain Chandos," she said, "if my dear friend Alan is no longer living, they tell me you will be his heir to Carsdale. I hope you will recover your rights.

And as Vivian walked slowly from the house he said to himself the only character she resembled was Portia, in the "Merchant of Venice."

A Woman's Silence.

Esther Bruce said to herself she had grown immune to suffering; the bitterness of death, of desertion, of betrayal, had all been strong upon her. She had been spared no humiliation, no sorrow, no shame; but never had she felt so lonely as on the morning she turned from Paul Westerne's house leaving the man who had been her lover there. Her tears fell fast and thick underneath her veil. It seemed to her she must be mad or dreaming—that the man she had just parted from so coldly could never be Paul—Paul, whose warm kisses and tender words had lived in her heart so long. She was miserably unhappy. She could not betray him; the lips that had kissed his face could not denounce him—must not doom him to shame and death.

Esther herself had a keen, passionate sense of honor; there was no untruth or meanness in her. Nothing Paul Lynch could have done was so hateful to her as this. A wrong deed, done in the heat of anger, in the fire of passion, she could have easily pardoned; but this deliberate, cold, deeply-studied fraud sickened her. Yet, like all good and true women, she could not be too hard upon the man she had loved. Love with her had not been a trifle, given one moment to be taken back the next. It was her all; once given it was given forever; and now that the man, too, on whom she had lavished it proved himself to be utterly unworthy, she could not take it from him; it clung to him with a tendernes and patience almost divine. Had he been a wise man, he would have given up everything on earth for such love as hers.

Sorrow began to tell upon her. The beautiful face grew pale, the scarlet lips trembled. Esther Bruce was changed from the young girl who sat in the pit of the opera, spellbound by what she considered then a strange likeness.

Her step is slow and languid, the quick, bright elasticity has left her, on this eventful morning as she walks through the streets to Paul Westerne's studio.

She was shown into the studio where Edith sat alone; and a few minutes later three gentlemen entered the room.

When Mr. Westerne introduced Mr. Grey she bowed, believing him to be there over something connected with the pictures, as she was.

But when she was introduced to Captain Chandos a curious change came over her face.

They all saw it—a look of wonder and terror—a hunted look, as though she were brough to bay. This fair-haired, handsome soldier, then, was the man Paul Lynne had so shamefully robbed.

Her lips quivered, her eyes filled with tears; then, for his sake, she controlled herself, but in that one moment the astute lawyer had learned all he wanted to know.

"My dear young lady," he said, "this is no accidental meeting; we are here purposely to see you; we want you to help us do an act of justice; we rely upon you."

They saw the look of horror that fell over her, the dread and fear that shadowed her eyes.

"We want you to tell us," said Mr. Grey, persuasively, "all you know of a person calling himself Sir Alan Aynsley."

Her face grew white as marble, even down to her lips—she could not conceal that; but there was no fatlering in her voice as she answered:

"It is less than nothing; I am sitting as a model for a picture I know he has ordered, and I know, also, the lady whom he is engaged to marry."

"That is information common to half England. I am about to make a very solemn appeal to you—one you must not dismiss lightly. I ask you in the name of God and in the name of justice to tell me all you know of this man!"

There was a solemn pause. Esther had covered her face with her hands. How thankful she would have been for death, to save her from the shame of a lie!

Then raising her head, she said, with drooping eyes:

"I know nothing at all."

"Think again," said Mr. Grey. Perhaps in your womanly pity and compassion you would screen him. Have no fear; we are generous foes. Answer me only one question: Have you ever known him by any other name? Pray answer me."

Esther sat mute and motionless.

"We will give you time to think. In ten minutes I will ask you the same question over again."

They left her alone to a solitude worse than any other—to a torture greater, almost than she could bear—to thoughts that seemed to burn both heart and brain.

"Here," whispered Revenge, "here is a glorious chance to repay the debt you owe him for his cruel trifling with your love, his barbarous deceit—for the tears and sighs, and sorrow that have eaten away your life since you believe him dead; pay him now for his scorn and mockery, for his leaving your love, for love of Lady Blanche; denounce him, spare him not!"

"Keep his secret," whispered gentle Pity; "he loved you once; his hand has clasped yours; save him from his enemies, save him from himself!"

And pity gained the day, as it often does in women's hearts.

LEGAL ABSURDITIES.

Fine Distinctions That Are Found In the Criminal Law.

Burglary is the crime of breaking in and entering in the nighttime of another's dwelling house with an intent to commit a felony therein. This means precisely what it says. If a door or window is broken open, or the knob of an unlocked door is raised, or an unlocked window is raised, it is burglary. But if the door or window is left slightly open or even raised as little as an inch and a thief pushes or raises it entirely open and enters, it is not burglary. It means, too, a "dwelling house." Therefore if a family is sleeping in a tent or booth and a thief enters it is not burglary. If all the other conditions are met and it happens that the dawn has broken, there can be no burglary, for that part of the definition specifying the nighttime is strictly adhered to.

We meet another of these fine distinctions in "larceny," the stealing of personal or movable property, which requires that the thief must get complete control. Thus if a thief in attempting to steal a watch lifts it out of a man's pocket and it is not attached to the owner by a chain, if the thief gets it into his hand for a moment only it is larceny and felony. If, however, the watch is attached to the clothing, even though the pickpocket cannot see the chain, as might happen in a crowd, he has not had complete control, and the act is not larceny, but only a misdemeanor. The difference of the two terms relates only to the length of the sentence. But if it is your watch and you wish to see the trial of the would be thief proceed you will do well to see that the indictment does not choose the wrong word.—Charles B. Brewer in McClure's Magazine.

With the Author's Compliments.

A rich and well-known citizen of a Midland city boasts of an extraordinary collection of books wherein the authors have inscribed their autographs. It is rumored that the envy, and frequently the scepticism, of his friends have been aroused by the flattering inscriptions in question; and some cynics have even gone so far as to hint at a similarity in handwriting throughout the collection. The citizen recently purchased a rare edition of Pepys' Diary. One evening, at dinner, the costly volume was passed from hand to hand, and for a time the owner lost sight of it. When, however, it did finally come back to him, he was astonished to find on the fly-leaf this inscription: "To John Blank, from his old friend and classmate, Pepys."—London Tit-Bits.

Bishop Eats His Own Boots.

Few bishops have to lead such a strenuous life as Bishop Stringer. In company with a missionary companion he made a tour recently to Herschel Island, in the Arctic Ocean, and back to Dawson City, where the bishop resides.

Their small supply of food becoming exhausted, they were obliged to eat their muckalucks and moccasins. These, made of raw sealskins, were soaked until they became glutinous, and were they toasted in strips over a fire.

A simple hailstorm last fall did damage estimated at $400,000 to growing flowers in a floricultural town in Southern France.

COST OF SHIPPING WARS.

Prices Tumble When Big Lines Enter Into Struggle For Supremacy.

The negotiations between the British and German shipping companies trading to South and East Africa have fortunately been brought to a successful conclusion, consequently there is no possibility of a disastrous rate war between the rivals.

For some years past the Germans have had the trade on the East Coast of Africa almost entirely to themselves, and even the British Government has had to send stores to Mombasa and other ports for the foreign companies.

Such a state of affairs has not fostered British trade, and recently the Union Castle Line determined to extend their sailings right up the East Coast, calling at both Portuguese, German and British ports.

The German companies resented what they regarded as poaching on their preserves and at once announced their intention of carrying goods to South Africa at rates below those charged by the English lines.

Although passengers and traders may receive considerable benefit while a rate war is in progress, such methods of competition are very costly, and in the end the rival shippers usually come to terms and may even raise rates in excess of the old charges.

It may be remembered that in 1904 there was a fierce rate war in the Atlantic, and for several weeks it was possible to travel to Liverpool for only $10. Such a state of affairs could not last, as it was estimated that the British shipping lines alone were losing $150,000 a week, while the Germans lost even more heavily.

Then more recently the Germans made a dead set at the Cunard Co., resulting in a loss to the Hamburg-Amerika line of some $1,500,000 according to the Shipping Gazette. The position of the British company was stronger in the end than at the beginning of the war in spite of heavy losses.

The Germans are never afraid of waging wars against British firms, and it must be confessed that within recent years German shipping has increased by leaps and bounds. In fact the German flag is more in evidence in many Far Eastern ports than is the Red Ensign.

For two years the Hansa Co. of Bremen engaged in a freight war with the P. and O. line to India, which resulted in a reduction of its own dividend and much loss to the famous British company. However, the Germans stated that they had strengthened their position and had secured peace for some time to come. The directors considered a loss of 3 per cent. of their profits was not too much to pay for future possibilities.

Sharks' Eggs.

The eggs of fishes are usually small, soft and inconspicuous. The most remarkable point about them is the extraordinary number laid by the individual. A single cod lays as many as 9,000,000 eggs. Sharks lay eggs which are large in size, few as to numbers and are deposited singly instead of in masses. These eggs consist of a dark-colored leathery envelope and are usually adorned with frills, horns or long-twisted tendrils. These appendages serve the purpose of keeping the egg case supported among the branches of seaweeds, thus preserving the embryo from the damage it would sustain were the egg carried hither and thither by the waves.—Scientific American.

Dawn of Civilization.

In the light of the latest facts it appears that Babylonia was in a comparatively high state of civilization about 6,000 years before the Christian era. At about that time from the east came Babylonian settlers, who found their way toward the west and, finally halting to the northwest of the Red Sea, colonized the region on either side of the Nile. When these colonists arrived from Babylonia they were not wild barbarians, but, as we know from the most learned Egyptians, possessed great ability in certain arts—in a word, were civilized. Thus Egypt, long supposed to be the mother of civilization, must hereafter give way to the land of the Euphrates

THE MIRROR TONIC.

When a Peek Into a Hand Glass May Help a Patient.

The looking glass, whether a plus or a minus quantity, plays a more important part in the sickroom than most nurses and physicians give it credit for.

"All things considered, I think it a good plan to give a sick person a chance to look at himself occasionally," said a prominent doctor recently. "Of course the indulgence must be granted with discretion. If a patient is really looking seedy a turn at the looking glass is equivalent to signing his death warrant, but if taken at a time when braced up by some stimulant or a natural ebullition of vital force a few minutes of communion with his own visage beats any tonic I can prescribe. It thrills the patient with new hope. It makes him feel that he isn't quite so far gone as he has thought and that possibly a fight for life is, after all, worth while. Being thus sensitive, a persistent withholding of a mirror convinces the patient that he must be too horrible for contemplation, and he promptly decides that the best thing for him to do is to give up the ghost and get out of the way.

"That is one of the mistakes hospitals were apt to make up to a few years ago. When I was a young fellow getting my first practice after graduation I served on the staff of several hospitals, and in all, especially in the free wards, those aids to vanity were strictly forbidden."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE MONTENEGRIN.

He Is Hospitable, but Dearly Loves the Vendetta.

To listen to a Bulgar singing is to make one's flesh creep or want to weep. The centuries of cruel oppression are only too manifest in Bulgarian music and words, but a Montenegrin grows restless over his songs and curses the powers that forbid him to emulate his forefathers' deeds en masse across the frontier. He does so whenever he can, but only in twos and threes.

When the Montenegrin goes raiding across the border it is really a more sporting affair than the well equipped and organized outings of the Bulgar "comitatchis." With him it is usually a private act of revenge or vendetta to which he invites one or two friends. Then they steal across the border at night, find their man, do their best to kill him and then make tracks homeward with the whole district at their heels. Perhaps the method of killing is not up to the standard of western sport, for they shoot their victim "sitting," so to speak, and do not give him a chance, but as it is the recognized system on both sides little can be said.

This custom makes men very wary, and the stranger can appreciate the reason when he sees a plowman, for instance, attending to his duties with a rifle slung over his back. But in spite of this they are the essence of honor and hospitality. As their guest no one can come to any harm, and they will do all in their power to make his stay among them pleasant and safe.—Wide World Magazine.

THE HORSE.

His Appeal to His Master For Humane Treatment.

To thee, my master, I offer my prayer. Feed me and take care of me. Be kind to me. Do not jerk the reins. Do not whip me when going uphill.

Never strike, beat or kick me when I fail to understand what you want of me, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I refuse to do your bidding see if there is not something wrong with my harness.

Do not give me too heavy loads. Never hitch me where water will drip on me. Keep me well shod. Examine my teeth when I fail to eat. I may have an ulcerated tooth. That, you know, is very painful. I am unable to tell you in words when I am sick, so watch me, and I will try to tell you by signs.

Pet me sometimes. I enjoy it, and I will learn to love you.

Protect me in summer from the hot sun. Keep a blanket on me in winter weather, and never put a frosty bit in my mouth, but hold it in your hands a moment first.

I carry you, pull you, wait patiently for you long hours, day or night. I cannot tell you when I am thirsty; give me clean, cool water often in hot weather.

Finally, when my strength is gone, instead of turning me over to a human brute to be tortured and starved, take my life in the easiest, quickest way, and your God will reward you in this life and in heaven. Amen.—From the Swedish in "Our Dumb Animals."

WHIPPED BY MACHINERY.

Automatic Floggers Used by Several European Armies.

Automatic flogging machines are in use among the military forces of several European nations. For many years the whipping was always done by soldiers under the command of an officer, and the punishment varied, according to the personal relations subsisting between the soldier and his victim. It was to correct this disadvantage that the flogging machine was invented.

The machine is automatic in action, and as soon as the culprit is fastened in position a spring is tightened or loosened to gauge the exact force of the blow. A pointer is moved over a dial to the requisite number of strokes and the mechanism is started.

With perfect regularity the victim's back is scourged by the throngs, the handle of the whip being moved by a screw device after each stroke so that the lash does not fall on the same spot throughout the punishment.

Each blow is of uniform severity, and as soon as the required number has been given the machine comes to a rest, and the offender is released, with the assurance that the exact punishment ordered has been meted out to him.—Harper's Weekly.

The Last of the Ruffs.

In 1762 the rage for ruffs, such as are seen on many monumental effigies, began to decline. A writer in the London Chronicle of that year says of gentlemen's dress, "Their cuffs entirely cover their wrists, and only the edges of their ruffles are to be seen." It is said that a distaste for ruffs was first created so far back as 1613, when a woman named Turner wore them on her trial for the murder by poison of Sir Thomas Overbury. The French revolution of 1789 much influenced British fashion, and the picturesque cocked hat and ruffles then gave way generally to round hats and small cuffs. The period of their final disuse cannot be easily determined, as men of old fashioned or eccentric habits have worn ruffled shirt fronts within quite recent memory similar to those which, according to Planche's "History of British Costume," originated in the seventeenth century.

WHERE RICE IS KING.

In Burma It Is the Money Crop, the Exports Selling For Millions.

The greatest rice mill in the world is at Poozoondoung, on the Irrawaddy river, writes Frank G. Carpenter. Burma is about the best rice patch on the bosom of old Mother Earth. The country has altogether rice areas equal to the Province of Ontario, and its annual exports of this grain are more than 2,000,000,000 pounds. This is enough to give every human being on earth all the rice he could eat in one day, and still leave enough over to make a pudding for every man, woman and child, as well as sprinkle all the brides and grooms of one year. Rice is the money crop of Burma. It takes the place of wheat, corn and cotton with us. The exports sell for millions, and the people are rich or poor as the rice grows well or ill.

The grain is harvested as paddy. In the field it looks not unlike wheat or oats, but every kernel has a husk on it, and this sticks to it as though it were glued. When the grain is ready for shipment to the mills, it looks much like our wheat grains unthreshed, save that the rice husks have neither heads nor beards, and they stick tight to the kernels. It takes quite as much work to get them off as to grind the threshed wheat into flour. This is the work of these rice mills.

The rice paddy is brought to the mills from all over Burma. It is unloaded from the boats by East Indian coolies, many of whom are young girls. Bare armed and bare legged they carry the rice from the boats to the mills in baskets of 50 pounds each. Their hours are from daylight to dark, with an average pay of less than two cents an hour.

The paddy or rice in the husks is first winnowed and then carried to the top story, when it is passed through grinding stones so carefully set that they pare off the husk without breaking the rice. After this progress the rice is again winnowed. It goes through countless fans and shaking sieves, being again carried to the top of the mill and descending by gravity from floor to floor, shaken, grated and cleaned at every turn.

After the husk is off, the kernels are polished.

It seems strange to think of rice being polished like your best silver. The polishing is done with chamois skin, the grains being thrown back and forth against a roller covered with this material. The chamois cylinder goes around at the rate of 500 revolutions a minute, and when the rice flows out from it it is as clean and white as the first tooth of a baby. It then falls through a chute into bags and is sewn up by Indian girls, when it is ready for shipment abroad.

Head of Royal College.

Sir Thomas Barlow, Bart., who succeeds Sir Richard Douglas Powell in the presidency of the Royal College, is a Lancashire man, and the son of the late James Barlow, of Bolton. Sir Thomas deserted cotton for medicine, and has had a wonderfully successful career. He has had an amazingly long list of degrees and honors conferred by Universities at home and abroad. He has held all the honorary appointments that fall to the greatly successful doctor, and he was Physician Extraordinary to the late Queen, at whose bedside he was during her last illness. No one can accuse Sir Thomas of an ultra-courtly manner. A man of kindly and sympathetic disposition, patients invariably find in him not only a highly skillful adviser, but also a frank and strong friend whose very presence is a tonic. He is sixty-five and is a remarkably well-preserved man.

Odd Way of Smoking.

During the South African war a Boer soldier named Frank Brown was shot in the forehead with a rifle bullet. Strangely enough, it did not kill him, and after the war he secured employment on one of the transatlantic steamers. When fully a year had passed he complained of trouble in his head, and after a thorough examination the surgeon of the ship decided that the bullet, which had never been removed, must be extracted. This was done, and afterward, for the amusement of his friends, the wounded soldier placed a lighted cigarette in the hole from which the bullet was extracted and drew the smoke through his nose.—Strand.

Great Age of Parrots.

Some parrots live 100 years, and no telling how much longer. One which belonged to George IV. is still alive, but many old country parrots are still older and act and speak as young and sharp as ever. Long life in parrots comes on account of extremely small lower intestines, so some savants thought it might keep man young to shorten his a few feet.

[illegible] few people know that the original name of the state of Tennessee was Franklin or that in 1788 the salaries of the officers of the commonwealth were paid in pelts, but the following is a correct copy of the law:

"Be it enacted by the state of Franklin and it is hereby enacted by authority of the same, that from and after the 1st day of January, 1788, the salaries of this commonwealth be as follows—to wit:

"His excellency the governor per annum, 100 deerskins.

"His honor the chief justice, 500 deerskins.

"The secretary to his excellency the governor, 500 raccoon skins.

"County clerk, 300 beaver skins.

"Clerk of the house of commons, 200 raccoon skins.

"Justice's fee for serving a warrant, one minkskin."

At that time the state of Franklin extended to the east bank of the Mississippi river, and on the west bank was that great unknown forest region of Louisiana. It was then a terra incognita, save a few canoe landings and Indian trading posts on the river banks. It was known as the district of Louisiana and in 1805 was made the territory of Louisiana.

The state of Franklin, which became Tennessee in 1796, was almost as little known. The now great city of Memphis was a mere trading post and was not laid out as a village until 1820.

Pelts were as plentiful in those days as pennies and much better distributed for purposes of currency and barter.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE DELINEATOR FOR AUGUST

The Delineator's August number contains a great deal about beautiful women. In the new editorial department "Conversazione," which has quickly gained an immense audience, Erman J. Ridgway mingles grave and gay philosophy so deftly that all who read must stop to think, even while they smile. When he talks of the prettiest woman he ever saw Mr. Ridgway recalls youthful memories that establish a universal kinship and then he reveals a new significance in every-day things.

"Getting Pretty Quick," by Gelett Burgess, is an extraordinary article, which deals with a beauty quite different from that considered editorially by Mr. Ridgway. The writer gives an account of the sufferings endured by a foolish woman willing to be actually skinned alive in order that she may appear young. William E. Borah, United States Senator for Idaho, tells "Why I Am for Suffrage for Women," J. Horace McFarland describes the work of civic improvement in Harrisburg, Pa., and Adachi Kinnosuke offers reasons "Why Japanese Women Make the Best Wives."

The fiction of the month includes "A Priest in Spite of Himself," by Rudyard Kipling, "The Young Man With Wings," by Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews; "Fresh Air for Grandpa," by Louise Closser Hale," and Mary Stewart Cutting's serial, "The Unforseen."

The Man's Magazine Page appears for the second time in the Delineator and it is a distinct humorous success. No more unique idea than this has ever been exploited by a periodical. Everyone will laugh at the drawing "If Apollo Came to Atlantic City," by Albert Levering and at the following illuminating contributions: "How to be Handsome," by Charles Battel Loomis; "Ode to a Dish-Pan," by Oscar Llewellyn; "Good Games for Men," by James L. Ford; "The Legal Liabilities of the Best Man," by H. L. Mencken and "The Man Who Makes His Own Clothes," by Gelett Burgess. 12-1t

Science Siftings.

Experiments with ultra violet light appear to show that it is more effective for sterilizing liquids than ozone.

A carload of radium, Edison says, would have as much energy as all the millions of tons of coal mined in the United States in a year.

A French scientist says the rays from incandescent lights are beneficial to human health, destroying bacteria, stimulating circulation and cellular activity and reducing pain.

Recent experiments have proved conclusively that coal dust which has been ground to a state so fine that it will pass a 200 mesh sieve will explode from contact with either a naked flame or with the arc of an electric current.

NERVOUS TWITCHINGS.

An Affliction From Which Men of Genius Often Suffer.

Many men of genius, like the insane, are subject to curious spasmodic and choreic movements. Professor Lombroso in one of his books pointed out that Lenau and Montesquieu left upon the floor of their rooms the signs of the movements by which their feet were convulsively agitated during composition.

Buffon, Dr. Johnson, Santeuil, Crebillon and Lombardini exhibited the most remarkable facial contortions. There was a constant quiver on Thomas Campbell's thin lips. Chateaubriand was long subject to convulsive movements of the arm.

Napoleon suffered from an habitual spasm of the right shoulder and of the lips. "My anger," he said one day after an altercation with Lowe, "must have been fearful, for I felt the vibration of my calves, which has not happened to me for a long time."

Peter the Great suffered from convulsive movements which horribly distorted his face. "Carducci's face at certain moments," writes Mantegazza, "is a veritable hurricane; lightnings dart from his eyes, and his muscles tremble." Ampere could express his thoughts only while walking and when his body was in a state of constant movement. Socrates often danced and jumped in the street without reason.

THE TIPPING HABIT.

It Was Worse In the Eighteenth Century Than It Is Now.

The tipping habit is bad enough nowadays, but in the eighteenth century it was a greater evil than it is at the present time. A writer in the Cornhill Magazine tells some stories to illustrate the old condition of things.

In Edinburgh in 1760 tipping became such an evil that the Society of Clerks enacted that all servants should be forbidden to take tips and members be forbidden to give them. This example was followed by other clubs and societies. Today there is a rule in most clubs against feeing the servants.

An eccentric Irish gentleman, Lord Taaffe, used to attend his guests to the door, and if they offered any money to the servants who were lined up with the guests' baggage the host would say, "If you give, give it me, for it was I that did buy the dinner."

A well known colonel while sitting at dinner inquired the names of the host's servants. "For," said he, "I cannot pay them for such a good dinner, but I should like to remember them in my will."

Another eccentric gentleman after patiently redeeming his hat, sword, cane and cloak to the very bottom of his purse turned to the two remaining servants who were waiting obsequiously, each with a glove, and said affably: "Keep those. I will not trouble to buy them back. They are old and not worth a shilling."

City Council

MANY MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE ATTEND TO — WM. McGIE WITHDRAWS HIS TENDER—TAX COLLECTOR MAKES REPORT — WARRANTS TO BE ISSUED FOR BACK TAXES.

The last meeting of the City Council previous to the holidays was held last evening, at which Mayor Marsh presided. The Aldermen present were Ackerman, Bogle, Carlaw, Chown, Fairfield, Knox, Robinson, Thomas, Vermilyea, Wallace, Wallbridge, Woodley, Canning, Lott, Adams.

During the session considerable business was transacted and the Council adjourned until Monday, September 19th.

The Council went into committee of the whole on reports, communications, etc., Ald. Woodley in the chair.

The reports of the various civic committees were passed without much discussion.

The tender of the Standard Gas Holder and Boiler Construction Company for railing along the bank of the river Moira on Mill street for $295 was on motion accepted after Ald. Lott had stated that Mr. McGie, the lowest tenderer, had thrown up his tender, claiming he had made a mistake in his figures. The next lowest tender was that of the Standard Gas Holder and Boiler Construction Company.

The recommendation that the city pay one-third of its share towards building a bridge on the boundary road between the city and Thurlow Township caused some discussion.

Mayor Marsh stated that whilst he would like to see the bridge erected he wanted the city protected. He was not so sure that the city was compelled to pay its share towards erecting that structure.

Several of the Aldermen spoke in support of the project, claiming it would be a benefit to the city.

The matter was left over for a motion which was passed at a later stage of the proceedings.

The following accounts were passed:

STRUCK A SNAG.

A Painful Jolt For the Good Roads Ambassador.

I'll never forget the night I called on the Widow Yarn. She owned forty acres on the main road, which I hoped to have improved. In practically every house in the county I had been hospitably received because I was a human being. A pioneer citizen, member of the Good Roads club, took me in a carriage to see the widow. "I'll watch the horses," this wise old citizen said.

"I don't know what would frighten them," I suggested, but he seemed to expect a brass band or some other unusual sight, although it was 8 o'clock at night. I soon knew why he preferred to sit out there in the cold.

"Mrs. Yarn, I believe?" I began ingratiatingly when the door was opened.

"Well," the person who stood there observed, "I've been here forty years. You ought to believe it."

"This," thinks I to myself, "is a strange place for curbstone humor." And then aloud: "I have been talking for good roads, madam. We have decided to run a rock road by here, and as"—

"Who has decided?" This in the voice of a conductor when he asks you how old your little boy is.

"Why," I stammered, "the Good Roads club, and"—

"I don't belong to it, do I? They wouldn't have a woman member, would they?"

"I'm sure I don't know. I have been chiefly"—

"Sure you don't!" the Widow Yarn snapped. "You're chiefly concerned about taxing my forty acres into the county treasury without letting me vote on it. What right have you to come over here to build roads? Are you a road builder? Did you ever build a road or pay for one?"

"Madam," I said, "you really do have a vote on this question if a road district is organized. You have forty votes—one for every acre you own, and"—

Her face lighted up with a light that never was seen before on human face unless perhaps in riding on an old transfer or getting rid of a bad nickel. She opened the door wider—I had not been admitted up to that moment—and asked me to enter.

"You say I have forty votes?" she inquired.

"You have," I assured her, feeling like the bearer of good news.

"Well, glory be!" the Widow Yarn sighed, rocking herself comfortably. "Glory be, say I! I'll cast them all against your old rock road. Now I must be getting ready for prayer meeting."—Charles Dillon in Harper's Weekly.

The Terrors of Frankness.

"There is no worse vice than frankness," said a playwright. "How should I feel, for example, if I asked you for your opinion of my plays and you answered me frankly, quite frankly? Why, I should feel like the poor lady at the bridge drive who said to her hostess' little daughter:

"'Your eyes are such a heavenly blue. And what color are my eyes, darling?'

"The child's high treble traveled easily to the farthest corner of the quiet room as she replied, looking earnestly up into her questioner's face:

"'Dwab middles, yellow whites and wed wims!'"—Exchange.

Ruskin and the Turners.

How closely famous pictures can be imitated by skillful artists was proved by an exhibition by Ruskin in 1875 of a series of facsimiles of Turner's pictures in the National gallery, London. The collection was accompanied by a characteristic note from Ruskin, in which he said, "I have given my best attention during upward of ten years to train a copyist to perfect fidelity in rendering the works of Turner and have now succeeded in enabling him to produce facsimiles so close as to look like replicas—facsimiles which I must sign with my own name to prevent their being sold for real Turners."

Kith and Kin.

"Very interesting conversation in here?" asked papa, suddenly thrusting his head through the conservatory window, where Ethel, Mr. Tomkins and little Eva sat very quietly.

"Yes, indeed," said Ethel, ready on the instant with a reply. "Mr. Tomkins and I were discussing our kith and kin, weren't we, Eva?"

"Yeth, you wath," replied little Eva. "Mr. Tomkins said, 'May I have a kith?' and Ethel said, 'You kin.'"—London Tit-Bits.

A Deduction.

"Little Willie Withers is the brighest and best behaved boy in the neighborhood."

"Allow me to deduce."

"Go ahead."

"You don't know little Willie, and you've recently been chatting with his mother."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

EXPLOSION KILLS THREE.

Plant of Dominion Explosives Co. Is Wrecked.

Arnprior, July 12.—With a roar that was heard and a shock that was felt for miles around, the factory of the Dominion Explosives Co blew up yesterday morning shortly before 11 o'clock. It was located at Sandpoint, five miles west of this town, and a few minutes after the explosion a telephone call was sent in for help. All the doctors in Arnprior hurried to the scene of the disaster. The factory had taken fire and there was great danger of a second explosion. The members of the fire brigade, however, did all they could, not only to prevent the spread of the flames but to rescue the injured. They succeeded in preventing the flames from reaching the magazine in which, it is stated, a very large quantity of the company's stock of explosives is stored.

The dead are:—Earl Murphy, aged 13, Arnprior; Frank Pittner, aged 37, explosives expert, Philadelphia; John Hewart, aged 30, explosives expert, Philadelphia.

The injured are:—David Lynn, Sandpoint; Edward Lynn, son of above, skull fractured, may die; Chas. Thomas, Sandpoint; Thomas Mullett, Carleton Place; John Chatterton, Sandpoint; W. Bradley, Perth; Supt. Matchett, Ottawa; Donald McLean, Sandpoint.

The men who escaped can give no reason for the disaster. The explosive the company makes is called the "blaster's friend" and was believed to be particularly safe. Mr. Henry G. Nicoll of New York, president of the company, reached Arnprior last night and will to-day, in company with Supt. Sachette, who was slightly injured, visit the wreck of the factory. He will make no statement till after his visit.

The remains of Pittner and Hewart were found yesterday afternoon, but there is no trace of Murphy's body.

Young Lynn, whose condition is critical, was engaged rolling cartridges when the explosion occurred. He was covered with flying debris, his skull being fractured. The three people killed had just gone into the drying and mixing-room when the explosion occurred. Pittner and Hewart were experts who had come from Philadelphia to work in the mills. Hewart was unmarried, but Pittner is survived by a widow and two children, who live at Arnprior.

Those Fight Films.

Manila, July 12.—In fear of the effect which they might have upon the Filipinos, the municipal board of Manila has resolved to prohibit the exhibition of the Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures.

Ottawa, July 12.—Rev. Father Duhaut, from his pulpit in Hull yesterday, assailed the civic and Quebec authorities for countenancing the fight pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson battle, which it is proposed to show in Quebec Province.

London, July 12.—The moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight will be exhibited in England without interference on the part of the authorities. Home Secretary Winston Churchill announced yesterday in the House of Commons that the Government had no power to prevent the exhibition of the pictures.

Anti-Clerical Agitation.

Madrid, July 12.—Anti-clerical meetings continue to be held in Madrid, Saragossa, Taragone and Toledo. At Barcelona a petition signed by 22,000 women was presented to the governor of that city, endorsing the Government's religious policy. At Grenada, in Andalusia, a gathering of Catholics was attacked by the anti-clericals.

The Government has received a strong protest from the Vatican against the bill prepared by Premier Canalejas forbidding other religious orders to enter Spain, pending the settlement of the present difficulties. The Vatican contends that Spain has no right to take any step regarding the religious orders without a previous agreement with the Holy See.

CAMPBELLTON GUTTED

New Brunswick Town Is Heavy Sufferer From Fire.

All Communication Is Disturbed, But at Last Reports Miramichi Pulp Mills, Shingle Mills and Everything But a Few Houses Are Reported Destroyed by the Flames—Dalhousie Send Firemen.

St. John, N.B., July 12.—The fragmentary reports of a disastrous fire which broke out in Campbellton, on the Intercolonial Railway, in the northern part of the province, late yesterday indicate that the town is practically destroyed. The fire broke out, says a Chatham message, in the Richards Co.'s shingle mill, and spread rapidly throughout the town. One report says only a few houses are left standing. Among the property destroyed are the Intercolonial station house and freight sheds. The Great Northwestern Telegraph office is burned, and all communication with Campbellton by either telegraph or telephone is cut off. Dalhousie, a town several miles distant, reports sending apparatus to help Campbellton, and then itself being visited by fire, which, however, was subdued by hard work. Chatham also had a blaze, a telephone message stating that the Miramichi Co.'s pulp mill was considerably damaged.

The property loss is estimated at $2,000,000.

Canadians Protest.

London, July 12.—With reference to the King's declaration the organizers of the opposition to the change here have received several expressions of opinion from Canada. H. H. Blake writes that England is making history, let her keep profane hands absolutely off the coronation oath until Rome grants what she herself demands—worldwide religious liberty.

T. S. Sproule says: "Three hundred thousand Orangemen and hundreds of thousands of Protestants in Canada are heartily in sympathy with you."

Will Report Be Issued?

Ottawa, July 12.—Enquiry was made at the Militia Department yesterday as the likelihood of Sir John French's report on Canada's militia resources, which has been, or is at the present time, in the course of preparation, being made public. In the absence of Sir Frederick Borden, who has gone to Nova Scotia for a few weeks, and Col. Fiset, the Deputy Minister, who is also out of town, nothing definite could be learned.

ROLLS MEETS DEATH

Britain's Greatest Aviator Killed Before Big Crowd.

The Young Officer Who Made the Sensational Return Trip Across English Channel Has an Accident In the Air and Is Crushed Under His Machine.—Huge Gathering Gazes Horror-Stricken at Disaster.

Bournemouth, Eng., July 13.—Hon. Charles Stewart Rolls, the famous English aviator, who, on June 2 last, won the honor of being the only man to make a round trip across the English Channel from England to France, was killed yesterday in the aviation meet here.

While flying in a Wright machine in the alighting competition for a prize of $1,250, his aeroplane suddenly turned a somersault, crashed 40 feet to the ground and crushed the aviator to death directly opposite the grand stand.

Almost immediately after the first signs of trouble were noticed the aeroplane turned a complete somersault and then plunged straight down. Rolls attempted to extricate himself, but the drop was too swift. The edge of the machine caught him as the two came to the ground together and fatally crushed him. His limbs were fractured and he died within a few minutes.

CAPT. C. S. ROLLS.

Upon investigation, after the accident, however, it was found that the tail of the biplane had broken. The disaster is attributed to a slight fault in the material of the machine, which left the biplane unable to bear the strain of sixty miles an hour speed at which Rolls was flying.

A pathetic sequel occurred late in the afternoon, when Rolls' father and mother, Lord and Lady Llangattock, arrived off Bournemouth in their yacht. As they came ashore they upbraided themselves for being too late to witness the start of their son's flight, which they knew had been set for a certain time. They hurried to a waiting automobile, to rush to the aviation field, in the hope of seeing Capt. Rolls before he descended. There they were met with the news of his death, which they had narrowly avoided witnessing.

Banker Dies Suddenly.

Standard Time for Paris.

Paris, July 13.—The Cabinet has decided to submit a bill for the adoption of western European time in France. During the old days of enmity towards England, the French steadily refused to accept standard time, maintaining the solar time of Paris, which is nine minutes slower.

Seized Ice Cream Cone.

New York, July 13.—More than 4,500,000 ice cream cones have been seized by United States Marshal Henkel as a part of the campaign being waged by the Government under the pure food act. It is alleged that the cones contain boric acid and are injurious to health.

FIRE COST THREE LIVES.

Child and Two Doctors Perished In Campbellton, N.B.

St. John, N.B., July 13.—The latest report of deaths in the disastrous fire of Monday, which obliterated the thriving lumbering town of Campbellton, is that a child named Doyle was suffocated; that two medical doctors met death.

As a consequence of the fire Dr. Sproule is reported to have been killed by the explosion of gasoline in his auto, and that a man named O'Keefe is missing. This is not certain, for it is hard to get direct accurate news.

Relief is being forwarded to the stricken town by neighboring communities and from this city. In addition to $2,000 voted by St. John, the Provincial Government has given $2,000, and subscriptions will be opened up at various places. One, at Chatham, is headed by Lieut.-Governor Tweedie with $100.

The fire broke out in the Richard's lumber mill about two o'clock in the afternoon, and the waterworks system giving out, by 10 p.m. the town was in ashes, as was also Richardsville, a village a mile distant. The sleepers of the I.C.R. tracks for two or three miles are burned, preventing the running of trains. The I.C.R. total loss is placed at $200,000. Six lumber mills, employing over 2,000 men, are destroyed. Over 100 business houses are in ruins, and their loss is placed at $880,000, with $380,000 insurance.

It is estimated that 4,000 persons are homeless. While it is difficult to make an estimate of loss, both in Campbellton, and in Richardsville, it is thought that it will greatly exceed $2,500,000. In Richardsville there were few buildings other than the mills, and the homes of those who worked therein, but all are now things of the past.

Bronze Lions For Eaton Tomb.

New York, July 13.—Two bronze lions, which have their prototype in one of the monarchs of the jungle now in the New York Zoological Park, are soon to be sent to Toronto. They are for the decoration of the Eaton mausoleum in Toronto, and are to be placed one on each side of the entrance to the tomb. The sculptor is Eli Harvey of Washington square, who has devoted his talent for many years to animal sculptures.

Ladies Don't Like It.

London, July 13.—A Cape Town letter to The Standard says an unofficial edict has gone forth that on official occasions ladies must curtsey to the Governor-General's lady. The innovation has met with a cool reception, not a few ladies, including wives of Ministers, have appeared before Lady Gladstone, showing by their upright carriage, a strong disinclination to yield obedience to the order.

Powder Magazine Blew Up.

Pittsburg, July 13—A powder magazine at Cabot, Pa., exploded early yesterday, killing at least one person and injuring about twenty others. The magazine contained 1,000 pounds of dynamite and 5,000 pounds of blasting powder.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

Canadian Treaty with Japan, 1906.
Hon. A. S Hardy, Premier of Ontario, 1896.

TIMELY TOPICS.

One feature in the Manitoba elections just fought, is the fact that thre are four French Canadians Conservatives elected and not one quite clear that the French Canadian electors in Manitoba have a keener sense of their duty to the state than have their fellow electors in Quebec.

◆ ◆ ◆

Farmers' will need this year to be more careful than ever in harvesting their clover seed, looking the crop over before cutting, and hand pulling or cutting out weed patches with a scythe before harvesting. Growers must remember it rests with them almost entirely, whether we have clean seed free from weeds and fit for a critical market at top prices.

◆ ◆ ◆

Canada has no market now for low grade clover seed containing foul and noxious weeds, and during the last two years, fourteen of the States to the South of us, have enacted stringent laws to govern the seed trade, which has practically closed their markets to us. Europe the same, will ake nothing but the best.

◆ ◆ ◆

On the other hand, those that have clean land, and watch their crop carefully, would do well to devote larger areas to the production of clover seed, which is one of the best money producing crops of the Province of Ontario. considering the amount of labor involved.

THE "DON'T NEED TO" THEORY.

In a recent debate at Reno Mr. James Jeffries failed to convince Mr. John Johnson.

Some seven or eight years ago Mr. Jeffries was the leading man in his line of work. Business was good and the profits were big.

Having all he money he could handle at the time, he concluded to take a rest.

To be sure, he planned to get into the field again at the proper time.

But everything was rosy and there really seemed no good and sufficient reasn why he should spend so many hours a day keeping his muscles lithe and strong and his wind good and his heart and nerves in trim.

Eventually the meeting with Mr. Johnson was arranged. Mr. Jeffries was still tolrably content with what he had done.

(Brother, a has-done is about as bad as a has-been.)

Mr. Jeffries did not care to stand up in the training ring and punch and feints and rushes.

He knew all about them. Why, seven years ago he had done all of that he ever needed to do.

Mr. Johnson did not overlook the boxing and the wrestling and the clinching and the isdestepping, etc.

As a result, Mr. Jeffries received Mr. Johnson's compliments on the point of the jaw and his business career closed.

Advertising a business is the training of that business.

Advertising keeps a business healthy.

It tones up its liver, strengthens its biceps, steadies its heart and keeps its nerves in order.

Once in a while a man decides that he is doing so much business that he can stop advertising for a while and run on momentum.

Momentum is the gradual process toward a full stop.

The momentum business is usually prematurely full-stopped by the straight left jab of the well-trained competitor who finds his opening in the fifteenth round.

If you want to stay in business stay in the advertising field.

No matter how much business you are doing, keep up the energy that makes it.

You might as well cut off your legs because you are running well in a foot race as to cut off your advertising because your business is too good.

You might as well tell the insurance man that you are so healthy you will drop the policy for a few years as to stop advertising because the orders are piling up.

"Don't need to" is the eventual preliminary to "Can't do it."

The only policy holder who doesn't need to pay his premiums is dead

The only man who doesn't need to advertise is the man who has retired from business

Mr. Jeffries doesn't need to train any more. He is licked.

The Old Boys' Procession.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

My Dear Sir,—For every great event in a city, a prominent feature of the celebration is the procession. I confidenly appeal to the citizens, and especially to the ladies, and ask them for a few days to devote their attention to doing something which will make the reception one to be long remembered as a signal success. Floats necessarily form the most attractive and beautiful features of any grand parade. To construct these, intelligence, good taste and work are necessary. Floats do not build themselves Children are in evidence in vast numbers in our city. Cannot the parents unite in the celebration by contributing a little well spent time and labor in exhibiting to our friends and guests what beautiful young Canadians we have in this our much loved home. I am aware that to succeed, requires leaders. The committee is ready to work night and day to assist in all possible directions. Will our citizens kindly lend helping hands. A word to the fraternal societies. I have not been able to learn of one society which will parade. Surely when we have so many societies some of them might give a little attention in this direction. All fraternal and national societies are cordially invited to join in the procession.

All committees are at work. No one not in the harness can have any adequate idea of the innumerable cares and difficulties which crop up as if "Pandores" box was opened again. We are all working with a will—help us along.

I am yours,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.
Chairman of Parade.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign Notes

In order that the full forty thousand be subscribed for the Y. M. C. A. building, it remains for those engaged in the canvass to secure about five thousand dollars more in the next two days.

Will they get it?

Just at this point is the place to work in Mr. Graham's story about the woodchuck, but as you have all heard it before, we will spare you this time. Just the same it should be told, a sit fits this case exactly. "They've got to get it."

Now you know very well the law respecting citizens who are trying to make it easy for you to part with your money could not go right over in the beginning of this campaign hold you up at the point of a gun, and while you had your hands above your head, relieve you of your surplus cash. This is a quick, effective and fairly safe way of collecting. But the best society looks on the method with disfavor, hence the quiet and slower way in vogue here at present. No doubt the "gun" suggestion will have to be resorted to in a few cases. but only as conditions demand it.

In this connection it is right you should be made acquainted with the fact. that a determined and well organized company of desperate men are camping on your trail day and night, and your chances of escape are about one in a thousand. Over five hundred men, women and children have been arrested, fined from one to five thousand dollars and given their liberty.

It is just possible some may have to be arrested and fined again, for as mentioned above "They've got to get it."

So any who feel they were too easily dealt with come right along, pay the balance of what you feel you should have been fined, and ward off a heap of trouble

Will those who are about to subscribe from three to five thousand, kindly reconsider the matter and cut it down to say a thousand or so. These very large subscriptions tend to discourage those who only want to give a few hundreds, besides it is desirable to have everybody interested that the benefits may be far reaching as possible.

Perverted Justice.

The Montreal Herald of July 6th, gives the following specimen of the way in which justice is administered in Montreal.

"A boy of ten years, who looks to be hardly five, was arrested by a so-called Canadian Pacific Railway detective and put in the cells because he had been seen with a gang of other boys picking coal along the right of way of the Canadian Pacific. The boy cried and his mother, who accompanied him, tried to interfere, but as neither spoke a word of English or French the detective didn't not seem to understand them. Later, the boy was brought before Judge Lanctot, who could not question him as there was no interpreter, but sent him to the Reformatory because he was barefooted and his hands were very dirty."

What must the poor foreigner, who supposed he was coming to a civilized country think of this treatment? Aldermen who rob the city out of a quarter of a million in a year, are allowed to go scot free, while an unfortunate foreign boy of 10 years of age is sent to the Reformatory because he picked up some "coal along the right of way of the Canadian Pacific." Judge Lanctot must have an unsound idea of what constitutes justice.

POPULAR COUPLE MARRIED

A very pretty wedding took place in Shannonville Methodist church on Wednesday, July 6, at 3 o'clock, when Mary Alice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry King, of Emmonsville, became the bride of Robert George, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Little, of Milltown, the Rev. W. S. Wickett officiating. The bride looked charming in a gown of deep cream silk and white picture hat, and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. The bride was attended by her sister Myrtle, who was becomingly attired in white, and wore a large white hat, while Mr. Edward Howe, of Belleville, did the honors of best man. After the ceremony was performed the party proceeded to the home of the bride's parents, where a tempting supper awaited them and where friends and relatives to the number of forty had assembled. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome locket, to the bridesmaid a gold crescent brooch, and to the groomsman a gold stickpin. The bride was the recipient of many handsome and valuable presents, among which was a hundred dollar cheque from her brother Edward. The happy couple left on the evening train amid showers of confetti and rice, for Toronto and points west. On their return they will reside in Milltown. The bride will be greatly missed in the vicinity of Emmonsville, as she always took a prominent part in social and church affairs. Her Sunday School class and the choir, of which she was a member, presented her with suitable tokens of the occasion.

MACLACHLAN EXECUTED THIS MORNING.

(Intelligencer Special)

Whitby, July 13.—Archibald MacLachlan paid the death penalty on the gallows this morning for the murder of his wife and two children, whose charred remains were found in the burned home, the husband and father having poisoned them and then set fire to the place on October 29th last. The condemned man showed no signs of fear when Hangman Ellis adjusted the black cap. With a muttered prayer MacLachlin dropped through the trap.

To one of his spiritual advisers yesterday he said: "I am going to the gallows without fear. My position arises from two causes, an inordinate love of a woman and liquor. I would urge all men to abstain from whiskey, refrain from flirtation, and lead strictly moral and upright lives.

When the hangman tried to open the trap, the bolt stuck and there were agonizing minutes while he hammered the bolt with a mallet. To expostulations of the sheriff, Ellis replied that the rain must have swollen the wood work.

Rev. Mr. Tighe, one of his spiritual advisers, claims to have a statement from MacLachlan which may be published later.

(Intelligencer Special)

Dusseldorf, Germany, July 13.—Five more lives were sacrificed for the science of aviation to-day when the dirigible balloon Erbtsock with its companions dropped from five thousand feet up in the clouds, nearly a mile, and fell in a tangled heap of wreckage and bodies to the ground. Surgeons say they never saw bodies so terribly smashed. It is supposed that one of the gas bags of the balloon exploded, bursting all the others in quick succession. The disaster recalls that in France some months ago, when five French officers were killed in the same way.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Prest., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Science Of Freemasonary.

Sermon preached to Madoc Lodge, No. 48, A. F. and A. M., Sunday, June 26th, 1910, by Rev. C. J. Young, B. A., Chaplain, formerly D. D. of Frontenac.

"Wisdom is justified of all her children."—St. Luke, VII, 35.

These are the concluding words, as according to the narrative of both St. Matthew and St. Luke, that Jesus Christ spoke concerning John the Baptist, who I may allude to as the twin saint of Masonry along with St. John, the evangelist. The Church observes the 24th of June as his memorial day, and Lodges of Masons observe the day or the Sunday nearest to it, usually by attending religious service.

God, at a time of religious disorganization in the world, sent two messengers who commended eternal truths to that generation of men in different ways—one as a Nazarite, John the Baptist, in the way of asceticism and absolute separation from the world; the other Jesus Christ, who preached the same kingdom but did this mixing with men, joining in marriage feasts; not prescribing rules of austerity or fasting, but eating and drinking what was set before him. But both alike were rejected by their generation. Of John, the ascetic and recluse, the said: "He hath a devil; of Jesus, who, to brighten mens' lives often lived sinlessly as one of themselves they said, "Behold a gluttonous man and a wine bibber, a friends of publicans and sinners." To all which Christ replies "Wisdom is justified of her children." It is he wisdom of God to use opposite means and instruments, to now draw men to Himself and to one another by truths proclaimed stern and severe as John proclaimed them, and again to attract mankind by all that is amicable and bright in life, as Jesus often did.

It is the wisdom of God to use these opposite means that by one or other of them all his children may be drawn towards him. The use of the word "Wisdom" in the text is, remarkable. It is akin to passages in the book of Proverbs written by King Solomon. It represents the impersonation of God in all that is wise and beautiful and divine on earth And so it stands for the Person, of whom such glorious things are spoken in that Book—Wisdom, the one crying in the streets, who builds her mystical house sending forth her maidens, gathering to herself all those who are willing to hear her voice, being none other than the Divine work showing Himself forth in all His dealings with his children, incarnate in Abraham the friend of God, in Moses the lawgiver, in Joshua the warrior, in Samuel the prophet, in Solomon, the wise King, in prophets and priests that followed through many generations, in John the Baptist, in our Divine Master, in his many followers to this present hour, "Wisdom is justified of all her children."

In character John is represented as the ideal mason—stern, uncompromising; no hunter after popularity, who frames his teaching to catch the ears of a fickle multitude. Neither was he a time-server, laying himself out to please such a great man as Herod. He came in the spirit and power of Elias; as a messenger, as one who forewarned, the teacher of absolute truth, not fettered by a creed which in his day had not come into being. He was one who could not foll in with the listless, the frivolous—often false and hypocritical methods of his day, but by earnestness and determined devotion impressed and inspired men with his own energy and enthusiasm.

Freemasonry is to be described as a perfect system of morality. It cannot be mixed with politics. It contains not a single element of political feeling. The order embraces in a wide and universal bond men of every rank, climate and religion, and we are debarred by our constitutions from displaying party sentiment in our lodges. It has been truly observed that a good Mason can neither be a bad man or a bad subject, for the basis of masonry is religion, and without subordination it cannot exist. The construction of the order exhibits a most perfect pattern of civil government, maintained by organized grades of rank and enforced alike by precept and example.

It is a fundamental principle of masonry that every officer, whether supreme or subordinate, is to be obeyed in his station by all the brethren, consequently the more careful lodges are in the selection of their officers, the more such lodges influence and progress.

Political and religious discussions are absolutely forbidden in our assemblies. In a word, the principles and methods of our order are a sufficient guarantee that our secret practises do not possess a tendency to belittle religion or endanger the welfare of the State. There are some ever-ready to assert, that Freemasonry as a system is calculated to subvert all human institutions, to degrade rank and to effect political changes of an evil character. All such notions on consideration may be quickly changed by what I have said above. Our prayers at the funeral of a brother emphasizes this "Vouchsafe us, we beseech Thee, Oh, Gracious Father, Thy Divine assistance in the discharge of duties. Thou hast assigned us in the erecting of our moral edifice, and the beauty of holiness to adorn and render all our performances acceptable in Thy sight."

A writer in an old journal called the London Magazine, long since defunct, rote: "I affirm as a fact that before the beginning of the 17th century (about the reign of James I. (1603—1625) no traces are to be met with of the Masonic Order.

The refutation of this is perfectly simple and easy, for waiving all uncertain authorities, it is well attested truth that a chapter of Athelstan, a Saxon King, granted to the English Freemasons in the 10th century (925—940), is still in existence, and the same monarch convened a grand lodge in the city of York, at which several ancient manuscripts were produced written in Greek and Latin containing the charges and constitutions of Freemasonry as practised in other countries many centuries before that period. From an ancient parchment sheet written early in the 17th century and apparently copied from a MS of earlier date, we are able to obtain a good account of the History of Masonry. It commences, "Good Brethren and worthy fellows, our purpose is to tell you how and in what manner this science of Masonry was begun, and afterwards how it was favored by Kings and Princes and by many other worshipful men. And also to those that shall be willing, we declare the charge that belongeth to any true mason to keep in good faith. And YOU have good need thereto; it is well worthy to be well kept for a worthy craft and a curious science."

Now I will speak of the origin of Masonry. There are seven so called liberal sciences, and Masonry is one of them. First — Grammar which teaches to speak and write correctly; second—Rhetoric, which teaches to speak well in subtle terms; third—Logic the art of reasoning; fourth—Arithmetic, which teaches to reckon and account all manner of numbers; fifth — Geometry, which teaches the measure of the earth and all other measures, and is the one which includes the science of Masonry. The sixth, is known as music; the seventh is called astronomy, that teaches a man the course of the sun, moon and heavenly bodies

These according to ancient reckoning are the seven liberal sciences.

As to the origin of these sciences tradition is as follows:

Before the deluge the Scripture tells us there was a man called Lamech, of whose wives Adah and Zilla, four children were born, from whom were derived a knowledge of all sciences known on earth. The oldest son, Jabell, founded the science of geometry which includes Masonry; the others, the other sciences. And these children knew well that God was about to punish the world for sin, wherefore they wrote the sciences that they had found on two pillars of stone, that they might be found after the flood of Noah. One of the two pillars of stone was found by a descendant of Shem, the son of Noah, who taught the science of geometry, which contains Masonry to other men. At the building of the tower of Babylon or Babel, this science was made much of, and when Nineveh and other cities of the East were built the science was first extolled. For Nimrod, the King of Babylon, sent to the King of Nineveh 60 Masons, to whom he gave a charge as follows: "That they should be true each one to the other and that they should serve their master truly for their pay. They should see that their employer be respected and all that belonged to him." This was the first time that a charge was given to Masons. When Abraham, with Sarah, his wife, went down to Egypt, he taught the sciences to the Egyptians, and according to tradition had a scholar called Euclid. This man was a master of geometry, and to him the King of Egypt gave a commission to instruct his sons and the sons of the great lords of the country, in the principles of geometry and other sciences, that they might make for themselves an honorable living and might work in stone those wonderful buildings and temples whose ruins still adorn the land of Egypt. And he gave them a charge in this wise—that they should be true to the King of the country and all that were in authority, and that they should live in harmony together and be true each to the other. That they should call each other fellow or brother and not servant or slave; that they should deserve their pay from the one that hired them or from the master whom they served; that they should select the wisest among them to be master of the work and not select any one to be such on account of lineage or riches or favor Also that they should call the one set over the work their master whilst they worked with him, and other charges too many to mention, and to these they made them swear by the oath that men used in that age. And in addition they decreed that they should all assemble together each year once that they might take council how they might work best for their employers and for themselves. This is the origin of the early meeting of the Grand Lodge. Thus was the science grounded and Euclid gave it the name of geometry, but now we speak of it as Masonry. Long afterwards this science was brought by the children of Israel into Judea, where King David later prepared for the temple of Jerusalem and Solomon built it.

And at the building of the temple Solomon had 80,000 workers in stone, all of whom were called Masons, who worked together under the ancient rule and supposedly with a common purpose. Thus was Masonry confirmed in the country of Judea under King Solomon, the first Grand Master, and in many other Kingdoms. Later it was brought to France and flourished under Charles Martel, the noted Frenchman, who died in A.D. 741, and gave a charter to Masons to enable them to assemble once a year where they wished. Thus the science was esablished in France; and from France it came to England, where later it was specially favored by King Athelstan and Edwin, his son, and from that day forward meetings of Masons have taken place and the substance of the first charge given—"That every Mason should be true to God and religion and should shun treason and falsehood and should maintain public and domestic morality." This is the nature of the obligation to-day as it has been through past generations.

But for generations the order of Freemasons has ceased to be operative; it is now confined to speculative Masonry, and lodges are scattered about in every civilized country. In it you see the germ and idea of all real fraternal associations so necessary for the uplifting and betterment of mankind. And so when a worthy brother is taken away by death and the great shelter of Masonic charity covers the shortcomings of his earthly life, we have a public charge at his funeral to this effect

"In conformity with immemorial usage, we have assembled in the character of Masons to resign his body to the earth whence it came, and to offer up to his memory before the world this last tribute of affection, thereby demonstrating the sincerity of our past esteem and our inviolable attachment to the principles of our order, recognizing that he great Creator having been pleased out of His mercy to remove a brother from the cares and troubles of a transitory existence to a state of eternal duration, may enable us who survive him to understand our duties and anticipate our end, and thus be more strongly cemented in the ties of union and friendship which make for a common brotherhood.

The Broken Trust

Mr. Grey came back and stood before her.

"I repeat my appeal," he said; "in the name of justice, tell me what you know of this man."

"I know nothing!" she said, standing calm and erect before him. "Why do you ask or question me so?"

"Because I am convinced that whatever mystery this man's life holds, you have the key."

"Speak in plain terms," said Edith Westerne. "You know who and what this man was before he went by the name of Sir Alan Aynsly."

By the way in which she shuddered they knew Edith had touched the truth.

"You know," went on the calm, pitiless voice, "when you screen a sinner you share in the sin. Have you no sense of justice, Miss Bruce, that you refuse to answer?"

Still no word, but the white lips shaped themselves to say:

"I know nothing."

"Perhaps you will listen to me," said Vivian, bending over her, with pity in every line of his brave, handsome face. "If you know to what we are alluding you will know how far and how deeply I have been wronged. My love, all I have in the world is at stake. Will you not do an act of justice for me? I never injured you, but your silence will cruelly injure me."

"I—I cannot," she gasped, 'I know nothing."

It was Paul Westerne who took her hand in his.

"Miss Bruce, your heart is as true as your face. Cruel wrong has, we fear been done— cruel injustice and fraud, and, before God, I believe you are bound, if you can, to set it straight."

She turned her fair ,tortured face to his and cried:

"Let me go—I have nothing to say—let me go!"

"You refuse all and any answer to our questions?" said Mr. Grey very angrily.

"I do," she replied.

"Perhaps," he continued, "you have your own reasons for so doing—perhaps your own interest demands your silence?"

He never forgot the proud, haughty glance in cold dark eyes as they rested upon him.

"Neither torture—nor death—would force me to speak or to keep silent unless I chose," she said. "Let me go, Miss Edith, let me go!"

"We must presume," continued Mr. Grey, "that you do not even know to what we are alluding."

"Presume what you will, only let me go!"

The agony on her fair, young face touched Captain Chandos. He was less pitiless than the young girl, whose heart was bent on discovering the fate of her lost friend. He drew near her, and bending over her, whispered:

"I now what love is. You look like one who can love until death. If it be from love you keep silent, Heaven forbid, even to save myself, I should ask you to break it."

She looked up at him, her whole soul doing homage to the nobility of his—and this gallant, noble man—this loyal gentleman, was the one so cruelly defrauded.

She was nearer revealing her secret then than at any other time; but Captain Chandos turned round.

"Gentlemen," he said, " I am more nearly interested in this case than any other can be and I say from the depths of my heart, I would rather let the inquiry cease and lose all connected with it, than see Miss Bruce tortured for my sake."

"Why should it torture her if she knows nothing?" said Edith, impatiently. "You are too chivalrous, Captain Chandos. Justice is due to the living and to the dead."

"We will do what we have to do without Miss Bruce," he replied. "I cannot see a woman suffer for me. Miss Bruce has expressed a wish to go; Mr. Grey will, I am sure, accede to it."

"Certainly," said Mr. Grey, with very poor grace, "though I agree with Miss Westerne ;it is sheer folly to lose what might be a valuable witness from such very chivalrous ideas. You please yourself, Captain Chandos."

The grateful look Esther gave him repaid him. He was too much of a gentleman to see a woman suffer so keenly for his sake.

"You have disappointed me, Miss Bruce," said Paul Westerne.

"I am very sorry," she said humbly, "but I know nothing. I have nothing to say."

She went quietly from the room, without another word, and passed out into the street.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

An Angel of Pity.

'I never could understand women," said Mr. Grey, as Esther went out of the room, "and never shall, I suppose. I should have thought from that girl's face she was as true as steel."

"So she is," said Captain Chandos, "only it is to the wrong man. If Sir Alan has a secret, and it rests with her, it is safe in life and death."

"It cannot be love, for Sir Alan is very deeply in love with Lady Blanche. If he has deceived this girl, she would have only been too glad to have retaliated up him," said Mr. Grey.

Edith raised her fair face with a smile.

"Coke and Blackstone have taught you nothing about women, if you believe that."

"Shall you go to Carsdale to-morrow?" Vivian asked the lawyer.

"I cannot go this week; I have imperative engagements for every day; but I shall not be able to forget the case for one moment—it shall have the full benefit of our thoughts and attention, I promise you."

Then the two gentlemen took their departure. Paul Westerne was unable to paint, work or read; he began to pace wearily up and down the room.

"Edith," he cried, 'I cannot forget that girl's face, with its tortured, hunted look. I begin to repent we have ever interfered in the business at all."

"You are weak of purpose, papa, if the expression of a woman's face is to divert you from justice and duty."

"It is a hateful duty; my tendencies all lie toward pity and mercy; justice is pitiless. I have clasped that man's hand, the same hand that has showered benefits on me and detest the thought of helping to ruin him."

"Weak pity," said Edith; "pity for an unworthy object. If you pity the usurper, papa, what do you feel for Alan Wayne? Living or dead, what do you feel for him? Or for Captain Chandos, defrauded of his rights, cheated and wronged? Let the pity be equally shared."

"I know," he replied, 'you are right and I am wrong. I may just as well tell the truth while I am about it; but all the same, I am sorry for the man, even though he be an imposter; it is weak, but I cannot help it."

"It is weak," she replied, calmly, "and Captain Chandos is weak, too, or he would have forced Miss Bruce to answer his question."

* * *

Esther Bruce left the house like one in a dream. They had tracked him, then, although his secret had not passed her lips, and should not, if they killed her for silence. Yet it must be known. Why should Captain Chandos meet her there if it were not so?

It must be known, and he, Paul Lynne, must be in danger of death. What could she do? How could she warn him?

She clasped her hands in terror; large drops stood upon her broad white brow. She forgot everything in that moment, save that she loved him, and he was in danger; all his treachery, his cruelty, his base frauds, his infidelity to her, faded from her mind. She remembered only that she loved him, and he was even now, perhaps, in danger of death. She remembered nothing nothing, save that she would give, willingly, her life a hundred times over to save his.

Fear lent her wings and she fled rapidly on, walking as fast as she could through vast squares, crowded streets, past quiet churches, on which her wild eyes lingered while the words of a prayer died away on her lips. Once in her desperate haste she stumbled over a little child, and she, usually so gentle and kind, heard its cries and never stopped to raise it . People shouted after her, but at one look into that white face they fell back and said never a word.

Turning the corner of a street, she stumbled, hurry and fear had blinded her, and, falling, she struck against a lady, who at the very moment was looking at her. She fell like one dead, white, cold and senseless, but kind hands ministered to her.

"My house is here," said the lady; "carry her in."

A stalwart policeman raised her in his arms and carried her into the kindly Samaritan's house.

"Poor thing," said the lady, kneeling down by her side and drawing back the masses of fair hair. "Poor child; what awful fear there is in her face!"

Concerning the Fateful 13.

There were 13 colonies in revolutionary America and a London newspaper of 1776 printed a mocking paragraph suggesting that the rebels thought there was luck in the number. To a party of returned naval prisoners were attributed assertions that 13 dried clams were the rebels' daily ration; that Washington had 13 toes (three having grown since the declaration of Independence) and 13 teeth in each jaw; and that the regular rebel family numbered 13 children, all of whom expected to become generals or members of congress at the age of 13. It was added that 13 American paper dollars were worth 1 penny sterling.

Responding to outside influence in the Dog Days, our Inside Department refuses to work overtime.

Needing most in hot weather the "coddling" of Cunning Cookery.

Therefore, Madam, let all YOUR summer meals be light, and dainty, and tempting to jaded, sluggish appetites.

And your breadstuffs and good things all will be light, and porous and tempting beyond resistance—if YOU use that wonderful FIVE ROSES flour, popular with good housewives.

Your mixing, kneading, rising is easier, faster, cheaper.

You invariably get delicious batches, glorious shapely loaves that gladden the eye—thin cracking crust irresistible—beautiful golden bloom, crisp yet tender, sweet as a hickory nut in flavor.

A yielding crumb—smooth, velvety.

These are the featherweight, close-cutting kind — fresh, moist for days without crumbling — hot weather will not parch them.

And the FIVE ROSES qualities taken from the purest Manitoba wheat do not tax digestion—summer stomachs are never offended.

And each nibble from pastries, biscuits, cookies is a ready appetizer for further proceedings — no regrets evermore.

Make and bake, make your summer meals with FIVE ROSES aid.

Our Accentric Phrases.

Why do we always talk of putting on a coat and vest? Who puts on a coat before a vest? We also say putting on shoes and stockings. Who put on shoes before the stockings? We also put up signs telling people to wipe their feet when we mean their boots or shoes. And a father tells a boy he will warm his jacket when he means to warm his pantaloons. We are a little eccentric in our phrases at times.

THE YOUNG DOMINION

SOUTH AFRICA IS A MOST COSMOPOLITAN LAND.

It Has an Immense Majority of Blacks Who Constitute a Serious Problem—Boers and British Are Peacably Settling Their Differences and the Dutchmen Are Acquiring Education.

British South Africa is the latest of our possessions to unite its four colonies, and the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Transvaal and Orange River now form a United South Africa, writes a special correspondent of The Montreal Star.

An enormous territory is this lying south of the great Zambesi River, all of which, with the exception of that arid and profitless strip known as German Southwest Africa, now belongs to the British Empire; yet at what cost has it been obtained and retained! Its administration and government has proved the fall of many an otherwise able statesman and soldier; its acquisition has only been gained by the colonists after strenuous and unremitting conflict against every conceivable kind of foe. Internecine wars 'twixt English, Dutch and native races have marked the land with visible scars, and thus for the dates of the country's history are fixed by such and such a rebellion or war.

Even the land seems to have more than its due share of the primeval curse, for it is not fruitful, and the farmer has to face numerous pests such as rinderpest, red-water fever and other cattle diseases, which has so far baffled the experts who are employed by the Government to make researches. But against all the drawbacks there is this one advantage, that it is a sunny land, when the sunshine is on continuously and so regular that occasionally a beclouded day comes as a relief. The newly-arrived Englishman always suffers from a red neck, which has led to the Dutchman's term of contempt for the uitlander, "rooi-neck." The Boer's supreme contempt is aroused when it sees a rooi-neck essaying his first horse riding attempt or firing a rifle.

This vast sub-continent is but sparsely populated, the black inhabitants numbering over six millions, and the European only a little over one million.

Broadly speaking, there are three important constituents in the population, (1) English, (2) Dutch, and (3) native; but over and above these are people of all European and many Asiatic countries. It is evident that the immigration laws have been put into effect, with the result that the population is as heterogeneous a one as can be seen anywhere, though this statement applies to the towns of Johannesburg, Durban and Cape Town, the gate to the sub-continent. A walk along Adderley street will bring one in contact with complexions of every hue and shade, and upon the ear will fall conversations which will perplex the professional linguist. Veritably, it is a land which might have been under the shade of the Tower of Babel. In the law courts and other official circles more interpreters are employed here than under any other British administration.

The colonies of Natal and the Transvaal, not content with the difficulty of keeping the native Kaffir and Zulu in hand, have added to public politics what is known as the Indian problem, for years ago they introduced large gangs of coolies from Bombay to work in the banana and tea plantations, and also on railway construction. These wily hewers of wood and drawers of water served their terms of indenture, then settled in the land of their adoption, and today Mr. Ghandi, their champion, is a thorn in the side of the Government.

This composite nature of the community involves a splitting up of the actors of national life; churches, schools, public meetings, traveling facilities, etc., all have to be considered and provided in this light. In the cities of Cape Town and Johannesburg are to be found all the Christian churches of English origin, several European, as well as native and coloured missions, and also Hindu temples and Malay mosques.

The Dutch section of the population, as the name "Boer" (farmer) indicates, is, chiefly engaged in pastoral life. Until very recent years the Boer despised education, and was opposed to modern civilization and its innovations. He preferred the ox wagon method of locomotion, going at the rate of three miles an hour, and even after the construction of the main line from Cape Town to the Rand, many of the Boers held that the train ought to come to a stop on the veldt if its three days' journey included the Sabbath.

But a perceptible change is creeping over the Boers; they are beginning to recognize the value and advantage of education, as being the first essential to the attainment of political power. The young Afrikanders are going to college, learning both languages, and many of them proceed to Leyden and Heidelberg Universities to study law. Had the advice of the younger generation of Afrikanders been followed, it is highly probable that the ultimatum of 1899 would not have been despatched, for there would have been concessions made; but Oom Paul belonged to the back-veldt school which was destined to be obliterated by the march of progress.

Whole Town Bought.

Strange things obtain in the old country. For instance the town of Castlerea, one of the most progressive centres in the west of Ireland with some 3,000 of a population, is owned by a private family, the lands belonging to the Sandford estate. The estate is now to be acquired by the Congested Districts Board, and as this means that present tenants will have the option of becoming their own landlords, and that fresh lands will be broken up into small lots, the sale is very popular and will it is expected have a considerable influence on the commercial prosperity of the place.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF THE BOYNE FITTINGLY CELEBRATED IN THIS DISTRICT — PATRIOTIC SPEECHES BY PROMINENT ORANGEMEN.

The Orangemen, 'Prentice Boys, True Blues and Lady True Blues of Centre and South Hastings yesterday commemorated the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne by participating in a celebration in the village of Stirling. It proved to be a most successful gathering, it being estimated that upwards of 5000 visitors invaded the village during the day. Everything passed off in a pleasing manner, nothing occurring but a light shower in the afternoon to mar the day's proceedings.

The enterprising village presented an inviting appearance to the visitors. Arches had been erected and the streets were gayly decorated with streamers, flags and bunting. The hospitality of the residents made everyone feel at home. At an early hour in the morning visitors commenced to arrive by trains and vehicles. Bands of music playing patriotic airs enlivened the proceedings, whilst Orange colors were very much in evidence

At 1.30 in the afternoon the procession was formed and, after marching through the principal streets to the tune of lively airs, proceeded to the driving park near by, where a programme of sports was carried out and addresses were given. Rain interfered somewhat with the proceedings. The procession was headed by the I. O. O. F. band of Bellevilie Oher bands were present from Madoc and Frankford, in addition there being three fife and drum bands including Foxboro, which musical organization is coming to the front. Bro. H. Wallace, Master of Stirling Lodge, was Grand Marshal and he was ably assisted by other marshals. The order of the procession was as follows:

Grand Marshal, mounted.
I. O. O. F. Band, Belleville.
Stirling Orange Lodge.
Eldorado Orange Lodge
Frankford Band.
Frankford Orangemen and 'Prentice Boys.
Madoc Orange Lodge.
Springbrook Lodge.
West Huntingdon Lodge.
Ivanhoe Lodge.
Crookston Lodge.
Thomasburg Lodge.
Buelah Lodge.
Belleville Orangemen
Belleville Lady Lodge True Blues.

At the driving park a platform meeting was organized. The chair was occupied by Bro. Henry Wallace, Master of Stirling Lodge and Past County Master for Central Hastings. Five minute addresses of a congratulatory nature were given by Bro. J W. Pearce, M. P. P. for North Hastings and the Revs. Mr. Byers, Angdist, of Stirling; Mr. Clarke, Methodist, of Rawdon circuit, and R. C Blagrave, of Belleville.

Rev. J. Pate, Presbyterian minister of Lansdowne, Deputy Grand Chaplain of Eastern Ontario, was the principa lspeaker and his address was much appreciated by his hearers. His chief topic was the Coronation Oath and against any change made in regard in it. He warned Protestants to be on the lookout for the power of Rome, which seemed determined to curb, if possible, the liberty of British subjects, and to get the grip and control of the great commonwealth. The Rev. gentleman in speaking of religious teaching said he did not believe in the state teaching religion in the schools. The church and home was the place for religion to be inculcated. There children should receive a religious training that would fit them for the highest motives of life. (Cheers.) In closing the speaker said he would urge up all Protestant bodies to remain rue to their principles and teachings.

Bro. W.R . Mather, Reeve of Stirling and Warden of the County was called upon and in a few well chosen remarks stated hat it was a pleasure to have such a celebration in Stirling and on behalf of the citizens extended to all a hearty welcome. He hoped that similar gatherings would

"Old Boys" Are Going Over 'Ome.

ROCHESTER WILL SEND DELEGATION OF FIVE HUNDRED TO BELLEVILLE, CANADA.

The Belleville Old Boys are going home. It is five years now since they held their last big reunion and, in view of the preparations that are being made to receive them, it is probable that the Canadian city of 10,000 population will be thrown into such activity as will make the village of little, old New York, during the Roosevelt homecoming celebration, look like a graveyard in comparison.

There are quite a few of the "Old Boys" in Rochester and they expect to go "over 'ome" 500 strong. Five years ago, when the Belleville Old Boys' Reunion was held, the Rochester squad succeeded in bringing to the old town a crowd that was larger than the whole population of Belleville and the natives didn't know what to make of it.

The reunion will be held in Belleville on July 23, 24, 25 and 26. A special rate for the Rochester "Old Boys" and their friends has been secured from the management of the steamers North King and Caspian, and the local delegation will leave on these boats on Saturday and Sunday nights, July 23 and 24. Tickets will be good returning until the following week.

All kinds of good money has been collected and saved up by the Belleville reunion committee, and there will be an interesting programme on each day of the reunion. The big night will be Monday night, July 25, when the greatest "doings" are scheduled to be "pulled off."

Louis W. Clement, of 411 Murray Street, is in charge of the arrangements for the pilgrimage of the Rochester "Old Boys."—Rochester Evening Times.

LAURIER AT WINNIPEG

Premier Arrives a Little Too Late to Affect Elections.

He Says He Hopes to Make an Inroad on Toronto and Winnipeg at Next Election. — Discusses Transportation Problems of West and Points to What the Government Has Done—Denies Charges.

Winnipeg, July 13.—Whatever depression may have followed the triumph of the Roblin Government at the polls on Monday, there is no apparent discouragement in the ranks of the Liberal party over the defeat.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has the faculty of drawing a crowd wherever he speaks to the public. Last night he received an almost royal acclaim from a crowd of ten thousand people assembled in the horse show amphitheatre. The place was gaily decorated with flags and bunting.

"After listening to your cordial acclaim," began Sir Wilfrid, "I am forced to ask myself if I am in this, the city of Winnipeg. Perhaps I am standing on the soil of some Grit constituency in the Province of Ontario, or the soil of the old city of Quebec, which I have the honor to represent, or in New Brunswick, or Nova Scotia.

"But, no, this is Winnipeg, and I am here reminded of another city, the city of Toronto. Toronto is one of the finest cities on the continent. The people are cultured, educated and hospitable, but when it comes to election times, Toronto is in the wrong."

"I do not despair of Toronto; and I make bold to say at the next election, we, the Liberals, the Grits, shall make an inroad into that city, and get a few of their seats. There is hope for Toronto. How much more there is for Winnipeg?"

Some Governments had been lucky, others unlucky, he said.

Isaac Campbell, K.C., was chairman, and besides Sir Wilfrid's party, on the platform were Frank Fowler, E. L. Cash, M.P., Hon. Senator Watson and Ald. Wilton.

Mr. Campbell predicted that Sir Wilfrid's trip would disclose a new world to the Premier from that seen on his last trip across the continent.

"Liberalism did not die yesterday," said Hon. William Pugsley. (Tremendous applause.) He complimented them on the election of C. Hart Green (Liberal candidate in North Winnipeg), and claimed that the votes had not been "well enough mixed," and predicted that some building up would have to be done in the future.

"These three prairie provinces will always hold a commanding position in this country," he said. There was an opportunity for great development of waterways. "We have made in St. Andrew's lock a great improvement. It is possible for steamers leaving your city to pass down the Red River, through the locks, and on to Lake Winnipeg, to all points on east inland waters," he went on.

"I am one of those who believe that with a reasonable expenditure of money it will be possible to create a great system of inland navigation, extending from the City of Edmonton to within 100 miles of the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, right down over 1,300 miles to this great city."

He looked forward to Winnipeg receiving electric power from Point Dubois on the Winnipeg River, and he hoped that improvements would be made to the Nelson River to enable boats from Winnipeg to carry their cargoes to tide water on Hudson Bay.

He criticized R. L. Borden's strictures upon his Department, and challenged him to lay his charges before Parliament.

Sir Wilfrid defended the position he had taken owing to the inability of the three provinces to agree. He did not blame the Provincial Premiers for seeking to get all possible for their provinces, but agreement was a necessary antecedent to any action by the imperial authorities. He resented Hon. Mr. Roblin's blood-and-thunder speeches, and claimed that, if any discourtesy had been committed, it was not on his part. If Manitoba continued to remain the "postage stamp province" it has been, it would be no fault of his.

The Liberal Government had brought luck to Canada. To the late Sir John A. Macdonald, he gave credit for building the Canadian Pacific Railway, although he thought some of the terms were unwise, but that railway having been built, it failed in its purpose, because there was no population tributary to the line.

"That problem of immigration has been settled," said Sir Wilfrid, "and I am glad to say that the initiator of that policy is the son of Monitoba, Hon. Clifford Sifton. (Cheers.)

The Prime Minister said that "the value of the product of the farmer is the selling price in the world's market, less the cost of transportation." Up till 1896 the west had been at the mercy of the C.P.R. in respect to rates, the original contract not giving Parliament any control whatever over traffic charges. This defect had been overcome, when the C.P.R. accepted the condition of the Crow's Nest Railway subsidy, and made a substantial reduction on staple articles. The cost of sending wheat from Brandon to Liverpool, from over 26 cents a bushel, had been reduced to 16 1-4 cents.

"The cost of transportation must still be decreased," said Sir Wilfrid. "It is ten cents a bushel less than it was 14 years ago, but it is still to be decreased, and we will work at it."

McLachlan Died To-day.

Whitby, July 13.—Archie McLachlan, the youthful Uxbridge murderer, who last fall administered strychnine poison to his wife and then set fire to his home to cover up the crime, causing the death of two of his infant children, was hanged this morning.

It is reported that he has made a confession.

3,000 YEARS AGO THE EGYPTIANS CURED DISEASE WITH FRUIT

To-day, Canadians Are Doing It With "Fruit-a-tives"

—The Famous Fruit Medicine

We are apt to consider the age we live in as the most wonderful age that the world has ever known. It is, in many respects. Yet the ancients surpassed us in some things. Engineers of our 40-story sky-scrapers still marvel at the massive pyramids and the sphinx. So, too, the Egyptian physicians of 3,000 years ago, used fruit juices as a medicine for treating blood trouble, liver and kidney disease, and stomach weakness. Their method of mixing fruit juice as a medicine, is also one of the lost arts. A well known Canadian physician, however, perfected a method of utilizing fruit juices, which is one of the greatest discoveries of modern medical research.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the natural cure for Chronic Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Torpid Liver, Kidney Disease, Pain in the Back, Bad Complexion, Rheumatism, Nervousness, Headache and Neuralgia.

Shooting Affair In Manitoba.

Swan Lake, Man., July 13.—As a result of a shooting affray here early yesterday morning, two men were seriously wounded, and another was crippled in the arm.

George Kilbourne and Fred Bowlerwell were resting after lunch when Fred Roskelly appeared in their room. He and Bowlerwell quarrelled. Roskelly was ejected, but returned later on with Meredith Peters. They attacked the door, but were met with a fusilade of shots from Bowlerwell, who remained inside. Roskelly received a bullet in his abdomen and grave fears for his recovery are now entertained. Peters was shot in the thigh, and an operation was necessary to save his limb. In some mysterious manner Kilbourne was shot in the arm, shattering it above the elbow. Bowlerwell is under arrest.

Circled St. Paul's.

London, July 13.—While Londoners last evening were discussing the tragic death of Capt. Rolls, the army dirigible balloon, manned by a full crew created intense excitement by flying from the army manoeuvring grounds at Aldershot, 35 miles away, into the City of London. High above the ground, the mammoth dirigible, under perfect control, made many daring evolutions, twice encircling St. Paul's Cathedral at the height of four hundred feet. After more manoeuvring, the dirigible pointed her nose back to Aldershot amid the cheering of more than 1,000,000 people.

Analysis of a Tear.

The chief element in the composition of a tear is water, but with water are associated minute proportions of salt, soda, phosphate of lime, phosphate of soda and mucus, and when seen under the microscope a tear after evaporation looks like a very small fish bone, owing to the salines forming themselves into lengthened cross lines.

Elephants In Liberia.

The virgin forests of Liberia contain thousands of elephants.

To Get Rid of Rats.

After all other remedies fail there still remains a way of getting rid of rats, and that is by depriving them of water. They can live for a very long time without food and when hard pressed will not hesitate to eat each other, but no rat can go twenty-four hours without drink. Therefore if every possible means of obtaining water is taken from the rats they will desert the vicinity.

Sense of Smell.

There is no end to the curiosities of smell. It is, for instance, the vapor of a liquid that smells and not the liquid in the mass itself. If eau de cologne be poured into the nostril the nose refuses to recognize any odor there at all.

Convicts In Norway.

The convicts of Norway are made to till the soil.

An Ancient Clock.

There is at Castletown, in the Isle of Man, a clock that was telling Manxmen the time of day before Oliver Cromwell was born, and there is a clock, it is said, still marking time at Castle Rushen which Queen Elizabeth herself presented to the owner of that castle.

IS THE POLITICAL ARM

Orangeism Must Fight the Battles of Protestantism.

Speaker at Brockville Gathering Declares That the L.O.L. Is the Public Voice of Forces of Protestant Canada — Toronto Meeting Passes Resolutions Favoring a National System of Public Schools.

Brockville, July 13.—Brockville never had such a crowd of visitors as assembled here yesterday to participate in the celebration of the 12th of July. It was a monster demonstration, conducted with the greatest enthusiasm, and participated in by an almost solid Ontario East, with large delegations from Toronto, Montreal, and New York State.

The actual number of Orangemen reached over 10,000, with as many more friends and supporters of the wearers of the Orange sash.

The big feature of the day was the "walk," which mobilized in the centre of the town, and to the music of brass and fife and drum bands galore, paraded to St. Lawrence Park, along streets lined by thousands of people. The platform addresses were presided over by James Berney, grand master, of Ontario East.

One of the chief speakers was H. C. Hocken of Toronto, who asserted that Orangemen must take their legitimate position in the public life of Canada as the political arm of the Protestant Church. They must be Protestants before they are partisans of either side of politics, exercising an influence upon the representatives of the people who sit in Parliaments. He advised his hearers to study closely the political movements of the day, and be firm in maintaining the essential Protestant principles of civil and religious liberty, which are inseparably connected with the name of the Orange Association.

"We should conduct," he said in closing, "an active propaganda among Protestants, to convince them of our sincerity, and the necessity for our organization impressing upon them the impending duties and the need of united Protestant action. We must bring before the public of this country the character, aims, principles and history of the papacy. Our threefold program should be to co-operate with the Protestant churches to defend the public school, and to educate the Protestant public."

Toronto, July 13.—In no uncertain voice did the several thousand Orangemen, their wives, and friends, at the exhibition grounds, yesterday, declare in favor of a national school, an imperial policy and the retention of the present coronation oath, when a series of resolutions were unanimously, even clamorously, endorsed.

Particularly vigorous were the remarks of Rev. E. C. Laker, in seconding the first resolution, which was moved by W. D. McPherson, K.C., M.P.P.

"I support it," he declared, "because I believe the public school is the most important institution in our national life. It is the strongest bulwark of all the free institutions we enjoy. But, is the public school safe?"

Cries of "No, no!" "You bet they're not," etc., given with a vim.

"Is there no enemy?" he continued, and was again broken off with—"Now you're talking!" "Sail in!" "Give it to them!"

"He is a false prophet who calls 'peace' when there is no peace!" said Dr. Laker. "Rome is the avowed natural enemy of the public school. There are times when strong words are needed. We must not quarrel with our Roman Catholic brethren. We can speak of Romanism as a political not as a religious organization."

"The public school stood for state education and the state was the only possible, efficient supervisor for such an institution. There were two other possible agencies toward strong, sound national morality — the home and the church; but the public school was the common man's chance. A man might not become himself rich, but his children could; through the knowledge got in these storerooms.

"Where education has been carried on by the church, you find the greatest illiteracy," he said, quoting from statistics, which showed percentages of from 39 to 80 per capita of illiterate beings in districts and countries under church rule."

12,000 Visitors at Wingham.

Wingham, July 13.—The celebration of the 220th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne was an unqualified success. In spite of the frequent showers of rain, there were over 12,000 visitors in town, over forty stands of color took part on the march. The speakers were: A. H. Musgrove, M.P.P.; Hugh Clark, M.P.P.; Rev. W. Lowe of London, past grand chaplain of Ontario West; Rev. R. Mobbs of Exeter; George Mooney, Ripley; Robert Woods of Dufferin, and others. County Master M. Dane, of Gorrie, presided.

Eighty Lodges In Line.

Stratford, July 13.—Eighty lodges were in line in the procession from the City Hall to Queen's Park. Six special trains assisted the regulars in bringing the Orangemen from Goderich, Palmerston, Centralia, London, Parkhill and intermediate points. Six brass bands assisted the many fife and drum organizations in the musical part of the historic parade.

At Bracebridge.

Bracebridge, July 13.—Ten thousand people were in town to witness the monster Orange celebration yesterday. Lodges from Huntsville, Gravenhurst, Orillia, Midland and surrounding places came in by train and boat.

Londoners at Watford and Petrolia.

London, Ont., July 13.—Thousands of Orangemen from the city and district left yesterday morning for Watford and Petrolia, where big celebrations are being held. Bro. Essery, grand master of Ontario west, spoke at both places and was given a rousing reception.

VOL. 43 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO. THURSDAY JULY 14, 1910. NO. 263

FIELD CROP REPORTS

Ontario's Farms Make a Good Showing This Year.

General Condition of Crops In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta Is Away Below the Average for Lack of Rain—Hay and Clover Are Better and Areas of Late Cereals Are Much Increased This Year.

Ottawa, July 14.—Census and statistics office yesterday reported on the condition of field crops and the number and condition of farm animals of the Dominion at June 30. For the three years from 1908 to 1910, the field crops range in condition from 82.16 for spring wheat to 91.42 for hay and clover this year, to 80 for spring wheat and 82 for rye and pears in 1908. Fall wheat is 85.47 this year, compared with 77.28 in 1909, and 89 in 1908. Oats were 90 in 1908, and 93.81 in 1909, and this year they are 86.29. Peas are 86.94 this year, last year they were 84.40, and in the previous year 82. The condition of mixed grains is nearly the same, being 84.53 this year, 86.58 last year, and 84 in 1908.

Hay and clover are better this year than in either of the previous years, being 91.42 compared with 76 in 1909 and 87 in 1908. The condition of alfalfa has been recorded this year for the first time, and its average is 86.94. Pasture has a condition of 89.02 this year, compared with 99 in 1908, and 87.74 last year.

The condition of all field crops are good in Ontario, the highest being 94.29 for fall wheat, and the lowest, 84.79 for spring wheat. Quebec crops range from 74.45 for mixed grains to 102.58 for hay and clover. Peas are 84.42 and their condtiion is the next above mixed grains. In Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia all field crops are reported for a condition above 90, except alfalfa, which is 83.33 in the island. Hay and clover are 104.31 in the island and 105.79 in Nova Scotia. Wheat, oats, mixed grains and alfalfa are reported in a condition above 90 in New Brunswick, and all other crops between 83 and 89, except alfalfa, which is 97. Hay and clover are reported at 109.68.

Monitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have low averages throughout, owing to a light rain fall in June. The general condition of crops in Manitoba is much below the average. Correspondents in nearly every district report no rains, only a few light showers and hot dry winds that absorbed the moisture and withered the crops. The lowest average condition is reported from around Brandon and Morden, and the highest from Marquette, where it is placed at a standard. In Saskatchewan the crops do not appear to have suffered from climatic conditions to the same extent as in either Manitoba and Alberta, as there have been many local showers. The reports from Lloydminster, Battleford, Indian Head and Qu'Appelle are very favorable, the condition of wheat being placed at 100 and over.

The prevailing condition of crops in that part of Alberta south of townships No. 30 is below the average in consequence of drought and hot winds. In the Edmonton district, the grains, although suffering to some extent from the same causes, are in much better condition. The best reports come from the Strathcona district, and those from Athabasca Landing and Saddle Lake districts are also particularly favorable. The field crops of British Columbia are all good.

The areas of late cereals, buckwheat, flax, corn for husking, beans, potatoes, turnips and other roots, sugar beets and corn for fodder have increased this year to 2,150,362 acres, which is 279,526 acres more than last year, and 247,869 acres more than in 1908. But this increase is altogether in flax, which, owing to the high price offered for seed, has come into favor with the farmers of the northwest. The only farm animals which show a noticeable increase since 1907 are horses, while sheep and swine have declined. The condition of all these animals over the Dominion exceeds 99.

Liberals Gain One Seat.

Winnipeg, July 14.—The final election returns are slow in coming in, but it is now definitely settled that the Liberals have gained one seat, which will make the standing in the Manitoba House [illegible] Conservatives and 14 Liberals.

There were 11 turnovers, the Liberals netting the odd one.

The Conservative gains are: Arthur, Dauphin, Deloraine, Emerson, Gimli.

The Liberal gains are: Lakeside, Laverandrye, Minnedosa, Russell, Swan River, North Winnipeg.

M'LACHLAN CONFESSED.

Minister Says Murderer Admitted Slaying Wife and Babies.

Whitby, July 14.—Arch. McLachlan was hanged yesterday morning for having murdered his wife and two children at Uxbridge last fall. Although proclaiming himself at the inquest and trial as "an innocent man," he left with his spiritual adviser, Rev. Mr. Tighe, for publication, a tacit admission of his guilt.

The statement was as follows:—

"Archibald McLachlan has taken Dr. Abraham and myself into his confidence and admits the justice of his sentence. He has been truly and sincerely penitent, and assured of Divine forgiveness, dies at peace with God and men. He leaves a message for young men: 'Be careful of the company you keep, and, above all things, keep away from all forms of strong drink, which has been my undoing.' (Signed) W. B. Tighe."

Hangman Ellis almost made a failure of the execution. Owing to the hasty construction of the scaffold, a mallet had to be used to knock the bolt from the trap, instead of a lever. The rain of Tuesday caused the wood to swell and it required four blows from the hammer to spring the trap.

McLachlan went to his death with no show of fear. The execution took place shortly after 7 o'clock. Before he left his cell he spent a few minutes reading a Toronto paper. After the black cap and the noose were adjusted he uttered the words, "Lord, into Thy hands I commit my spirit." Then Dr. Abraham, who was present, repeated the Lord's Prayer, and before its completion the drop fell. The jail surgeon, Dr. Warren, pronounced life extinct in eight minutes, the neck being broken. Only 15 persons, officials and pressmen, were present.

McLachlan was 27 years of age. Infatuation for another woman had led him to poison his wife and set fire to his home on the night of Oct. 29, his two little boys being suffocated. McLachlan himself saved his favorite daughter, Monta.

Rev. Dr. Abraham said yesterday: "I have been even asked if the unfortunate young man is prepared to die. My answer to such a question is that I have no right to sit in judgment on my fellow-man. That is a matter which every man himself must settle with his God. I believe McLachlan was sincere if any man ever was sincere."

IN SECOND STAGE.

Twenty-Three Canadians Still In the King's Prize Shoot.

Bisley Camp, July 14.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Major Hutchinson, who is shooting in Greet's place, who is ill with fever, is adjutant of the Canadian team. It has been announced officially that all scores of 96 are out of the King's Prize, and that 71 scores of 97 will shoot off for 68 places for the second stage of the match.

The following totals were made in the first stage: One with 104, three with 103, 18 with 102, 24 with 101, 27 with 100, 72 with 99, 83 with 98, 67 with 97.

Capt. Campbell won the bronze medal for highest score, 104 out of 105. Sergt. Morris, Bowmanville, was second with 103. There are 23 Canadians in the second stage.

Scores at 1,600 yards range, first stage, were:—Bibby 30, Crowe 33, Clifford 30, Drysdale 31, Eastwood 32, Forrest 31, Freeborn 31, Hutcheson 31, Latimer 30, McInnes 31, McHarg 31, McKie 29, Morris 35, Mitchell 32, Russell 35, Rowe 29, Steele 34, Steck 34, Sharpe 31, Whitehorn 32, Bayles 32, Bower 28, King 31, Mortimer 31, Richardson 31, Stuart 32.

In the all-comers' aggregate the Canadian marksmen figured as follows: Steele in 6th place, Richardson 8th, Crowe 11th, Mortimer 22nd, Freeborn 23rd, Mitchell 28th, Bayles 36th, each winning a bronze medal, and $10; Latimer was 51st, Steck 91st, Sharpe 87th, each winning $10.

The Canadians won the following places and prizes in the Duke of Cambridge; Rowe 14th, $10; Russell 27th, $10; Mortimer 62nd, $10.

Botha Well Received.

Johannesburg, July 14.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Premier Botha, speaking in English, outlined his political program at Wanderers' Hall in the presence of a vast audience, mainly British. The utterance created a most favorable impression. It was a triumph to the personality of the man, who met a reception at the some time enthusiastic and sincere. Gen. Botha was cheered in a manner that proves that racialism is almost dead among the mass of the people and would not survive for one week if not employed for political ends.

In respect to education he was heckled somewhat on Hertzogism, but reasonable people are satisfied with his statements. The general view is that the Free State on this matter will fall in line when the provincial council is elected.

A Durban despatch says that the speech is regarded in Natal as a magnificent imperial deliverance. Botha's promises are trusted and the union is looked to to redeem them.

Boy Badly Hurt.

Port Credit, July 14.—Charlie Cox, the 13-year-old son of William Henry Cox, lies at the point of death in his home adjoining the Port Credit brick works, the result of an accident when a gyn-pole or small derrick, weighing about 100 pounds, collapsed on him and pinned his head to the ground.

BIG DIRIGIBLE BURSTS

German Aeronaut Killed With His Four Companions.

Oscar Erbsloeh, While Giving an Exhibition, Suddenly Breaks and Her Passengers Are Thrown Several Hundred Feet to the Earth—Erbsloeh Won the International Balloon Race at St. Louis In 1907.

Leichlingen, Rhenish Prussia, July 14.—Oscar Erbsloeh, the German aeronaut, who won the international balloon race at St. Louis in 1907, and four companions, were killed yesterday when the dirigible balloon Erbsloeh burst at a height of several hundred feet and dropped to the earth a crumbled mass.

The craft was of the non-rigid type, 178 feet in length and 33 feet in diameter. The motors were of 125 horsepower and drove the airship at a speed of 28 1-2 miles an hour. The war department recently purchased one of Erbsloeh's balloons.

The cause of the accident is a matter of conjecture, but it is believed that the bursting of the bag was due to the expansion of gas by the warm sunshine.

The Erbsloeh rose gracefully, pushing its way through the fog to a height estimated at several hundred yards. At this altitude a series of evolutions was begun. To the onlookers the airship appeared to obey her helm perfectly. Suddenly there was a loud report, and at the moment the fore part of the vessel crumpled up and the gondola was twisted about until it appeared as though standing on one end. As the gas escaped from the forward compartment, the prow swayed downward. For a flash the airship fluttered like a wounded bird, and then fell swiftly to the earth.

Erbsloeh and his companions were killed the second that they struck the ground. Their heads were battered in and every limb broken. The wreckage fell so heavily that the gondola was broken to bits and the motor was buried in the ground.

Oscar Erbsloeh had made many daring and successful balloon flights. In the St. Louis aerial race, when he took from the United States to Germany the International Cup, which had been won the year before by Lieut. Frank P. Lahm at Paris, he covered a distance of 876 miles in the balloon Pommern, landing at Asbury Park, N.J., two miles further from the point of ascent at St. Louis than his nearest competitor, M. Leblanc of France, who came down at Herbertsville, N.J.

In February, 1909, Erbsloeh made a remarkable balloon trip across the Alps. His balloon was the Berlin, and it remained in the air for 30 hours, reaching a maximum altitude of about 8,000 feet.

Unknown Enemy Attempts Wreck.

Ottawa, July 14.—Orangemen who had been celebrating the 12th at Cantley, Que., just escaped disaster at the hands of an unknown enemy.

Five hundred of them and their friends were on the Gatineau train, and had it not been that there was an hour's delay at Blue Sea Lake, owing to a piston rod of the engine breaking, the train would probably have been wrecked at Kirk's Ferry, a dangerous point. Fortunately a hand car was thus enabled to precede the train by about five minutes. It struck an obstruction, was derailed and thrown into a ditch.

An inspection of the track showed that horseshoes had been slung on the rails, and cleated to the ties, with the very evident intention of wrecking the train. The track had been doctored in the same manner for a distance of thirty feet, and it took some time to remove the obstruction. The spot chosen by the wreckers was a rock cut, into which not enough light penetrated to reveal the danger to the engineer.

Girl Avenged Father.

New Orleans, July 14.—Joseph Manzella, proprietor of a saloon and grocery, fell a victim of the so-called "blackhand society" here yesterday, but his death was avenged a few seconds later, when his 17-year-old daughter shot and killed the assassin as he was attempting to escape.

Manzella had recently received many letters signed "Blackhand Society." Yesterday an Italian called at the store and demanded money as a representative of the society. When ordered to leave the place he shot Manzella in the breast. As Manzella fell he drew his revolver and fired. Young Josephine Manzella rushed into the store and gave chase to the assassin, firing at him as she ran.

When the police arrived the girl was bending over the body of her father, weeping. The slayer lay in the gutter near the entrance, with three bullet wounds near his heart.

Patrolman Gave Sacrament.

Hartford, Conn., July 14.—While Mrs. Guissippe Tellegrino of No. 225 Market street, sat in the doorway of her home late yesterday afternoon, her infant son in her arms, eagerly waiting for the arrival of a priest to bless the child, who was dying with convulsions, a Catholic policeman exercised the prerogative of a Catholic layman by assuming the function of a priest and administered the sacrament.

The mother refused to send the baby to the hospital until this right had been performed. After the policeman had performed the rite of baptism on the little one the mother allowed the child to be taken to the hospital, where it died shortly afterward.

A Fatal Joke.

Canarsie, N.Y., July 14.—Robert Vietin, a 16-year-old youth, was swimming in Fish Creek with a crowd of [illegible] boys when one of the party threw up his hands and cried for help. Vietin swam toward him, and the supposedly drowning boy jumped on a log and paddled away laughing. He had been joking, but his heroic would-be rescuer was taken with a cramp and drowned.

A Crucial Period.

Wellington, July 14.—Lord Islington, in responding to an enthusiastic welcome, said the next decade would be a crucial period in the Empire's destiny. It was to be hoped that the nation would set itself with serene determination and fearlessness, but no spirit of aggression, to maintain the position it held in the world today.

The British Side Begins.

The Hague, July 14.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—On the opening of the court yesterday J. S. Ewart began his pleading for Britain. He said the British interpretation of the words "three miles from bays" in the treaty of 1818 was simply three miles from bays. On the other hand, the American interpretation was complicated, and had changed several times in the course of last century.

The difficulty of determining the limits of bays was apparent. Britain and America had often concluded treaties. Dealing with bays, but without defining the word "bay." In the treaty of 1874 America had for the first time advanced the territorial theory in contradistinction to the terms of the treaty which spoke of three miles from "bays," but not "three miles from the shores of bays." For the rest, no nation recognized that these territorial bays could not be broader than six miles from headland to headland.

The milk of Chicago is the dirtiest in the world, says an exchange. This startling fact, vital to the health of 2,500,000 people, was made public by the milk commission recently appointed by Mayor Busse, in its first preliminary report to the city council. The commission, after going over the situation carefully, has arrived at the conclusion that nothing is to be gained by concealing the facts, and that the only way in which conditions can be remedied is to face the truth and begin reform all along the line.

St. Thomas Times—"Take enough olive oil and live forever," is the latest millennium receipe. With a skin full of olive oil "dotage" is an impossibility, is the view of Dr. Thomas B. Keyes, of Chicago, who describes olive oil, as man's only real "affinity." Olive oil, properly used will not alone render one immune from tuberculosis, but from almost every other ill. It will cure the white plague, cancer, leprosy and other diseases. Dr. Keyes declares he has accomplished scores of cures under it. He has cured consumptives without removing them from the crowded districts of Chicago, treating people at home who were unable to go to a better climate. At the age of 40, he says, every person should have injections of olive oil for a certain period each year.

OLD BOYS' REUNION NOTES.

Every possible effort has now been made to secure the attendance of all the old Boys' and Daughters of Belleville at the Reunion, and many have already arrived. It now remains for the people of Belleville to entertain and welcome. The writer of these notes knows from the correspondence that many will come back to the Old Town who have no relatives left here; many who return simply to renew their memories and revive old associations. To them the right hand of fellowship should specially go out, for several of them will travel hundreds of miles to get the greeting which will be theirs. It is hoped that without introductions, without formality, at all hours and in all places every citizen of Belleville whether he wears a committee badge or not, will consider himself on the general committee for this purpose; and the boys and girls can do their share. Let our young people volunteer to honor and show attention to every stranger during the week of home coming. Spontaneous kindness and courtesy will be appreciated and reciprocated. Let us not wait to be asked, but volunteer for the good work.

The Secretary has secured several pictures and photos of old residents and old scenes in Belleville which will be on view in the Reunion offices, opposite the post office. Anyone having any interesting picture of the good old days which would be attractive for this exhibition would oblige very much by communicating with the secretary and bringing them to the present office on Bridge street. Every care will be taken of the pictures. Programmes of Entertainment which took place in the early "sixties" will be a feature of the collection.

Henry B. Order, Manager and Treasurer of the great glass works in Ohio, son of one of the first Rectors of St. Thomas Church, will be here on the 23rd inst.

The Club House on the Island will be a delightful of place resort during the Reunion evenings.

The City Council have been petitioned to extend the watering of the streets through large areas during the four days and Alderman Lott has promised to accede to the request.

Mr. Morley, with his thoroughbred hunter, and several other well known horsemen will take part in the parade. Floats representing England, Ireland, Scotland and Canada have been arranged for.

From week to week the public have been keeping in touch with the significance of the Reunion through this column, and glimpses have been given of a small fraction of the correspondence received by the Secretary. Time will not permit of any further notes. The whole success of the Reunion is now in the hands of the Citizens.

We give, however, just one word more through our "correspondence circle" in the following letters. In ten days the writers will, we hope, be living the freedom of the City and the ing the reed o fthe City and the Bay.

Green Castle, Indiana,
July 1910.

To Belleville and Hastings County my mind turns with special freedom. The beauty of the landscape, the associations of childhood and the Homesense—these combined, sweet as they are, do not so firmly hold my attention or prompt my gratitude as the memory of the kindness of the people, their interest in intelligence and industry and their general sympathy. My mother still lives and in our home. She is possessed of a special regard for Belleville.

With inexpressible gratitude to all who have contributed to our family welfare, and to God who gave me so many good influences through the people of Hastings County.

HENRY OSTROM.

Louisville, Kentucky.
July 1910.

My dear Colonel,—I received your invitation to attend the Old Boys' Reunion and it will be with great reluctance if I have to give up the chance to gather again with the friends of my boyhood days.

With the exception of two, I feel that every man among the list of the officers of organization are my personal friends and how I would like again to grasp the hand of the honorable president, who was my father's friend and mine in the days gone by. Please convey to him my felicitations and to the other members of the committee my best respects, and believe me ever to be an old "B.Q.B."

You were Sergeant in "No. 1." when I first knew you as a soldier of the Queen.

W. P. WAY.

Minneapolis,
July 1910.

It affords me sincere pleasure to accept your kind invitation to the Reunion of the Belleville Old Boys and Girls this month. Hoping that nothing will prevent the meeting from being all that could be desired by the most sanguine, and that everyone will be made happy, as we will be.

W. B. ANDREWS.

Ottawa,
July 1910.

We three intend to be in Belleville for the Reunion—always something drawing to the old Home.

S. & S.

Chattanooga, Tennessee,
July 1910.

Accept my thanks for your kind invitation to the Home coming of the Old Boys. I did not know until to-day that it would be possible for me to leave my business for so long a time. Your circular has decided me, so if nothing prevents I will drift in on the morning of the 24th, with the intention of having one of the best times of my life. With best wishes to you all,

E. L. DELONG.

Racing Automobiles Cause Accident.

As the result of two automobiles racing on the Trent Road near Trenton, at night the latter part of last week, two persons received injuries which were of a most serious nature. The automobiles, we are informed, were travelling along at a very rapid gait, the light of one machine not being lit and in consequence did not see a horse attached to a vehicle in which three persons were seated. An effort was made to escape the autos by the driver of the rig, but the latter was struck sideway and the occupants thrown to the ground. Dr. Marshall, of this city, who was in the vicinity at the time with his automobile, conveyed the parties to Trenton, where Dr. Farley attended to their injuries. One had an arm esyerely hurt and the other was hurt internally. The third party was badly shaken up. It is a miracle that the affair did not result in some one being killed.

In this regard it might be pointed out to the police that in this city not enough precaution is taken in regard to automobiles. On some of our residential streets these machines are driven at an excessive speed, and it is a well known fact that many drivers of autos do not give the necessary warning when turning off one street to another or when making crossings. There is a law governing this procedure and our officers of the law should see that the regulations are enforced.

Y. M. C. A. Building Fund.

Enthusiasm ruled supreme at the Y. M. C. A. luncheon today, owing to the favorable reports which were presented from the captains of the various teams. That the $40,000 mark will be reached by tomorrow evening when the campaign closes there seems to be no doubt. Only $3,287 more are needed to make the clock register $40,000. A united effort will no doubt secure the result. The subscriptions since yesterday totalled $2,044 which is most encouraging and inspires confidence in the canvassers. Team No. 6 led the van today with $365, being closely followed by the No. 4 team which reported $322. The sums reported by the various teams today was as follows:—

A CLOSING MESSAGE

Business men of this city have for nearly two weeks been working early and late, in a united struggle to accomplish what many prophesied was an impossibility, viz., raising $40,000 to build a Y.M.C.A. building. They have not only given their time and strength, but have pledged to put up their share of the money needed. That they have worked hard and conscientiously is attested by the handsome results, as shown in the thirty-five thousand dollars, and over that has been subscribed.

However what has been done is not nearly of so great importance to the success of this enterprise as what yet remains to be done. That this campaign has now reached the crucial point no one doubts, and the question now is "To be or not to be." Of course there is only one answer admissible—"2 B". That's not hard to say, not very difficult to write, but will require a good lot of hard labor to make good. And the lamentable part of it is that the labor must be performed by men who are already nearly exhausted mentally and physically. It has been a big undertaking, and the wonder of it is that the enthusiasm has been maintanied, and that all other issues have been second in importance with the men who have had the campaign in hand.

As the full amount, $40,000, is expected to be subscribed by Friday night, our citizens who have not assumed their share of the burden can understand how necessary it is to decide at once on the amount they will give, and get it written on one of the subscription cards and into the hands of someone authorized to receive it. Make this last day of the campaign the banner day, and the easiest one for the wornout campaigners.

The earth's fertile area is estimated at 28,269,358 square miles.

Mice that Subsist on Scorpions.

Among the queer forms of animal life that inhabit Death valley is a mouse that has acquired such a taste for scorpions that they form itis principal bill of fare. The scorpion carries its formidable armament in the end of its slender, elongated abdomen in the shape of an exceedingly venomous hooked sting. When disturbed it elevates this in the air and goes in search of its disturber. But it is comparatively slow in its motions, while mice are proverbial for their quickness the world over. The mouse learned many generations ago where the scorpion carries its weapon, and when he meets it he leaps at the uplifted abdomen, takes off the sting at a single bite and proceeds to make a meal of his helpless prey. It is supposed to be the only animal that relishes scorpions.

Got Another Copy.

A well dressed man was standing outside a bookseller's shop in Charing Cross road closely examining one of Balzac's works illustrated by Gustave Dore. "How much is this Balzac?" he asked an assistant outside.

"Twenty-five shillings," was the reply.

"Oh, that's far too much. I must see the manager about a reduction," continued the prospective customer, and, suiting the action to the word, he took up the book and went into the shop.

Approaching the bookseller, he took the book from under his arm and asked what he would give for it. "Seven shillings the highest offer," he was told.

The offer was accepted, the man took his money and left.

"Well," queried the assistant later, after the man had gone, "were you able to hit it off with the gentleman, sir?"

"Oh, yes. I managed to get another copy of that edition of Balzac for 7 shillings."

Then the bookseller went out to lodge a complaint with the police.—London Telegraph.

Jeffries-Johnson Fight.

The result of this fight, not only on this continent, but in other parts of the world has created a feeling of abhorrence against prize-fighting not so much, we venture the opinion, against boxing matches but because a negro thrashed a white man. Had it been otherwise would there have been such loud denunciations of the ring? The idea of a black thrashing a white, even in a fair fight, is too much for the 20th century.

"It will teach," says the Rev. Dr. Winchester of Memphis, U. S. in a sermon, "those living in certain localities in the north a lesson. It will show them how disgusting it is for a black man to be paraded over the country as a superior person to a member of the white race."

Steps are being taken in the United States to prevent a reproduction of this fight through the means of mooving pictures.

A similar course has been taken in Canada. Even in India, a telegram says—"The demand for the prohibition of biograph pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight is spreading in India.

Even in England the home of the prize ring, the demand comes, stop any exhibition of this fight. Sir Howell Davies has given notice of his intention to ask the Home Secretary in the House of Commons, "in the interest of public decency," to prohibit the exhibition of biograph pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight.

The London Press has joined in the cry, and the current opinion expressed is universal that Johnson's victory has made the problem for the United States much harder than before

The Home Secretary has given his opinion that there is no law in England preventing representations of a prize fight by moving pictures. So the lovers of prize fighting in England will have the privilege of seeing a reproduction of the battle by lime light.

The Daily Telegraph in an editorial says: "It is useless to hold up the hand of reprobation here. These things are brutal and vile, but behind them lies the absolute necessity to keep the negro race a little in check for if it once gets out of hands there will be worse scenes under the Stars and Stripes than have ever yet been witnessed there."

Nearly all this opposition to prize fighting is the result of a negro defeating a white man. If the negro wins why should liberty loving people deny the colored race the privilege of rejoicing? Had the white man won, jubilation would have known no bounds, and it is very questionable whether any attempt would have been made to prevent a reproduction of the result.

The proper way to stop this brutality is to pass laws in all civilized countries making prize fighting a criminal offence with a ten year's imprisonment at hard labor. If this were done there would be little pummeling of each other for money in a prize ring. Fortunately in Canada, the law prevents such pugilistic encounters, hence it is right and proper to prevent a reproduction of them on canvas.

MURDER MYSTERY IN ENGLAND.

(Intelligencer Special.)

London, England, July 14.—Scotland Yard has on its hands a murder mystery rivalling the stories of Sherlock Holmes. The authorities have cabled all over the earth a description of Hawley Peter Crippen, charged with the murder of his wife, a prominent singer who disappeared last February, and whose remains were dug up last night from under a cement flooring of the fashionable Crippen home in Islington.

Crippen came here some years ago from Philadelphia, posing as a dentist, but opened up a general agency for American goods. His wife was the daughter of an exiled Polish family, and heiress to extensive estates in Russia. On her disappearance in February he gave it out that she was on the continent for her health, and shortly afterwards there appeared in various papers notices of her sudden death abroad. Last week Crippen turned up with another woman, whom he gayly introduced as a second Mrs. Crippen. Both have disappeared and suspicions neighbors got the police to search the house. The result was the gruesome discovery of the remains. Crippen is 52 years of age and his murdered wife 35. The woman supposed to have sailed to New York with him is a pretty typist.

Later reports say that two coffins have been taken into the house by the police, thus indicating that two bodies have been found. Great excitement prevails in the district.

KNOWN IN TORONTO.

Toronto, Ont., July 14—Dr. Crippen who is wanted in London for wife murder, is well remembered here, especially by newspaper advertising men. Twelve years ago Crippen was representative here of the Doctor Munyon Co., and was considered a shrewd business man. Mrs. Crippen is recalled as a singer of considerable ability. She was given a little to gaudy apparel, a feature attributed to the fact that she was of foreign extraction.

Both moved in good society and were well thought of.

Altogether, it estimates a crop of between ninety and ninety-five million bushels.

AWFUL CATASTROPHE ON THE BLACK SEA.

(Intelligencer Special)

Odessa, Russia, July 14.—One hundred and six passengers, men, women and children, were drowned, burned or scalded to death in the Black Sea when their vessel collided with another steamer and was set on fire. The passengers were largely composed of Russian Jews fleeing from persecution, and were bound for ports whence they would sail for America. The struggles for life were terrible. Men fought down women, mothers threw their babies overboard to escape from the fire. In the midst of the confusion the boilers blew up.

Toronto, July 14.—Russian Jews here think that some of the victims of the Black Sea disaster were bound for Canada.

The Home Secretary criticised the sentence, and the Magistrates' Guild threaten to resign in a body.

A Victim of Leprosy.

"On my travels in Venezuela," said a New York man, "I stayed in a hotel with a young man in whose family there was the taint of leprosy, though he apparently did not have it. One night sitting at dinner he became angry at a waiter and brought his hand down on the table with full force. He instantly realized that he did not feel the blow and sat looking at his hand, his face whitening with horror. 'Give me your knife, Bob,' he said to his chum. He grabbed the pocketknife in a frenzy and stabbed the side of his hand with vicious cuts from finger tip to wrist. You may not know that leprosy appears in the side of the hand, numbness being a sign. The man did not feel the cuts. He arose from the table, knocking over his chair, rushed out into the courtyard of the hotel, and we heard the quick tang of a revolver shot, telling us how he had conquered the leper's curse by ending his life."

To save the trouble of turning a barrel first on one end and then on the other to brand the heads an Ohio man has patented a machine which brands both heads at once as it lies on its side

CARLING - LONDON

THE LOT OF HARDSHIP.

It is Ever the School in Which Greatness is Taught.

There is a purpose in circumstance Nothing in our lives is for naught. All things which have been given us, even our chains, are meant for our making—meant for the working out of our goodly destiny. Bunyan in prison apparently cursed by sunless hours of solitude and loneliness, was a greater Bunyan than if he had been free to roam afield. The walls which shut his body in could not confine his soul. It escaped them and went out into all the world to lift to higher levels the hope and vision of mankind. The log cabin in which Lincoln was born lent its ruggedness and simplicity to the man himself and has become a shrine which men approach with reverend feet as to some holy place which love and truth have glorified. The hard lot is ever the school in which greatness is taught and the best scholars are those who perceive the purpose of difficulty and do not grow bitter as they grapple with it. The very genius of progressive living consists in a capacity to appreciate the day and what the day holds ,to find in all seasons and events a divine conspiracy to refine the soul and make it a greater soul, to hail hardship with grim gladness and bless the hills which must be climbed, to look with kindly eyes upon every human thing, to accept with complacence the small circle of opportunity until it has been shown that we are worthy to move in a wider one. Along no other path may we come to our best and largest estate of being and serving—Richard Wightman in Metropolitan Magazine.

The Proper Tree.

Curious Charley—Do nuts grow on trees, father? Father—They do, my son.

People who fish for compliments do not need long lines. They will get their best bites in shallow water.

UNCONSCIOUS HUMOR.

The Way It Sometimes Crops Out in Examination Papers.

"About the driest thing in the world is the reading of a lot of examination papers," said a young University of Pennsylvania English instructor recently, "but occasionally the monotony of an evening of such work is relieved by a bit of humor. Frequently students try to be funny, thinking, perhaps, that they will in this way get on the right side of the man who marks the papers, but such attempts are usually flat failures. It is the unconscious bits of humor that are gems.

"A short time ago I gave as a subject for an essay to one of my freshman classes 'My Impressions of Pennsylvania.' One youth wrote his name at the top of the paper and then sat through the entire hour, gazing at the ceiling, apparently unable to get a start. Then at the end he handed in the blank piece of paper. As a piece of satire it would have been excellent, but I am sure he had no such intention. The blank paper merely represented his inability to get his impressions in writing and not the lack of impressions.

"A short time ago a history professor asked the question, 'What caused the French rebellion of 1830?' One of the replies was merely. 'Too much Bourbon.' If this answer had come from an ordinary student he would have given the writer credit for a witty answer, but it was written by a serious-minded youth from the country who, he was sure, was incapable of such an effort, and probably did not even know there was a whisky by that name. Truly the unconscious are the gems."—Philadelphia Record.

Curious Charley—Then what trees do the doughnuts grow on? Father—The "pantree," my son.—Purple Cow.

Cookery Points

A delicious Bavarian cream is made with plain lemon jelly mixed with crushed strawberries and whipped cream. A reliable rule for strawberry Bavarian cream calls for two cupfuls of the mashed fruit, half a box of gelatin soaked in a gill of cold water and then melted over hot water, half a cupful of powdered sugar and a pint of rich cream. Mix the fruit juice with the sugar and when the sugar is melted add the gelatin and let the bowl containing the mixture stand in a pan of ice. As soon as it begins to thicken fold in the cream whipped stiff and dry. Turn into a mold and when serving garnish the form with whole berries and their leaves if they can be obtained.

Revere Fruit Salad.

Peel, core and slice a good ripe pineapple and stand in its original shape in the center of your salad dish. Peel, quarter and core or remove the seeds (if there are any) from four sweet oranges and arrange in a border around the pineapple. Peel and cut in lengthwise slices four nice firm bananas and place zigzag fence fashion around the border of the dish. In the empty spaces put different colored grapes. Take three-quarters of a pint of clear sugar sirup, add one-half ounce of brandy or vanilla, pour over the fruit. Do not get ready too soon, as the bananas will get slightly discolored if allowed to stand too long.

Frozen Pudding.

Melt four tablespoonfuls of sugar till it becomes like molasses, add one teacupful of water and boil till all the sugar is dissolved. Have ready a quart of milk mixed with the beaten yolks of four or five eggs, sweeten good, strain the sugar (boiled) into the milk and put all into the freezer. Chop one pound dried figs, and as the pudding is about frozen stir in the figs thoroughly and pack the mold in ice for about two hours. When serving put one good tablespoonful of whipped cream on each dish and sprinkle over it finely chopped nuts. But it is fine without the cream.

Pineapple Pancakes.

Make a batter, using a half pound of sifted flour and three good sized eggs, with a cupful of milk. This makes a very thin batter. When smooth and free from lumps bake in a well buttered frying pan, making the cakes about eight inches in diameter. As soon as brown on one side turn. When cooked on both sides remove to a hot serving dish and sprinkle with crushed and sweetened pineapple. Bake the remainder of the batter in the same way, piling in layers with the pineapple between the cakes. Cut in triangular pieces like pie and serve very hot.

To Serve With Meat.

With roast veal, tomato sauce, cranberry sauce, horseradish and lemons are good.

With roast mutton, currant jelly, caper sauce.

With broiled mutton, onion sauce and caper sauce.

With broiled fowls, bread sauce, onion sauce, lemon sauce, cranberry sauce, jellies; also cream sauce.

With roast lamb, mint sauce.

With roast turkey, cranberry sauce and currant jelly.

With boiled turkey, oyster sauce.

With venison or wild ducks, cranberry sauce, currant jelly.

Medical Value of Orange.

The orange is one of the most wholesome fruits we have.

An orange may be eaten at any time of the day with advantage.

But taken before breakfast it is a helpful laxative.

It has often been recommended as a specific against boils, a large number, as many as eight, being taken in a day.

In influenza it is also useful, as it reduces fibrin in the blood, and better than almost anything it assuages excessive thirst.

Something Palatable.

Pick over and wash one peck of spinach, then add one cupful boiling water and one level teaspoonful salt. Cook uncovered until tender. Drain and press out all the water possible.

Chop fine and add it to two level tablespoonfuls butter and two level tablespoonfuls flour cooked together. Mix well and add one-half cupful thin cream and salt and pepper to taste.

When heated and thickened place in the center of a hot platter and place broiled lamb chops against it.

A Fine Sauce.

For strawberry sauce to turn over ice cream make a sirup of a cupful of sugar and three-quarters of a cupful of water and when the sirup spins a thin thread cool it. Add a pint box of strawberries that have been mashed. Vanilla cream is the best for the purpose. The sauce should be served in individual pitchers or in a general boat.

Help Out Dessert.

For a simple dessert to help out a short allowance of berries a plain lemon jelly may be made, inserting halved or quartered strawberries just as the jelly begins to harden. If the jelly is allowed to set in a ring mold the center may be heaped with whipped cream.

Several English railroads have built freight cars especially for aeroplanes, the ends having double doors which open to the full height and width of the car.

Magic Second Sight. An Amusing Trick.

To do the trick of "second sight" all that is necessary in the way of equipment are a large slate, a piece of chalk and a sheet of paper. First ask some one in the company to write any number of words on the paper and tell him that you, without seeing the paper, will then write upon the slate those very words.

Every one will smile and at once call upon you to make good your claim. When the paper is ready direct it to be hidden while you turn your back.

Place the slate so the audience cannot see the front of it and then assume an attitude of deep thought. Then say, "Now, if some one will kindly read aloud what is on the paper, it will prove that I have written those very words."

The paper is then read, and the time has arrived to turn the slate around. When the spectators see what is on it the laugh will be on them, for you have done what you boasted you would do—that is to say, you have written "Those very words."

The Thread Game.

Some rainy day when you are shut up in the house try what is called the thread game.

The thread used is a piece of red worsted or cotton twelve or fourteen inches long, the ends fastened together with as small a knot as possible. Then saturate it with water, place it on a damp slate, and with a pencil you can push the moist thread into all sorts of forms and make pictures of leaves, fruits, flowers, stars, furniture and so forth.

For instance, place the wet thread on the slate so that it forms a circle; then if you push the top of the circle in toward the middle you have a heart shaped cooky. If you push the top down a little farther toward the middle you will have a bean, and by pushing the lower half of the circle upward to the middle papa's eyeglasses will appear; then by pushing in the right and left sides similarly you get a pretty four petaled flower.

There is no end to the figures thus made, for the slightest push of the pencil changes the shape, and we have a soldier cap, a Christmas stocking, a knife, fork or spoon. As you grow more skillful and observe more closely the outline of objects about you you may be able to make a thread picture of your dog or the kitty as she sits on the rug.—Youth's Companion.

Anecdotes of Painters.

The art of painting pictures so near to life as to deceive the naked eye is very old. Pliny relates that Zeuxis once painted some grapes so naturally that birds used to come and peck at them and that Parrhasius once painted a curtain so artfully that Zeuxis desired it drawn aside that he could see the picture it hid. Discovering his error, he confessed himself outdone, as he had only imposed on birds, whereas Parrhasius had deceived the human intellect. Another time Zeuxis painted a boy with some grapes, and when the birds again flew at the grapes he was very angry, saying that he was certainly at fault with the picture. He reasoned that had it been perfect the birds would have been frightened away by the boy.

Caius Valerius Flaccus says that Zeuxis' death was occasioned by an immoderate fit of laughter on looking at the comic picture he had drawn of an old woman.

Pillow Climbing.

In the middle of the floor, some little distance apart, place sofa cushions, stools, umbrella stands, large vases or lamps, etc. From among the company choose some smart young man who "was never hoaxed" and ask him to first walk over the course around and between these articles, so as to fix in his mind their situation and distance apart. He is then blindfolded and told to find his way carefully among them again so as not to touch anything.

Very gingerly he will do so, and when, triumphant over his success, the bandage is taken from his eyes, to his surprise, not an article remains on the floor. All were quickly and quietly removed while he was being blindfolded.

His cautious movements and tacking here and there to avoid the obstacles that are not there make fun for the onlookers.

The Land of Story Books.

At evening, when the lamp is lit,
Around the fire my parents sit.
They sit at home and talk and sing
And do not play at anything.
Now, with my little gun, I crawl
All in the dark along the wall
And follow round the forest track
Away behind the sofa back.
There in the night, where none can spy
All in my hunter's camp I lie
And play at books that I have read
Till it is time to go to bed.
—Robert L. Stevenson.

Dr. Julia Sears Founds City of New Thought.

DR. JULIA SEARS.

Oscawana-on-the-Hudson is to be made a New Thought city this summer. One hundred and forty acres of land has been acquired there by Dr. Julia Seaton Sears' students as a school and rest home from early June to mid-September.

The summer colony is for the benefit of professional people bent on a vacation plus study. A metropolis does not appeal, according to Dr. Sears, because "a center of higher metaphysics and modern mysticism."

In explaining the purposes of the New Thought city at Oscawana, Dr. Sears recently said:

"We believe the new civilization is built on co-operation and not competition, and all teachers and workers will come under our New Thought law of attraction.

"We intend to have a city above competition. Each center or school or organization will open headquarters in the city and attract such workers as are interested in their own special line. All centers will have public lectures and conventions, to which the students of other centers will be invited.

"The New Thought city is to be built upon the fundamental principles of the highest brotherhood for the greatest good to the greatest number. It expects to gather to it teachers of every science, religion and branch of human thought. In the end it will stand for the temple of truth.

"No one particular person is doing this. It is doing itself. It will be the inevitable outgrowth of the association of co-operative minds, the natural result of the higher liberal co-operative spirit."

The site is about two miles from the New York railroad station. An auditorium has been built, and around it a tent colony is to be established.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, Jr., Gives Dresses.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., takes keen delight in disposing of her gowns in a way different from most society women. She is interested in several young girls who do not belong to the wealthy set, and she is pleased to turn her gowns over to them. Naturally many of them scarcely are soiled, and with a few alterations they make charming dresses for girls and matrons whose tastes are not so expensive and who have not such large incomes. Her generosity keeps these girls in dresses the year round. Mrs. Vanderbilt was Grace Wilson, and because young Cornelius married her his father cut him off with an inheritance of $1,500,000. The brothers and sisters, however, shared with him a part of their inheritances. For eight years none of the brothers or sisters as well as the mother of Cornelius would speak to the young wife. She did not cross the threshold of the Breakers, the home of Mrs. Vanderbilt, Sr., in Newport, but she was dignified through it all, and her attitude was such that she finally won her husband's relatives to her side. A reconciliation was effected in 1908.

Attack on Smelling Salts.

Smelling salts are dangerous. This is the opinion of several physicians who have investigated the subject. They are said to be a prolific cause of deafness and, besides, destroy the sense of smell. "They irritate and inflame the olfactory nerve," said one physician the other day. "All smelling salts are composed largely of ammonia, the fumes of which inhaled through the nose inflame one end of the eustachian tube and finally cause it to close. This tube connects with the mucous membrane at the back of the nose with the two auditory chambers leading from the eardrums. The part closing of these tubes results in deafness. Of course a great deal depends on one's constitution, but in a person not robust the use of strong smelling salts will cause deafness. To those of normal health the only danger lies in the too frequent use of the salts. Persons who suffer much from colds or chills or have a tendency toward catarrh should beware of them."

The Broken Trust

The policeman strongly advised sending her to the hospital. "She might be stricken with fever or death," he said, "and then it would be unpleasant."

But the kindly lady kneeling by her side, said:

'No, she is stricken down by terrible sorrow and terrible fear; she will need a kind word when she comes to herself again."

Two hours passed away before Esther's dark eyes opened, and in them still lay the shadow of awful fear. It was growing late then ;the lamps of the city were already lighted, and the gray shades of night covered the earth.

She rose with a terrible cry. Full memory and consciousness returned to her at once.

"I am not ill," she said; "surely I am not ill?"

"No," said a quiet, kind voice; "you fainted and fell in the street, and I carried on in here."

"How kind of you!" said Esther, trying to stand. "May God reward you! But I must go. Oh, I am so late! I must go at once!"

"But you cannot walk;" said Mrs. Musselman. "Drink some wine. You seem to be in great trouble. I was looking at you when you fell, thinking your face so full of sorrow."

"No," said the girl, "I shall find strength. Do not persuade me. I am going to save a life."

The lady started in surprise.

"Do not let me delay," pleaded Esther, in feverish haste; 'if wine will make strong, I pray you give it me to drink. I will come back and thank you some other day, when this agony is ended and it is time to rest."

Mrs. Musselman asked no more questions. She saw that a more than ordinary fear and sorrow was on the girl. She was content to give her wine, to soothe the tangled masses of fair hair, to straighten her bonnet and shawl, to clasp her trembling hands and bid her take courage.

Those sweet womanly words, the kind womanly actions, cheered her: but for them Esther Bruce would never have reached Belgrave Lodge that night.

When she stood in front of the well-known door she saw that house was brilliantly illuminated ,as though some grand entertainment were being held.

The utter mockery of the idea almost overpowered her. If what he said were true ,the shadow of the scaffold was over him; yet he, all unconscious of it, was holding high revel. She rapped not once but many times on the door. No one appeared in answer to her summons. She rapped again, using all her strength this time, and a footman in livery opened the door.

"Now, young lady," he said, rudely, "what is your hurry?"

"Is Sir Alan Aynsley in?" she asked. "I want to see him so particularly.

"Well," said the man, with a smile at his own wit, "he is in, but for all you will see of him he might as well be out. My master doesn't see parties who rap the door down at this hour."

His insolence suddenly deserted him when Esther turned her indignant glance upon him.

"I must see Sir Alan at once," she said; "my business is urgent."

"There is a large party, and they have but just sat down to dinner; it is more than my place is worth to disturb Sir Alan now."

"Your place will be worth little," she said with quiet dignity, "if you do not take my message."

"What name," he asked, suddenly relapsing into his most insolent drawl; for a subdued giggle told him one of his confreres was listening and enjoying his discomfiture.

She paused, and her opponent was not slow to notice it.

"Take this card to him," she replied.

She wrote: "Can Sir Alan spare one minute on most pressing and important business?"

"Take that to our master," she said with the air of command so natural to her. "You need not take my name; he will know my handwriting."

Her proud face flushed crimson at the insolent smile with which he took the card.

She stood by the door while the man went on the errand. He was absent fully twenty minutes; then he returned.

"Just as I told you," he said. "Sir Alan says 'he is engaged and you must call again.'"

"But I must see him; his life may depend upon it," she was about to add, but stopped suddenly, not to his own servants would she betray his danger.

"I must see him; he has not recognized the handwriting or he would see me, I am sure. Take this to him; do not delay."

"There will be a dreadful row if I do. Sir Alan has not much patience."

He took another card, on which was written:

"For the love of Heaven, see me, if only for a minute."

The footman returned in a few minutes, and this time the portly butler accompanied him.

"Sir Alan says he cannot be annoyed in this way; you must call again."

He stepped back then to make way for the butler, who said solemnly:

"We cannot have this kind of game at the hall door. Young woman, gentlemen are not to be persecuted; Sir Alan has twice refused to see you. I make bold to go further and advise you to take yourself off ;there has been quite fuss enough about nothing."

The footman laughed derisively.

"I told the party it was no use sending," he said, and Esther turned silently away.

She had gone to save his life, she believed—to lay down her own for him if necessary, and he had permitted his servants, with insolent words, to turn her from his door.

CHAPTER XXXV.

A Voice From the Grave.

Sir Alan Aynsley was all unconscious of the dark cloud hovering over him. He felt annoyed on the evening of his great dinner party that Esther should trouble him. Judging her by himself, he had no doubt that she had, in what he called his own mind, "come to terms," and wanted money. It was unlike her, he felt; yet there was no other business which could be pressing and important. He had not intended his servants to be rude to her, but none the less had he subjected her to their insolence.

It was a brilliant evening. Sir Alan's health was drunk; good wishes praise, homage and adulation were offered to him. Among his guests were some of the leading men of the day men of note and celebrity, men whose acquaintance was an honor, men upon whom Sir Alan had looked with wondering awe and respect, hardly daring to hope the time would come when he might aspire to knowing them.

One lucky incident after another had introduced him into their midst. He played his best cards before them. He was gay, urbane, magnificently hospitable, brilliant in repartee and conversation, and he was considered a man worth knowing. His thoughts and ideas had something new and original about them; they had not become hackneyed by constant mixing with the world

To his intense joy, Sir Alan found himself at the hight of his ambition —received and welcomed by men whose nod was fame.

(To be continued.))

THE WORLD TONGUE.

Hardly a Land in Which English Is Not Now Heard.

The traveler of to-day ,unless he is going to Thibet or Tierra del Fuego can get along very well with a knowledge of the English language. The farther he goes the more he is surprised at finding that English is really "the" world tongue. In France and Spain and Italy the American traveler is craftily "spotted." He is approached on the streets by those who would for a consideration make him feel quite at home. One of his chief worries is to escape the pests who can speak English and who wish to apprise him of the fact. They may not necessarily desire to mulct him. Sometimes they are seeking merely to "show off." At any rate ,they classify distinctly as bores. One may go to Smyrna or Constantinople or Beirut and still find the streets plentifully full of English speaking nuisances. At Jerusalem he will be fairly flooded with English. He may penetrate even to Damascus ,and he will find at least a befezzed hall porter who can converse glibly with him and any number of fluently willing dragomans. He may go to Cairo, and in the shadow of the pyramids he will find blue gowned Bedouins speaking more than passable English. He may go hundreds of miles up the Nile and may be steered through the locks of the first cataract by frizzly haired Nubian boatment who make insistent demands for backsheesh in very intelligible terms. He may wander donkey back to the tombs of the kings in the Sahara desert and be painfully disillusioned by a few words of concise information or explanation by some bare footed dusky tent dweller.

Why not Pass ... Plate?

They ought to pass the plate at church weddings. It comes natural to do it in church, and to do so would add a pretty and useful employment to the duties of the ushers, who always have a little spare time before the bride arrives. And, really, getting married is more expensive than ever, and, though wedding presents are excellent in their way, what the young people usually need the most is cash. Instead of the list of gifts which the newspapers sometimes print we should read, "The collection yielded $4,000,000." That would be nice. It is much easier to store and care for money than plate and glass! And money always fits and there is no such thing as an embarrassing duplication of dollars —Life.

Bedouins and Water.

It is not unusual to hear a Bedouin upon reaching a camp where water is offered him refuse it with the remark, "I drank only yesterday." On the Bedouins' long marches across dry countries the size of the water skins is nicely calculated to just outlast the journey ,and they rarely allow themselves to break the habit of abstemiousness ,as this would be sure to make their next water fast all the harder. They are accustomed from infancy to regard water as a most precious commodity and use it with religious economy. They know every hollow and nook in the mountains where water may be found. Their camels and goats which they take with them on their marches to supply them with milk and meat, live principally on the scanty herbage and foliage of the thorny mimosa. Neither men nor animals drink more than once in forty-eight hours. No wonder they can subsist where invaders quickly perish.

If Canada's wheat crop last year had been shipped by rail, each car holding 15 tons, it would have made a continuous train 1365 miles long.

EDWARD AS MOTORIST.

He Was an Enthusiast and Patron of the Toot-Toot Art.

By the death of King Edward, motoring in common with many other forms of sport has lost a munificent patron. His Majesty was the proud possessor of a baker's dozen of motor-cars, most of which represent the last word in the automobile world.

The King was immune from the tyranny of the number-plate, and his cars were therefore innocent of the symbolism which appeals so strongly to the executive of the police-trap.

A detailed description of all the King's cars was issued to the police throughout the Kingdom together with instructions that "all facilities" were to be given for their progress on the road. But this concern at headquarters was not sufficient to prevent mistakes. More than once the royal cars were held up owing to the interference of some officious constable, who was disappointed in his search for a number, and a considerable amount of time and breath has been wasted before he has been convinced that "the King can do no wrong."

Unlike his brother, the Duke of Connaught, the King was remarkably free from anything in the nature of a serious accident. He had breakdowns in legion—no motorist is free from these little unpreventable inconveniences — but he always proved himself equal to the emergency by availing himself of the first handy vehicle and so avoiding becoming an object of interest to all and sundry.

A short while ago his car came to a sudden stop in Richmond Park. In a moment a vast crowd appeared, apparently from nowhere, and enjoyed the spectacle of the King of England instructing his chauffeur in the true inwardness of the breakdown, showing him the best method of remedying the fault, and exhibiting in a number of ways his intimate knowledge of motor-car mechanism. He owed this knowledge to Mr. Oliver Stanton, who, years ago, taught His Majesty cycling, and more recently made him a thorough master of the automobile.

King Edward's chauffeurs were all picked men. Most of them served in Scotland Yard, and have, at some time or other, driven the official motor-cars of the police. How this idea of the King's was carried out is interesting. One day a chauffeur in the employ of the Commissioner of Police was told off to perform some service for the King, and the fine physique and bearing of the man attracted His Majesty's attention. While this man was in attendance at Buckingham Palace something went wrong with a royal motor-car, which seemed to puzzle the King's own chauffeur, and resist all his attempts at remedy.

At last the man from Scotland Yard stepped forward, and in a few minutes found a remedy. The King was so pleased that he asked the man to take service with him, and, the permission of the Commissioner being secured, the corps of policemen-chauffeurs was inaugurated. As it was necessary for policemen to accompany the King almost everywhere he went, the men performed dual service.

Although the King was extremely free from accidents, he had foresight enough to know that he was not infallible, so he had a complete first-aid outfit attached to each of his cars. This miniature surgery weighs about six pounds, and includes an India rubber tourniquet to stop bleeding, several pairs of scissors and forceps, antiseptic swabs, gauze, bandages, a variety of unguents and dressings, a selection of stimulative drugs, and a bottle of brandy. These contents are arranged in the order of their use in the eight different compartments of a silver box which fits into a royal blue morocco case.

On the lid of each case are detailed instructions, while on the front of each silver box is the inscription: "A Friend in Need is a Friend Indeed."

The Names of the Mighty.

Talking of family names, the new issue of the London directory provides some curiosities. Sebastian Bach is a horse dealer, Robert Bruce and John Bunyan are green grocers, John Milton is a chandler and James Boswell a mason.

William Shakespeare is the name of a barrister, tailor and a van builder. There is a Crusoe and also a Gulliver. Julius Caesar is a chemist; Livy keeps apartments. Homer is a lighterman, Pindar an electrical engineer, Mars, retails beer, and Venus, not inappropriately, sugars, candles. Frances Bacon is an architect and Bayard a dairyman. And what could be better for the name of a saddler than Whippy?

From Sailor to Royal Academician.

Mr. C. Napier Hemy, one of the newly-elected Royal Academicians, has had an extremely eventful career. Born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, he was taken by his parents to Australia, where in his early days he worked hard as a miner in the bush. The call of art was strong upon him, however, and he abandoned everything to study painting in Antwerp. Returning to England in 1870 his success with the brush was soon assured, and, elected an Associate in 1898, he has now deservedly achieved the highest honor the art world has to offer.

Healy on Redmond.

The Irish politician takes his business seriously and when he strikes an opponent he strikes to kill. The other day at a mass meeting in Cork, Mr. M. Healy, M.P., said that Mr. John Redmond and his party, in voting for the Budget, had committed the greatest act of betrayal of Irish interests since that memorable act of treachery in Ireland's history when, 110 years ago, other Irishmen put their hand and seal to the Act of Union.

Exporting Cabinet Ministers.

In proposing "Scotland and her Industries" at a Glasgow corporation dinner recently an Englishman remarked that the two chief industries of the northern land were the manufacture of marmalade and Cabinet Ministers. Sir Samuel Chisholm, who replied, suggested that they had a good-going business in the output of Prime Ministers—for export as well as for home consumption.

To make it possible to reach the bottom of a trunk without stooping over, an Illinois man has patented a trunk with metal legs which slide in guideways on the corners to raise it.

ASTONISHED THE QUEEN.

They Knew Their Bibls But Not Their Court Etiquette.

Recently two little girls from London came down to spend the day at Windsor Castle with the little Battenbergs, Queen Victoria's grand children, and it so happened that Her Majesty paid a visit to the nursery and found them there.

The young visitors were taken aback; they had not expected to see the Queen, and had not been instructed how to conduct themselves in the presence of royalty; but they had been well brought up and knew their Bibles, and they thought at once of Daniel before King Darius. They decided that what Daniel had done must be correct, so the pair threw themselves on their faces on the floor at her astonished Majesty's feet, and cried out with a loud voice:

"Oh, Queen, live forever!"

However, this proved an excellent introduction, and presently the Queen and they became great friends. She took one of them on her knee, and all three chatted together in the friendliest way.

"And whereabout in London do you young people live?" asked the Queen.

"Oh, said the little girl on her knee, "we live just opposite W's,"—naming one of the new mammoth stores that had just been opened in London.

"But please won't you tell us where you live when you go to London?" said her little friend.

The Queen looked thoughtful for a moment, and then remembered that in Buckingham Palace road there is also a mommoth store. "Oh," said she, smiling, "when in London I live opposite Gerringe's."

On an Ostrich Farm.

A writer in a recent number of the Boy's Own Paper gives an interesting account of a visit he paid to a South Australian ostrich farm at Port Augusta. The ostriches, he says, were chiefly hatched in incubators. The eggs take 45 to 50 days. The chicks are first fed on bread crumbs, bran, and water. On the fourth day a little enclosure is made round the incubator, and the young are allowed to take exercise. They are then fed on grain, green vegetables, and water. The dangerous age is from birth to three months, after which time they generally live. When the ostrich is seven months old the first crop of feathers is ripe. At 12 months he begins to develop black feathers, and his plumage reaches perfection at the end of three years. The hen ostrich lays from 12 to 20 eggs, but if these are removed she will continue laying like a domestic fowl. One bird has been known to produce 120 eggs annually. Both parents share the duties of incubation. The hen covers the nest during the day, and the cock throughout the night. The chicks are released by the old bird pressing upon the shell with its hard breast. Ostriches are not expensive to keep, because the greater part of the year they find sufficient food in the paddocks, and at other times they only require a little Indian corn or beans and some additional green food, such as lucerne or cabbage.

Russia's Greatest Dancer.

So, by general consent, Mlle. Anna Pavlova, whose wonderful dancing at the Palace Theatre in London has aroused such enthusiasm, has been termed. Mlle. Pavlova, in her infancy, decided to become a dancer. She was taken by her mother to see a ballet. The dancers fascinated her, and she exclaimed, enthusiastically, "Oh, mother, that's what I want to do. I want to be a dancer, too. I must dance. I'll never do anything else when I grow up." And before she was ten she entered the Imperial School of Dancing in St. Petersburg, and studied under M. Petitpas, who danced with Taglioni and the great dancers of the past. And when the curtain fell after her debut the old dancer, who is now ninety-two years of age, put his hand on her head and said, "My child, you are the only woman fit to dance in Taglioni's shoes," so impressed was he with her performance.

"Hard Wood."

Ever since he was a boy at school Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, who recently celebrated his seventy-second birthday, has had a tough time, and often has been called "Hard Wood." At the age of ten he went to Marlborough Grammar School, and then to the college in the same town. Here he received his baptism of "war." It was a riot among the boys, brought about by the prohibition of pyrotechnic displays on the Fifth of November. The culmination was a month of mutiny, during which the head master's desk was burned and great damage done to the premises. Young Wood was flogged, fined $10, and given 300 lines of Latin to learn by heart.

Gladstone Talks Dutch.

Lord Gladstone, the first Governor-General of South Africa, left London recently to take up his new duties. The large party which gave him a rousing send-off, included a number of Dutchmen. So much progress has Lord Gladstone made in learning Dutch that he was able to converse with them in their own tongue and to promise of his policy in South Africa that "Alles zal recht kommen" (the Dutch proverb, "All shall come right").

A Moist Show.

A catchy unrehearsed act took place at a London music hall the other night. When the fireproof curtain was about to be lowered, a stage hand new to the work pulled the wrong handle. with the result that the water sprinkler was set in motion. The stage was swamped, the orchestra receiving a shower bath, to the considerable amusement of the audience.

Pursuer Shoots Friend.

Extraordinary excitement prevailed over the pursuit of the escaped prisoner Powellka, who has been terrorizing the Manawatu district of New Zealand. Scores of armed men were out in pursuit of the robber. One of the searchers, by an unfortunate accident, shot another member of the pursuing party, who died of the injuries received.

The Australian government is considering plans, for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expediate the mails and for military purposes.

HOME OF THE SHETLAND.

Little Pony Comes From a Picturesque Country.

Away to the north of Scotland lies the group of islands in which the diminutive horses commonly called Shelties have their home. The Shetlands are not all inhabited, some of the smaller islands being used merely as pasturage for a few sheep. There is little to attract either the agriculturist or the merchant, so progress is slow; the islanders till their land by old-fashioned methods, and many of them still have recourse to barter as a means of obtaining necessaries.

To the lover of the beautiful and to the artist there is much to charm. Some perhaps would describe the islands as barren—but what barrenness! The country, though destitute of trees, is so varied in the nature of its scenery that their absence in no way detracts from the general beauty of the landscape.

Countless tarns, streams and lochs all serve to make the coloring of the heather covered hills and the gloomy tints of the moors stand out in pleasing contrasts, while near the sea bold cliffs tower over the blue waters, whose waves dash against their rocky sides. Overhead numerous sea birds circle on their way to their nests on the ledges.

The largest island is known as the mainland, with a length of fifty-four miles and a width of twenty-one. The islands have a singularly mild and equable climate considering their exposed situation, and compose one of the most healthful districts of Scotland; but even the most adventurous tourists seldom visit them, because a doubtful sea trip in a small steamer is necessary before they can be reached.

Of the entire area of 551 square miles scarcely one-sixth is under cultivation, yet the Shetlanders manage to maintain something like 100,000 sheep, 20,000 cattle and 5,000 of the famous ponies. The inhabitants are of Norse origin and in their speech and customs retain many of the characteristics of their forefathers. They support themselves chiefly by the herring and other fishing industries.

They cannot afford to give much feeding to their ponies, so these hardy little animals run wild in herds on the hills or scatholds, picking up what food they can find. When the bleak wintry weather comes on they find their way down to the seashore, where they derive a scanty living from the seaweed which grows upon the rocks or has been left by the high autumn tides and freshened by melted snow or rain. At this time of year, too, they will gather in groups near the homesteads and are rewarded with an occasional truss of hay.

In spite of this precarious existence the Shelties seem happy enough and they are extremely hardy. They possess extraordinary strength for their size, being able to carry a man or woman with apparent ease for long distances.

The little ponies, with their rough, shaggy coats and flowing manes and tails, seem somehow to suit their wild, rugged surroundings and the groups of them that are scattered about add the needed life to the landscape.

Perhaps it is a question of a survival of the fittest that makes these little creatures so very small, as horses of a larger type would be useless on the boggy moors or on the stony hillsides. They have been known to attain the age of thirty years and more, due probably to the healthful mode of life which they were forced to adopt, for they were born in the fields and lived and died in them.

Where Edwards Rest.

Edward IV., born 1442, died April 9, 1483, buried at Windsor.

Edward V., born 1470, died 1483. One of the princes murdered in the Tower by the orders of Richard, Duke of Gloucester. Buried at Westminster Abbey.

Edward VI., born 1537, died July 6, 1553, buried at Westminster.

Edward VII., born Nov. 9, 1841, died May 6, 1910, buried at Windsor Castle.

The Spinning Ant of Ceylon.

The spinning ant is found in India, in Ceylon, in the Islands of Malacca, and in Australia. This ant weaves its nest between two leaves of a tree, preferably the mango. It begins to build, or to weave, by drawing two leaves together. To do this it runs a line of its working material—material similar to the spider's thread — the length of the leaf and around it. While at work it clings to the leaf with its nails and, at the same time, draws on the leaf nearest to it with its mandibles. Sometimes the two leaves suitable for nest-building are too far apart. Then the builder calls in its fellow ants and they help it to form a chain. Each ant clings to the waist of its neighbor by its mandibles. Thus enchained, they work to build the nest of their comrade.

New Zealand's Wool Trade.

Sir Joseph Ward's the Prime Minister, speaking at Mangaweka, recently, said that New Zealand was to-day exporting more wool than any one of the Australian states. The total value of the exports had now reached twenty millions a year. Eighteen months ago people had predicted financial distress, but, happily, their fears had not been realized. The deposits in banking institutions had increased by more than four millions as compared with last year.

She Got Even.

A Lanarkshire postmistress explains how she got level with a customer who had paid for £2 18s of postal orders in threepenny pieces. First of all she kept him waiting while she counted over the coins three times, and then next day, when he came back to change some postal orders, she paid him out in the same threepenny pieces!

A Californian has done away with the horn for phonographs by inventing a cabinet with a lid which, when raised, opens a bellows-like affair to amplify the sound.

THE PRINCESS ROYAL.

How Monster Warship Came to Bear That Name.

The Admiralty have paid a neat and appropriate compliment in naming the new Dreadnought, just begun at Barrow, Princess Royal, in honor of the Duchess of Fife. Whether it came by accident or design is another thing. According to one story it came about in this way: The Duchess of Fife was at Marseilles last autumn on her way to Egypt, and expected to find there a telegram from the King. She was told there was none, but had enquiries made, which resulted in the telegram being found, set aside. It was addressed "The Princess Royal," but some official taking the title to be the name of a vessel had noted on it in pencil "ship unknown," and put it by. The story reached the Admiralty just as Sir John Fisher was selecting the names for the four "contingent" Dreadnoughts now being laid down. He had chosen the four, but, on hearing the story, put his pen through the fourth name, Devastation, substituting that of the "ship unknown"—Princess Royal.

As it happens, the name is to the royal navy very far from being that of a "ship unknown." There have been four ladies to bear the style of Princess Royal in England, and each one in turn has had a British battleship named after her. The man-of-war name, indeed, is just as old as the title itself. It appeared first on the navy list in 1728, in honor of George the Second's strong-minded eldest daughter, the Princess Anne, married in 1734 to the Prince of Orange. A second man-of-war bore it in honor of George the Third's eldest daughter, the Princess Charlotte-Augusta-Matilda, "a chaste and gentle Princess," married in 1797 to the future King of Wurtemburg. The third was given the name in honor of Queen Victoria's eldest daughter, the late Empress Frederick; and a fourth ship now takes it in honor of King Edward's eldest daughter, the Duchess of Fife.

Rigid economy in naval matters and little shipbuilding marked the earlier days of George the Second, so that monarch had to content himself by taking away the name of an old ship and substituting Princess Royal for it. The man-of-war in question was an old three-decker of William the Third's navy, originally named the Triumph. H.M.S. Princess Royal the First lost the only chance she got of firing an angry gun. That was in 1744, when her admiral was Sir John Norris. "Foul Weather Jack"—the first of the two the navy has had. Just as Norris had caught up the French fleet he was chasing and a battle seemed inevitable, one of the admiral's storms burst, and the fleets were forced apart and never sighted one another again.

H.M.S. Princess Royal the Second was launched in 1773, by George the Third's brother, the Duke of Gloucester. The little girl Princess Royal of that day, a nine-year-old child, was sculptured as the figurehead. "The Princess Royal is seen seated on a chair supported on the shoulders of Neptune and Amphitrite, who ride on dolphins. Many Tritons are playing about them." So a newspaper reporter who witnessed the launched at Portsmouth described the figurehead.

"Foul Weather Jack" the second, Admiral John Byron, Lord Byron's grandfather, who "had no rest at sea," was her first admiral, and his ill-luck came on board with him.

Starting from England to take up the chief command off New York in the American war with a fleet of thirteen ships, storm after storm fell on him. Only two ships arrived at the rendezvous, the Princess Royal and another. A third crawled in later on, her masts gone, and leaking badly. Three more had to turn back, battered wrecks, for England. The remainder, with signals of distress flying, put into various American harbors. When Admiral Byron at length got them together and refitted, and was sailing for the West Indies, two of them were wrecked in another storm. He was reinforced and met the French off Grenada, made a blundering attack, and was badly mauled, being lucky to escape defeat and the loss of half his fleet. After that the Princess Royal fought in three battles under Rodney, and then went home to England to be present at the sinking of the Royal George, and to take part with Lord Howe in the final relief of Gibraltar, which closed the great siege. Then came the war with the French revolution, and we see the Princess Royal in the thick of the midnight horrors of the fighting in Toulon Harbor when an "unknown captain of artillery" Napoleon Bonaparte, drove the British fleet out headlong. Two fights with the French in 1795, one off Genoa, the other near Toulon, make up the Princess Royal's record of eight battles. For some years after that the Princess Royal had her place in the Channel Fleet, helping to hold in check Napoleon's intended invasion from Boulogne, one of "those far-distant storm-beaten ships upon which the Grand Army never looked, but which stood between it and the dominion of the world." Her end, to be taken to pieces at Chatham, came two years after Trafalgar.

The third Princess Royal bore the effigy of Queen Victoria's eldest daughter, the Empress Frederick, for her figurehead. A 91-gun screw-propelled wooden two-decker of the "fifties" of the last century, she made a name for herself as Captain Lord Clarence Paget's ship in the Crimean war, serving both in the Baltic campaign and before Sebastopol in the Black Sea.

So we come to the new Dreadnought, the Princess Royal of to-day, a tremendous cruiser-battleship of 26,500 tons, the biggest warship ever yet laid down in the world.

THE DIVER'S DRESS

Evolution of the Devices Used For Submarine Work.

Among pioneer inventors to whom the diving dress in its present perfected form owes so much was William Hannis Taylor. The previous hit or miss attempts were superseded by the Taylor patent of June 20, 1838, in which the essential feature was the valve allowing the emission of consumed air without an influx of water.

Previous to this time there had been the diving chests and the diving bell, of which the latter, introduced by Smeaton in 1778, was the safest and most practical device for submarine exploration. The diving bell has been developed alongside of the diving dress and is still in use.

The general appearance of Taylor's diving armor was like that of a knight's suit of mail, except for a prominent bulge in the body piece. A large pipe coming down from the surface and penetrating the body piece at the bulge supplied the fresh air, while a short pipe entered the body piece on the other side and was provided with a valve which carried off the exhaust. Although diving armor has now reached its perfected state, this valve has never been materially improved upon.

CRATER LAKES.

Mexico Has Some of the Most Perfect of These Peaceful Pools.

The mere words "crater lake" carry with them a charm and mystery that are akin to romance. But Mexico, with all her romance, has never given abroad any description of some of the most beautiful crater lakes in the world. Valle de Santiago, a little town of the state of Guanajuato, boasts four of the most perfect and beautiful of such lakes.

The village nestles among eleven craters, all formed in some past age by sudden explosions from the interior of the earth, explosions that blew out a great amount of earth, formed low cones and subsided without a flow of lava or other demonstration than the single explosion. They are what are known to science as "explosion craters."

The calm restfulness of the crater lake is unlike anything in the world. One finds lakes and solitary pools in forests or mountain fastnesses, and the calm there is akin to witchery, but they are stirred sometimes by passing breezes, and the trees will wave above in the wind. But in a crater lake there is not a breath that will stir it, and even a stone cast into its bosom creates ripples that seem as though they would be swallowed ere they are born. Peace is a word without a meaning until one lies silent on the slope of such a crater, with such a lake at his feet.—Mexican Herald.

POISON IN FLOWERS.

Dainty and Beautiful Blossoms in Which Lurks Death.

When the good friar in "Romeo and Juliet" reflected upon the properties of the simple flower, "within whose infant rind poison hath residence and medicine power," his observation embraced a goodly category of well known flowers whose secretions furnish the world with so many poisons.

For instance, the laburnum, which has been compared to a fountain of gold leaping into the sun—a most charming sight—is one of the most poisonous things imaginable, inasmuch as it is poison in leaf and flower and seed. Even the grass growing beneath is poisonous by reason of its proximity to the innocent looking blossoms overhead, and it has been found necessary to guard against cattle eating this grass for fear of fatal results.

The bulbs of such dainty and beautiful flowers as the narcissus, hyacinth, jonquil and snowdrop secrete the most deadly poisons, not to speak of the oxalis, the monkshood and the foxglove, all of which furnish noxious liquors sufficient to destroy life.

To these may be added certain of the crocuses, the lovely lady's slipper, the quaint old jack-in-the-pulpit and the laughing little buttercup. The latter, despite its most innocent appearance, is one of the worst of the poisonous flowers. Even the cow is aware of that and carefully avoids it. The cousins of the buttercups, the peonies, the larkspurs and the rest, all contain toxic fluids.

Another source of deadly poison is the oleander tree, while the bark of the superb catalpa tree contains many deadly doses.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Poverty no Bar to Savage Matrimony.

Amongst African savages poverty is not considered a bar to matrimony and happiness. The fact that a man has no sufficient wealth in cattle or kind to satisfy the parents of his young woman with the usual presents need not necessarily prevent him from marrying her. He forms a species of limited liability company with two or three of his brothers, and the capital is sunk in the purchase of the wife.—Wide World Magazine.

Unhappy Man!

"Yes, my old friend, I have been the victim of misfortune in all my love affairs. My first sweetheart died, the second jilted me, and the third became my wife!"

"Aw, come on!" the little boy was heard to remark. "Be a sport. I'll bet yer any amount o' money up to 5 cents."—Harper's.

BASEBALL.

ONTARIOS VICTORIOUS

To the tune of 8 to 5, the Ontario baseball team yesterday afternoon defeated the Coleman Flat's team in a league match. The game took place on the Coleman Flat's diamond, and was witnessed by a large number of spectators. Although the Coleman Flat's team were strengthened by an imported pitcher from Lindsay, they were unable to defeat the Ontarios, which team is wholly city lads. It was an interesting game and played with considerable vim. In the early part of the game the Coleman Flat's players had a rather decided lead, the score at the end of the fourth innings being 5 to 2 in their favor. In the fifth innings the Ontarios secured 4 runs, which gave them a lead and they maintained it to the finish. Moore for the winning team pitched a good game and was given good support in the field. Hopkins, the Lindsay twirler, although pitching good ball, was once or twice inclined to be a little erratic. He was not as well supported in the field as he might have been. The members of the winning team are certainly all ball players, and will no doubt be near the top of the schedule if not on top when the season closes. The line up of the teams was as follows:—

	ONTARIOS	COLEMAN FLATS
Pitcher	A. Moore	Hopkins
Catcher,	Hagerman	Bowen
First Base.	Mills	Clement
Second Base.	Ketcheson	Orr
Third Base.	Ford	Jarrell
Short Stop	Wallace	Draycott
Right Field.	Cornish	Westover
Centre Fielder	E. Moore	Symons
Left Fielder	Lavoie	Bateson

The score by innings was as follows:

Ontarios ...... 10104020x—8
Coleman Flats ...... 002300000—5

Mr. Wm. Cochrane was umpire and he is certainly the right man in the right place.

CANOE CLUB RACES.

The sailing and canoe races held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the local canoe club were well contested. There was an excellent breeze for testing the sailing capabilities of the various crafts which competed. A large number of spectators witnessed the events, which were as follows:

Corbett, who has arrived in Chicago from San Francisco, departed later in the day on the same train with Johnson for New York. On the long ride to the eastern metropolis four cars separated the champion and the ex-champion, who are bitter enemies. Corbett still feels bad over Jeffries' defeat, but said he believed he has a man who, with proper training and touching, will be able to wrest the title from the colored champion.

FLIES OVER TORONTO

Count De Lesseps Performs Feat at Aviation Meet.

In His Bleriot Monoplane La Scarabee, French Bird-Man Sets Out From the Grand Stand at Weston and Runs to Toronto and Back, a Distance of 30 Miles In Half an Hour—Travels at 3,500 Feet High.

Toronto, July 14.—In his beloved La Scarabee, the 50 horse-power, seven cylinder Bleriot monoplane, in which he crossed the English Channel some months ago, Count de Lesseps last evening added to his well established fame as a navigator of the ether wastes, when he flew from the Weston aviation camp to Toronto and return, executing the journey in almost 30 minutes, and attaining a height of 3,500 feet at least. Including the time occupied in preliminary circlings of the field, he was a stranger to terra firma for 36 minutes.

The start and return was witnessed by three thousand persons, the largest gathering of the meet outside of last Saturday's throng, and the demonstration which hailed the reappearance of La Scarabee and its intrepid rider was one of the greatest enthusiasm. It seemed to the great majority of the beholders an incredibly short time for the voyage, the fact that the powerful motor can propel it through the air at close to a mile a minute, being overlooked in the computation.

Just how far the count traveled is a secret of the stars. The aeroplane carries no speedmeter, and calculations only are possible. It is said to be fifteen miles from Weston to Toronto and return as the crow flies, but the aerial craft has some lessons to learn from that sagacious bird as to directness. It is estimated that the count flew at least 20 miles, and some calculators say 25, and even 30. The count himself doesn't know, he being chiefly concerned about the wind, which was from the southeast by west and a lively breeze, as his inflamed eyes showed.

"The wind nearly broke my face," he sang out gaily as he alighted in the centre of the field, where he was seized upon by the French consul, Charles Rochereau de la Sablierre, another compatriot, and Captain Williams, who is in charge of the camp.

He was borne on their shoulders across the field to the south side, where the Baden-Powell Boy Scouts, about 400 strong, were drawn up under Capt. J. K. Keefler. The lads cheered him to the echo, and the other spectators joined in the spontaneous tribute. The count was manifestly pleased and bowed his acknowledgements. Then, surrounded by his countrymen, all bubbling over with enthusiasm, he proceeded to his tent.

The count, in reply to the consul's questions, said he had not been able to locate the City Hall tower, "because the wind was too bad," but that he had traveled far over the city—a statement readily confirmed by citizens who witnessed the aeroplane's circuitous sweep. The count was much pleased with the manner in which Le Scarabee had acted under the adverse conditions, for while the wind, which blew at 35 miles an hour during the day, dropped at sundown, it was still far from ideal for aeroplaning.

While Count de Lesseps will not be officially credited with more than 3,000 feet altitude, his sister, Countess Begassiers, said that to her it appeared that he was much higher in the air than at Montreal, when the judges gave him credit for 3,000 feet. His own barometer registered 3,500 feet, while before his downward glide he was 1,656 feet up.

While it was announced several days ago that the count would pay the city a friendly call in his airship during the meet, no definite time was set until yesterday afternoon, when the daring aviator said he would do so before night. During the morning he, with Count de la Sablierre and two French aviators, went to the top of the city hall tower, where Count de Lesseps carefully studied the surrounding country through a pair of field glasses. After lunch he stated that he would make part of the trip out over the lake and bay, thereby reducing to some extent the element of danger, his plane being equipped with a rubber cushion filled with gas, making for sufficient buoyancy to keep the craft above water in the event of a fall. He started out with the plan of following the course of the Humber in a general way through Lambton to the lake, with a return by that route.

It is said that at luncheon the count made a playful wager with his brother that he would fly to Toronto yesterday and that this held him to his purpose, despite the wind to be encountered.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Hogs Lower—American Cattle Markets Active With Higher Prices.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 13.—(Special.)—The improved demand for ocean freight space has continued, and the bulk of it now from this port for the months of July and August has been engaged, of which fully 75 per cent. is for northwest ranch cattle. There has been no further change in rates. All the Liverpool has been closed out for July and August at 22s to 30s; London at 20s to 25s, Glasgow at 25s, and the bulk of Manchester at 20s to 27s 6d per head. Prices in the foreign markets for Canadian cattle so far this season have been well maintained, on account of limited supplies, as compared with previous years, and, altho exporters have had to pay high prices in the west for them, the season up to the present has been satisfactory for them, but the question now is, Will these high prices, viz., 14½c to 15½c for Canadians, and 13½c to 14c for ranchers, in Liverpool, and 14¼c to 15¾c for the former, and 13¾c to 14½c for the latter in London, be maintained when these increased shipments of northwest ranchers begin to arrive on the markets?

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning the offerings amounted to 850 cattle, 750 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 600 calves. Prices were firm at the advance noted on Monday. The supply was a little larger, but, as butchers generally were short of stock, the demand was good, and quite an active trade was done, which resulted in the market being cleared at an early hour. Choice steers sold at 7c to 7¼c; good at 6¾c to 6¾c; fairly good at 6c to 6½c; fair at 5¾c to 5¾c, and common at 5c to 5½c per lb. Among the offerings there were a fair number of cows, which met with a better sale, and prices ranged from 3c to 5c per lb., as to quality. There were no choice bulls, and the top price realized for the best was 4c, and the lower grades sold at from that down to 3c per lb. Supplies of small meats were more plentiful than they have been of late, and especially of lambs, but, as the demand was good for all lines, a steady feeling prevailed in the market, and prices show no change. Yearling sheep brought 3½c to 3¾c per lb., and spring lambs sold at $1.50 to $5. Calves were cheaper on account of the poor quality of the stock offered, and sales were made at from $2.50 to $8 each, as to size and quality. The demand for hogs was good, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50, and mixed lots at $9 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Pulpwood Burned.

Ottawa, July 14.—By a fire which started in the Cummings' lumber yards, situated a mile above Maniwaki, from some unknown cause, and which burned all day Monday and Tuesday, over 2,000 cords of pulp wood and several hundred sawlogs were destroyed. The heat was so intense that it was impossible for the volunteer fire-fighters to get within working distance of the blaze, and it was only through the heavy rains of Tuesday night that the conflagration was eventually stopped. The damage will be several thousand dollars.

Kilts Not Civilized.

One of the candidates for admission to the Primitive Methodist ministry in New Zealand this year is a young man who usually appears in public in Highland costume. And, according to a Maori paper, when his application came before the conference it was accepted, "on condition that he assumes civilized dress!"

The French military authorities in Africa are bending every effort to increase the number of a species of camel which can travel more than twice as swiftly as the ordinary camel of commerce.

HIS OWN PEOPLE.

Sir Wilfrid Gets Rousing Welcome From Manitoba French.

St. Anne, Man., July 14.—Quaint types and picturesque surroundings gave an interesting touch to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's meeting here yesterday. The Prime Minister was among his own people, he spoke to them in their native language and more than ever was a Canadien.

The meeting took place in the garden surrounding Reeve Richer's residence, St. Anne, in the County of Provencher, in an entirely French-Canadian settlement.

Several hundred thronged the grounds, climbing on posts, trees and roofs to hear the Premier.

Addressing his compatriots, Sir Wilfrid said the French language was dear to him. He repeated his remarks about the object of his trip, and referred to the decrease in transportation tolls since the Liberal Government came into power.

Hon. George P. Graham, referring to Departmental matters, spoke of the Hudson Bay Railway, which, he declared, would be completed during his term of office. He emphasized the policy of the Government to provide the best possible facilities to transport the products of the country to the markets of the world.

E. N. McDonald and F. F. Pardee were the other speakers.

After finishing his speech, Sir Wilfrid received a note from a Metis, who complained that, while the Premier had complimented Canadians of British and French origin, he neglected those of Indian extraction. This led to a second speech, in which Sir Wilfrid pleaded for patience and consideration for the half-breed.

The Prime Minister officially opened the Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition and later took luncheon with the directors.

Pickled Statues.

The marbles in Westminster palace are treated to a bath once a year. They are first sponged off with water and then "pickled." This pickle consists of a solution of soft soap and sulphur, which removes the incrustations due to the smoke laden atmosphere and is said to do the marble no harm.

Chinese Newspapers.

The Chinese newspaper is generally printed on a roll, so that the purchaser may tear off and throw away that part which he has perused.

An English Borough.

In the days of "rotten boroughs" in England that of Gatton Park is said to have been the worst. It had only one qualified voter, and yet it returned two members of parliament. Of course with this right the property was very valuable, and in 1830 it was purchased by Lord Monson for $500,000. Two years later it was disfranchised.

Chinese Drinks.

The national drinks of China are samshu, a kind of arrack, and hocshu, which looks and tastes much like mum, a peculiar kind of beer made from wheat malt.

The Dictionary.

"Neither is a dictionary a bad book to read," says Emerson in his essay on books. "There is no cant in it, no excess of explanation, and it is full of suggestion, the raw material of possible poems and histories. Nothing is wanting but a little shuffling, sorting, ligature and cartilage."

Gutta Percha.

Gutta percha is a poor conductor of electricity, for which reason it is most successfully used for insulation of electric cables and other electric conducts. Friction causes negative electrification.

Birds of Paradise.

Probably no famous bird has a smaller habitat than the bird of paradise. No one knows why the varieties of this beautiful bird are confined to the island of New Guinea and the neighboring coasts of Australia. There are many other islands not far away where the conditions would seem to be equally favorable to their existence, but they are not found among them.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Sara Palmer has been elected president of the National Society of New England Women to succeed Mrs. Thomas Abernethy Fair.

The only woman in the United States engaged in making monuments, so far as known, is Mrs. A. H. Russell of Ashland, Ore., who is seventy years old. She can letter in seven different languages.

Elizabeth Hirsch has been elected vice president of the city council of Liegnitz, Germany. She is the first woman to occupy that office and was chosen because of her ability as a business woman.

The Writers.

Henry M. Alden has edited Harper's Magazine for forty years.

Aloysius Coll, newspaper man, magazine writer and poet, is secretary of the chamber of commerce of Douglas, Ariz.

Signor d'Annunzio, the famous Italian novelist and poet, has been exulting in the extent of his vocabulary. "Many people," he tells an interviewer, "find 800 words sufficient for all the purpose of writing and speaking. In my works you will find at least 15,000 different words."

What Rich Women Are Doing.

Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan is noted for her charities, and it is estimated that in the last few years she has given away over $2,000,000. Her single largest donation was for the building and refurnishing of the Cathedral of St. Peter at Richmond, Va., which cost her nearly $1,000,000.

Miss Helen Gould's gifts likewise have been widely distributed. She has spent more than $10,000,000 of the fortune left her by her father, Jay Gould. Miss Gould's personal interest in charity work has made her famous over the world.

The present Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt has recently given $1,000,000 to build model tenement houses for city dwellers afflicted with tuberculosis, and she is noted for many other smaller charities.

Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, works quietly, and it is hard to estimate in dollars and cents the amount of financial help given by this charming girl to others during the last few years, but it is conservatively estimated at more than $800,000.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont has given liberally to charity in the past, and her gifts exceed the $300,000 mark.

The Linen Suit.

As surely as summer comes round so surely appears the linen suit, and this season is no exception to the rule. But the quality and weave of the linens of this year are very different from those of other days. The old objection to this material—its creasing propensities—is done away with in the new linens, which are soft, pliable and in many instances of a weave resembling grenadine. The suit pictured is of the heavy variety in a charming shade of gray green. The suit is kept in one tone, and the trimming is of crochet banding dyed to match the linen.

Sashes.

Sashes are with us once more. The broad belts now so popular are continued in soft knots and long ends when the gown to be ornamented is of light, summery texture. Wide flowered ribbon in pompadour patterns, soft broken plaids of a dainty color on white, new satin brocade in soft self tones and the ever beautiful messalines are all sought by the foresighted summer girl.

The sash or girdle of ribbons or even of silk by the yard is as much a fashion for the child as for the grownup.

Because the native two wheeled ox carts of Porto Rico are destructive to the modern stone roads, the island legislature is considering a bill to prohibit their use on main highways after 1911.

UNITED COMMISSION

International Railway Board Is Now a Probability.

Chairman Knapp of the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission, and Hon. J. P. Mabee, Head of the Railway Commission of Canada, Will Confer With Regard to an Arrangement of the Sort.

Washington, July 15.—An international railway commission with supervisory authority over the railways of the United States and Canada probably will be the result of the action yesterday by the Government in the appointment of Chairman Martin A Knapp of the Interstate Commerce Commission, as the representative of the United States to confer with Hon. J. P. Mabee, chief of the Railway Commission of Canada, on the subject of the joint control of international traffic rates.

It is understood that meetings between Mr. Knapp and Mr. Mabee will take place in the United States or Canada, or both, during the summer, and, upon the completion of the conference, a report with recommendations will be made by the commissioners, either jointly to both Governments, or separately to their respective Governments.

The appointment of Judge Knapp and Mr. Mabee is the result of a considerable period of correspondence and diplomatic interchange between Canada and the United States, in which it was pointed out that the increasing traffic between the two countries would render full control over rates in the future more difficult unless some joint action was taken.

U. S. COMMISSIONER KNAPP.

It was realized that the acquisition of Canadian terminals by American roads, and of American roads and terminals by Canadian railways, presented ever-increasing difficulties. In the present circumstances, it is not possible to compel railway or express companies to establish joint through rates to and from points in the two countries. The reasonableness of the rates between points in the United States and points in Canada also is a question of serious importance to shippers. In order to determine any given question as to rates that may arise, it is necessary for the shipper to institute a proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Canadian Railway Commission, and even then the result is not satisfactory.

Out of this situation grew the suggestion that a joint international commission should be created, which should have supervisory authority over all interstate and international transportation lines, whether by rail or water, between the two countries. It has not been determined yet whether such a commission might better be created by concurrent legislation, or whether it might better be established through treaty arrangement between the two countries. At the conferences that subject will be discussed and very likely determined.

While no definite arrangements have yet been perfected for the conference, it is likely that Chairman Knapp and Mr. Mabee will meet in Ottawa some time in August. It is not improbable that a subsequent conference may be held in Washington. It will be the effort of the representatives of the two Governments to adjust the matter so as to make it possible to submit a report and recommendations before the beginning of the session of the American congress in December.

May Have Been Murdered.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 15.—Word was received here from Nipigon district that the body of Geo. Grant who was drowned there, was recovered and would be sent to the Soo for burial.

Two of the other persons drowned at the same time are said to have had $1,100 in gold in belts about their bodies.

There are rumors to the effect that the other two and Grant were robbed and drowned or shot.

Ottawa River Getting Low.

Ottawa, July 15.—Those interested in navigation here are beginning to feel anxious about the depth of the water in the Ottawa River. On June 13 it stood at 13 feet at the foot of the locks and now it has gone down to 9 feet 9 inches, a drop of three feet three inches within the last month.

St. Andrew's Lock Opengd.

Winnipeg, July 15.—"There is no such word as impossible for the west," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, at thee opening of St. Andrew's Lock, yesterday.

This is the first link in the Government's trans-prairie scheme of waterways, and when completed will cost about $1,500,000.

The lock, which has a lift of 21 feet, is a splendid specimen of concrete construction, 290 feet in length and 45 feet in width. It has raised the level of Red River at Winnipeg over five feet. The dam, 788 feet in width, is of camose tip type, and is the only one on this continent. There is another at Rose, France.

Hon. Mr. Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, officially declared the lock open to the free commerce of the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Sir Wilfrid spent a busy day. In the morning he visited the store of the T. Eaton Co., and lunched with the president. St. Andrew's occupied the afternoon, and a garden party, given by Sir Daniel McMillan, the Lieutenant-Governor, and Lady McMillan, filled the remainder of the day.

Germany Approached For Peace.

London, July 15.—During the debate on the naval expenditures in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Premier Asquith reiterated that it was the desire of the British Government to come to a friendly agreement with Germany, looking to the curtailment of armaments.

"I wish," said the Prime Minister, "that an arrangement could be reached with Germany for a reduction of the naval expenditure. This Government has approached the German Government on the subject, but the latter can do nothing, owing to the navy law on their statute books. That being so, we must make our program accordingly."

Mr. Asquith repudiated the suggestion that the British expenditure was in any sense hostile to Germany. He declared that the relations between the two countries were most cordial, and pointed out that by April, 1913 Great Britain would only have 25 Dreadnoughts to Germany's 21.

Carloads of provisions continue to pour through here en route to the afflicted town.

SEARCHING FOR DOCTOR

Scotland Yard Men Charge Hawley Crippen With Murder.

Discovery of a Body In the Cellar of His House In London, Eng., Leads to Belief That He Has Murdered His Wife, Belle Elmore, the Singer, and Has Fled With Another Woman—Once Practiced In Toronto.

London, July 15.—Scotland Yard authorities to-day are bending every effort to locate Dr. Hawley Crippen, an American dentist, who disappeared last Saturday. The body of a woman, supposed to have been that of his wife, who was formerly Belle Elmore, a noted singer, was found late Wednesday night buried in the cellar of their house, No. 30 Hilldrop Crescent, Islington, on the outskirts of London. The head had been crushed to a jelly and the body mutilated.

The first thing the police did yesterday was to cable to the police of American ports asking them to search incoming steamers for Crippen, who was described with the aliases of Peter Crippen and Franckel Crippen. The police believe that he sailed on Saturday. They state that he is accompanied by Ethel Clara Leneve, a French woman, whom he had recently introduced as his wife. This woman, the police state, is believed to be dressed in male attire. Before leaving Hilldrop, Crippen sent out for a boy's suit, and this, the police surmise is now being worn by his companion. Miss Leneve was the doctor's stenographer.

Despite the calling in of all the neighbors, the police have been unable positiveley to identify the decomposed body found in the cellar as that of Mrs. Crippen, though they are firmly of the belief that it was that of the famous singer. None of the neighbors have seen Mrs. Crippen since February, when her husband gave it out that she had gone to the continent for a visit. A short time afterwards there appeared a notice in the papers that Mrs. Crippen had died abroad. Then another woman, also known as Mrs. Crippen, appeared at the Hilldrop Crescent house. The dentist and the second "Mrs. Crippen" were seen in the house as late as last Saturday.

The belief is now held that Crippen's relations with women will reveal a startling career as a bluebeard according to the authorities.

New York, July 15.—Belle Elmore was a Brooklyn girl. The first news of her death was received here by Mrs. R. H. Mills, step-sister, now living in East Williamsburg, Queensborough, in a letter from London, dated April 7, and signed Dr. Crippen, which is nearly two months later than the death notice published in London papers.

Once Lived In Toronto.

Toronto, July 15.—Dr. Crippen lived in Toronto during 1896-98, having assisted in establishing the Dr. Munyon Medicine Agency here. T. H. Humble, advertising writer, remembers him. He was about 5 feet 5 inches in height, of light build, light complexion, light hair, mustache and neatly trimmed beard, said Mr. Humble. "He was fastidious in his dress and very pleasant in manner. He was married when he came here. Mrs. Crippen was an attractive woman, dashing and frivolous in manner. She was fond of display in dress, and was always decked in diamonds and other jewels. She was a woman who would attract attention anywhere. Dr. Crippen was very jealous of her."

Charged With a Serious Offence.

Kingston, July 15.—Charles Kinkade, aged 22, of Kennebec Township, has been arrested, charged with committing an offence on a 14-year-old girl, who later gave birth to a child.

Helen, the eight-year-old daughter of Robert D. Sutherland, was found dead in bed, and a post-mortem showed that the child suffered from acute infantile paralysis, a very rare disease.

George Stewart, aged 12, fell from a tree and is in a critical condition.

Million-Dollar Shipyard.

Owen Sound, July 15.—The Town Council last night passed a bylaw, to be submitted to the ratepayers, to grant $50,000 bonus and to take a similar amount in stock in a shipbuilding and drydock company being promoted by English capitalists. The proposition is to establish a million-dollar plant at this port.

Mounted Police Rebellious.

Calgary, July 15.—Ten local constables of the Northwest Mounted Police were sent by Capt. Deane to two months in guardroom for rebellious conduct. It is said they went on a spree to the red light district. The men are recruits who recently enlisted in Toronto.

Affairs of St. Stephen's Bank.

St. John, N.B., July 15.—Inspectors appointed by creditors of J. T. Whitlock, late cashier of St. Stephen's Bank, have preferred the following statement of his affairs with the bank: Notes made by him for his own benefit, $60,590.56; other notes made by him as collateral, $19,699.50; joint notes in which his name is one of many, for money largely used by others, $63,387.90; notes on which he is one of many endorses, $200,766.77.

Total liability direct, indirect, $344,-444.73.

Three notes are held by various persons and banks and are secured by collaterals which at time were marketable. A large amount of the discounts with the St. Stephen's Bank will be paid by other endorsers or from collateral security. The total assets, consisting of stock, bonds and real estate have a par value of $391,-146.20.

End to Arbitration.

London, July 15.—At The Hague conference, Mr. Ewart, continuing on behalf of Canada, contended that there was no argument to show there had been British laxity in enforcing its view of the treaty, for if the tribunal took that as an argument and gave effect to it there must forever be an end to international arbitration, or there must be an end to international endeavors among nations to get along with one another in the best possible fashion.

In Canada they knew that Canada was part of the Empire, they were prepared to take bad with good, and sometimes suffer for the benefit of the Empire. Locally there might be some irritation, but better men had larger views of the interests of the Empire as a whole, and they could not in widespread empire help these difficulties arising.

Official Suspended.

Ottawa, July 15.—An unintentional injustice was done an immigration official at Windsor in reporting the recent incident in which W. J. Taylor of Woodstock was concerned, when he was confused with the official who had caused the trouble. It was not Mr. Gilboit, but Arcene Dufour who has been suspended for a month and will be given duties that will remove him somewhat from contact with the public. His previous record was good.

Near Beer Intoxicating.

St. Catharines, July 15.—Yesterday Magistrate Campbell gave judgment in a case in which the question was whether "Proxy," in other words, the near or pale beer now being manufactured by the breweries for sale in local option municipalities and unlicensed hotels, is intoxicating or not.

The magistrate held that "Proxy" is intoxicating, seeing the man was drunk, and fined the hotelkeeper $100.

Another Sensation Punctured.

London, July 15.—Startling rumors of great loss of life, following a collision between steamers on the Dneiper River, reached here yesterday from Odessa, Russia. Enquiry develops that the reports are exaggerated versions of last Saturday's accident, when a boiler exploded on the steamer Lovkij. At that time three persons were killed and subsequently fourteen others died from injuries.

Rochester, N.Y., July 15.—A murder took place early yesterday morning when the throat of a woman named Nicolino Fusio, aged 25 years, was slashed by a man who climbed through the window of her room at 124 Magne street. After the killing, the murderer set fire to the house.

THE MAN WITH A HOE.

During the past two or three weeks the city authorities have had men on certain streets clearing and weeding the ditches, to the great improvement in the appearance of the same and adjacent properties. Since some of this work has been done the weeds have commenced to grow again. For various reasons it is not to be expected, for the present at least, that the city can go on with this work. Certainly not in time to meet the influx of visitors in attendance at the Masonic Convention and Old Boys' Reunion. It is now up to the man with the hoe. A very few minutes work, in some cases, will suffice and greatly improve the appearance of your property and your street. Don't expect the city authorities to do everything. Stand across the street and look at your house and lawn and see what a blot this fringe of weeds makes in front of your home. Do it now—to-night. In a day or so it will be too late. Whether it is the duty of city or not to clean out these weeds, in the judgment of our coming guests, you will be found guilty of neglect. Get busy, you man with the hoe.

The man was excited as he confronted the editor of the London Times. "You put me in the 'Deaths' yesterday," he managed to jerk out. What do you mean?"

"It must retract this time. Why sir, it means great financial loss to me to be reported as dead when I'm not."

Spent a Pleasant Afternoon.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., spent a most delightful afternoon yesterday at the home of Mrs. C. B. Scantlebury. After a short business meeting the tables were spread upon the lawn, and forty sat down around the festive board to enjoy the good things. So loath were the ladies to leave their genial hostess and beautiful surroundings that Mr. Aselstine, though exceptionally patient and good natured, was forced to sound the gong several times.

Wanted at Toronto.

Acting on advice from Toronto, the police last night arrested here a party named Frederick Barrett, who is wanted in the Queen City on a charge of theft. Barrett is a young man 21 years of age and had been here for a few days taking pictures. It is alleged that he stole a sum of money. The Toronto police were notified of the arrest.

STILL GROWING

Every year the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition show changes and improvements. This year a splendid new square at the entrance new Women's Rest Rooms and a new Poultry Building costing $36,000 are the most marked innovations.

RAIN

Rain is principally composed of water, but it should not be confused with mining stock.

Rain always come on Sunday afternoons and washdays.

Washday may be changed to any day in the week, systematically or indiscriminately, but the rain will come.

Sunday afternoon, however, cannot be changed to any other afternoon. The rain will hold off until you are ready to go driving and then the word will be passed along the mysterious currents of the air, and a double order of cirrus and cumulus will be hurried in from the west.

Also, in the morning, when you leave home and carry your umbrella and raincoat, the rain will go away and sulk. But if you take heart of the fair sky, and leave the umbrella and other trimmings, then the rain will wait until you leave the office and then get you. Incidentally, it will tuck a few grip and rheumatism germs into your system.

Rain is good for crops, but why it takes you for a crop is hard to understand.

Rain never brought fame to anyone except Noah. Probably on the day the flood began he watched the last picnic party drive out of town in a bus, shouting sarcastic thingsg at him through the dust.

There are several varieties of rain but the one most popular with the weather bureau is called "Probably."

Lady Sholto Douglass Tries Suicide by Train and Tub

THROWS HERSELF BEFORE EXPRESS AND, RESCUED, ATTEMPTS TO DROWN IN BATH TUB.

Spokane, Wash. — Lady Loretta Sholto Douglas, wife of a son of the Marquis of Queensberry, attempted to kill herself for the second time within two days by throwing herself in front of a train here to-day, but was taken off the tracks just as the Northern Pacific Limited dashed by at great speed. She has been placed in the care of a matron at the City Hall, where she had to be locked up to prevent her from drowning herself in a bath tub. Lad Sholto Douglas has been separated from her youngest son, Robert, three weeks, he having been taken by his father, Lord Sholto Douglas, who is penniless, to Great Northern, in British Columbia.

Lady Sholto Douglas was Loretta Addis, a chorus girl in Portland, Oregon, when the young British peer married her. He has had a spectacular career in the Northwest, operating a big cattle ranch and a saloon. His wife has recently been working in a restaurant as a cook.

Lord Sholto Douglas left three weeks ago to work on a surveying crew for the Great Northern in British Columbia, taking with him their nine-year-old son Robert. An older son is in England, being cared for by the Marquis of Queensberry.

Lord Sholto is a brother of the present Marquis of Queensbury, and cousin of the Marquis who gained fame through the code of pugilistic rules.

Lord Sholto married Miss Margaret Mooney, known on the variety stage as Loretta Addis.

THE MAN WITH A HOE.

During the past two or three weeks the city authorities have had men on certain streets clearing and weeding the ditches, to the great improvement in the appearance of the same and adjacent properties. Since some of this work has been done the weeds have commenced to grow again. For various reasons it is not to be expected, for the present at least, that the city can go on with this work. Certainly not in time to meet the influx of visitors in attendance at the Masonic Convention and Old Boys' Reunion. It is now up to the man with the hoe. A very few minutes work, in some cases, will suffice and greatly improve the appearance of your property and your street. Don't expect the city authorities to do everything. Stand across the street and look at your house and lawn and see what a blot this fringe of weeds makes in front of your home. Do it now—to-night. In a day or so it will be too late. Whether it is the duty of city or not to clean out these weeds, in the judgment of our coming guests, you will be found guilty of neglect. Get busy, you man with the hoe.

An Early Morning Marriage.

At 7.30 on Wednesday morning Miss Ethel Reed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Reed, of this City, was married to Mr. Walter Gerow, who resides in Missouri. Rev. B. Greatrix performed the ceremony. Mr. Gerow, of Brighton, a cousin of the groom, did honors for him. The decorations at the home were palms and ferns. After the wedding about twenty guests partook of the breakfast. The bride received many beautiful and costly gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Gerow left for a trip eastward, after which they will proceed to Missouri, where they will reside.
